Hidden Tax Proposals Irk Bennett

Proposals for the provinces to enter the field of indirect taxation would lead to "a tax jungle," Premier Bennett said Friday.

Returning from the federal-provincial conference, he said the result of provinces having some share of the right to levy indirect taxes would be "chaos of taxation, a jungle, with each level of government trying to raid the field.

"We don't see the advantages of indirect taxation. It is a pyramiding tax and governments don't get it all. Governments get only half the additional price. The other half would go to profits."

When a reporter asked if British Columbia is rejecting the suggested tax change, he replied that B.C. is rejecting nothing at this stage.

"B.C. is not taking its bat home," he said. "We were down there just full of goodwill and we have come away full of goodwill."

Bennett said no final decisions were reached at the conference and all proposals are being given equal study by committees. The committees would report to another federal-provincial gathering, probably in December.

"There will have to be many, many more meetings before anything is finalized," he said.

EXCLUSIVE USE

The premier has maintained the provinces should have exclusive use of the direct tax fields of personal and corporate income and estate taxes except to the extent necessary to finance a basic annual income.

The federal government, at present, has power to levy any form of tax. The provinces are confined to direct taxes.

The main effect, in practice, is that provinces have to charge their sales tax at the retail level, where it is visible and politically unpopular. Ottawa levies its sales tax indirectly, at the manufacturer's level, where it is largely invisible.

The federal government now has offered in principle to admit the provinces to the indirect tax field so that both levels of government are equal in access to tax resources. Provinces, other than B.C., have voiced pleasure at this.

Bennett was unable to claim any support for his proposal for a guaranteed income for all Canadians.

But, he told a press conference, he is not downhearted and that other provinces and Ottawa will eventually swing behind the idea as they have on other suggestions.

PIERRE'S OTHER SIDE REVEALED BY WESTELL

A year ago, at the height of the federal election campaign, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau showed his campaign force a side of his personality totally unfamiliar to the public.

In a private display of temperament at the height of the campaign, the prime minister attempted to override the schedule he was to be following — a move the few men who were witness to it felt could have jeopardized the entire election.

Soviet Borders Said Negotiable

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today offered to negotiate border adjustments with China in the next few months.

The offer was contained in a note rejecting specific Chinese claims to Soviet territory. It comes during a period of growing animosity between the two countries concerning their mutual border.

The lengthy note, containing a historical review of Russia-Chinese border agreements, was delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow Friday. It was published today by the Soviet Communist party newspaper and distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass.

The Soviet Union proposed the two countries meet in Moscow "within the next two to three months."

The note is the latest step in an exchange that began March 29 with a Soviet proposal for border talks.

Earlier that month the long smouldering Soviet-Chinese conflict broke out in an open fight along the Ussuri River.

In a hurry to stop further outbreaks, the Soviet Union originally proposed that negotiations start April 15. However, China waited until May 24 to reply that it was willing to hold talks.

SCENE OF INCIDENTS

The 4,500-mile Chinese border has been the scene of thousands of incidents and conflicts in recent years. Most of them went unnoticed until two bloody clashes on the Far Eastern Ussuri River border last March 2 and again on March 14-15.

De Wolf Heads B.C. Tories

VANCOUVER (CP)—Economist John de Wolf today won a narrow six-vote victory over lawyer Charles Maclean for the leadership of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative party.

De Wolf, 38, got 131 votes to Maclean's 125 for victory on the second ballot. Public relations man Don Paterson, 35, finished third with 24 votes on the first ballot and was dropped.

Conservative sources said De Wolf's victory represents a triumph for the party's old guard.

Maclean, 36, had called for sweeping changes in party organization and policy.

Fishing Union Asks Pay Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union Friday offered to resume negotiations for a new contract after a strike vote among workers in the fresh fish and cold storage section of the British Columbia fishing industry indicated 81 per cent were in favor of a walkout.

The vote was 746 to 170 for a strike. There are just over 1,000 workers in the section.

The vote was called after the union rejected an offer by the employers of a two-year contract with a 56 per cent hourly raise for tradesmen, who now average $3.44 an hour, 28 to 34 cents for male general laborers, who now get $2.39 to $3.06, and 16 cents for female workers now receiving $1.97 to $2.34.

The union wants $1 an hour for tradesmen and 75 cents for general laborers in a one-year pact.

Meanwhile, the first bargaining session since the oil workers' strike started May 21 has been tentatively set for 2 p.m. Monday at a secret location.

SHELL MEETS UNION

The meeting will be between representatives of Shell and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union.

Larry Korchinski, manager of Shell's suburban Burnaby refinery, sent a telegram to the union Friday saying the Monday date proposed by the union is suitable.

The union members went into the initial talks proposed a $1 an hour increase in wages over two years and fringe benefit improvements.

GUNDERSON

Gunderson Vague On Trust Affiliation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Einar Gunderson, former British Columbia finance minister, was called Friday to add to testimony with which the Crown hopes to secure the extradition of A. G. Duncan Crux, former president of Commonwealth Trust.

Mr. Gunderson took the stand on the fifth day of an ex-parte hearing in magistrate's court and testified concerning his membership on an advisory board serving two mutual funds within the Commonwealth group.

Other members of the advisory board were named as the late John Villiers Fisher, former deputy finance minister of B.C., and the late professor Lesley Wong of the University of B.C.'s department of economics.

The court is taking evidence which will be relayed to Nassau in the Bahamas where Crux is at present awaiting an extradition hearing in connection with 24 theft and fraud charges involving about $1,000,000.

Mr. Gunderson's evidence related to a charge against Crux that between Jan. 1, 1962 and July 31, 1968 he defrauded shareholders of two Commonwealth mutual funds by drawing on their assets to pay certain advisory board fees.

"Apparently I was on the advisory board," Mr. Gunderson told the court.

Mr. Gunderson said he had never met as a member of the advisory board although "there could have been a meeting at the beginning."

Asked whether he performed any services for the two funds in an advisory capacity, Mr. Gunderson said: "At the beginning I may have had a call but there were no services rendered."

Asked whether he had ever received any remuneration as an advisory board member, Mr. Gunderson said: "I wasn't aware of it but I remember there was a payment of $500 which came to me in 1964 and which I turned over to the firm."

He didn't elaborate.

'This Is Just Like A Bit of England!'

By SUSAN RILEY

Looking like a six-layered wedding cake the luxury liner Princess Italia arrived at Ogden Point this morning.

She was filled to the funnel with 350 American tourists who got the full hard-sell treatment from costumed clowns, folk singers and dignitaries on the dock. (See also Page 23).

Passengers with cameras dangling like permanent fixtures peered over deck rails or peeked out the dining room windows to watch a button-bedecked Cockney band sing "I've Got a Lovely Bunch of Coconuts."

Those in danger of sleeping through the 8 a.m. show were roused by the boom of the Esquimalt Thunderbird Girls' Drum Corps.

Mayor Hugh Stephen's cordial welcome speech delivered in a clipped Etonian accent left passengers applauding and exclaiming "this is just like a little bit of old England."

When the half-hour ceremony ended the 200 Victorians who had gathered to see the outside of the monstrous ship drifted back to breakfast or bed but the six-storey floating hotel suddenly came alive.

Still-sleepy tourists finished breakfast in the red-carpeted linen-service restaurant which seats 275.

Some lingered in one of the ship's four lounges or in a large coffee shop on the top deck. Others sat in deck chairs — they really have deck chairs on luxury liners — around the mosaic-tiled swimming pool.

The nightclub, dimly-lit even during the day, was empty. So was the movie theatre which seats about 150 and is on the lower deck.

A few sat smoking in a huge grand salon which is much like the ballroom in any large,

West Discontent 'Growing'

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Western alienation is a term which is bandied about in political circles with increasing frequency and bitterness.

At least one federal cabinet minister believes that popular interpretations of the term sidestep the basic and deep-rooted economic causes of the region's discontent which he is setting out to document with factual research.

Winnipeg's James Richardson, now minister of supply and services in the Trudeau cabinet, although not an alarmist, suggests that the West cannot wait indefinitely before the scope for acceptable solutions becomes more narrow and inflexible.

"Eventually there must be a laying down of conditions under which the West can remain in Confederation," Mr. Richardson said.

He anticipates this would involve a greater control of tariff policies and corporate structure and "we must have an examination of the expenditures by the federal government within its own institutional structure."

Mr. Richardson urges the realization that the four western provinces would be able to prosper on their own.

"The West's survival as a separate entity is unquestionable," he said. "Its income would be the same and it would be able to buy what it needs at world prices rather than protected Canadian prices."

He is currently assembling detailed figures on the location and expenditures of Canada's large corporations and will follow up with a similar examination of government departments.

So far his discoveries are depressing in a Western context.

ONE IN WEST

Starting with 20 Canadian corporations with the largest sales and assets Mr. Richardson has found only one head office in Western Canada. This is MacMillan Bloedel in Vancouver.

The other 19 are located in Ontario and Quebec, mainly Toronto and Montreal.

A large head office makes a substantial outlay for auditors, lawyers, architects, engineers, management consultants and public relations firms, he pointed out.

In turn, all of these professional services require their

Pair Warned Of Charges

SUBIC BAY, Philippines (AP) — Two junior lieutenants in charge of the United States destroyer Frank E. Evans the morning she was cut in two by the Australian carrier Melbourne were told today they are suspected of negligence.

Lieut. Ronald C. Ramsey, 24, Long Beach, Calif., and Lieut. James R. Hopson, 28, Kansas City, Kan., requested and received legal counsel though they were advised by the joint U.S.-Australian board investigating the collision that they have not been charged.

Lieut. Ramsey was in charge and Lieut. Hopson was steering until a few moments before the collision last week in which 74 American sailors perished.

Ramsey's lawyer, Lieut. Frederick F. Tilton of the navy's judge advocate general's staff, asked for a recess until Wednesday for a valuation of the testimony to date. The board granted a continuance until Monday and said he could ask for further time then, if needed.

Hopson then took the stand and gave testimony sharply at odds with that given earlier by the Melbourne's skipper, Capt. John P. Stevenson.

When Ramsey sat down before the board for the first time, the legal counsel told him: "You are suspected of having committed the offence of neglect hazarding a vessel of the armed forces."

It was the first such legal admonition at the hearing.

The board was called to determine the cause of the collision and has no punitive powers. It said Ramsey has the right to refuse to answer questions, to acquire a lawyer and to terminate his testimony at anytime.

When Ramsey's lawyer asked for a recess he also requested the right to review previous testimony by witnesses before the board.

The board said it had no authority to grant such a request.

In testimony by the Melbourne skipper earlier in the day, Stevenson said the Evans would have avoided a collision by taking "just one" of several measures that he had provided.

That was the first time that responsibility for the collision was charged publicly against the Evans.

Elsewhere on the labor scene:

—Part-time workers in the post office have voted 1,990 to 185 in favor of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers as their bargaining agent.

The vote rejected a bid by the Public Service Alliance of Canada.

TALKS CONTINUE

—Negotiations will continue next week in an attempt to avert a strike by bus drivers and other employees at Pacific Stage Lines.

The union is seeking a 15 per cent across-the-board pay increase and fringe benefit improvements. The present rate is $3.32 an hour.

—The meatcutters' local of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers' Union, locked out by supermarkets in the Lower Mainland, have accused Safeway supervisors of trying to intimidate union members who have found work in independent stores.

George Johnston, the local's secretary - manager, Friday led a group of picketers outside the Safeway offices in Vancouver protesting the alleged activity of the supervisors.

—A partial settlement has been reached in a three - week old strike in the heavy equipment assembly industry in British Columbia.

About 100 out of 250 men have accepted a contract providing an increase of 70 cents an hour over two years, raising the rate of welders, mechanics and body-men-painters to $4.60 an hour from next May 1. Seven shops are involved.

CHAIRMAN NAMED

—Lawyer Roy A. Gallagher, of Winnipeg, will be chairman of a conciliation board that will study the contract dispute between the B.C. longshoremen and maritime employers.

The dispute was sent to a board when direct negotiations and a mediation attempt by conciliation officer Don Tysoe failed.

expensive hotel. There are two smaller dance floors on different levels in the ship. They are surrounded by large carpeted areas, scattered with plush velvet-covered chairs.

The ships. badminton court was empty and hasn't been used much since the ship left Alaska. Brisk, chilly winds drove passengers into game rooms or lounges. The bridge room, done in red carpet and black leather, accommodates about 25.

The ship is on a 14-day tour from San Francisco to Alaska and back by way of Vancouver, Ketchican, Skagway Juneau, Prince Rupert and Victoria. She departs at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Those who become bored with the bookshop, organized games, nightly dances or three cocktail lounges can always languish in comfort in first class cabins with private TV and piped in soul-music.

All this for between $495 and $1,395.

The Italia will make six more stops in Victoria during the summer as a regular San Francisco-Alaska service begins. It's the first luxury liner to travel these waters on a regular basis since the gold-rush days.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The extended period of warm, dry, sunny weather that most of B.C. has enjoyed will continue over the weekend. Extensive low cloud and patches of fog will remain along the outer coast, however. Yesterday was the 11th day in a row that the temperature reached 90 or better at Lytton.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Ionic activity — changes in atmospheric electricity — that comes with changes in the weather is believed to affect both births and deaths.

Biometeorologists have researched the effects of electricity in the air and disscovered that ionic changes send more mothers all of a sudden to maternity wards.

Rises of as much as 16 per cent to 18 per cent in the number of births take place when the atmospheric electricity changes. That doesn't mean, of course, that the phenomenon is the cause of an increase in the number of births. What it means is that the babies arrive some days sooner than expected.

The number of deaths believed to be due to ionic activity has been found to go up as much as 20 per cent. Not that the electricity in the air causes healthy people to die, but some who are near death from terminal illness die perhaps a day or two sooner than they normally would.

SCOTT
. . . people laugh at new ideas

Intellectual Olympics For Rebels?

LONDON—Is this an answer to student revolt? A 71-year-old "lighthouse philosopher" from Victoria, B.C., who has arrived in London says that students need an Inetllectual Olympic Games to satisfy their frustrations.

During his two-week visit Bill Scott has been seeing university, faculty and students in an effort to get support for his project. This week, he is going on to Paris and Vienna.

"In the Olympic games," he says, "international youth epitomizes the purest form of physical culture and civilized nationalism. Why can't we have something similar in the intellectual and mental field?"

A computer, he adds, could act as an impartial judge. The intellectual Olympiad would be held every four years.

Scott introduces himself as an Anglo - Chinese - Canadian. He left England in 1923 to work for 22 years in China as a lighthouse engineer. Since then, he has lived in Canada.

He admires Mao Tse-tung and has been urging young Canadians to imitate the red guards by forming a "Maple Leaf Guard" to assume control over their educational destiny.

He isn't deterred by the raised eyebrows which tend to greet his intellectual Olympics: "Throughout history, people have laughed at men who came up with new ideas."

'No Doubts' On Smoking Hazard

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto cancer specialist says he is concerned about recent news reports implying there is still doubt cigarette smoking causes cancer.

"For goodness sake let's put our foot down—there is no doubt," Dr. Norman C. Delarue, senior consultant on lung and breast cancer to the Ontario Cancer Institute, said here.

He told the Canadian Medical Association that doctors must ensure the public is not misled by opinions expressed by a tobacco industry representative last week to the Commons committee on health, welfare and social disease.

own accommodation and added personnel.

"The whole structure of large business centres like Toronto and Montreal is supported by head office expenditures for these services, and yet the original earnings of many companies comes from other parts of Canada, and particularly the West," Mr. Richardson said.

In the case of banks, there are 1700 branches in the four western provinces but only one head office — the fledgling Bank of British Columbia located in Vancouver.

"The earnings of these 1700 branches help to sustain the accountants, the lawyers and the architects who cluster around the head offices in Eastern Canada," the minister noted.

And many of the persons who staff head office complexes are trained in the universities of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, he said.

He is convinced that a department - by-department survey of government will also show an overwhelming tendency to centralize in the East when developments could easily be channelled to other regions.

TARIFF STRUCTURE

In the case of political representation itself, he admits that the "sheer weight of numbers" elected in Eastern Canada and reflected in the cabinet ensures strong consideration for Eastern concerns.

Eastern manufacturing concerns are to quite a large degree protected by tariffs, and they sell into Western Canada at prices clearly above world prices, Mr. Richardson said.

Inquest Ordered

DUNCAN — A coroner's inquest has been ordered into the death Thursday of Marymae Stanley, 46, who fell while cleaning windows on the second storey of her Gibbons Road home.

No date was set by coroner Thomas Lines.

The wife of Dr. Floyd Stanley, a Duncan physician, she was active in community affairs including Cowichan Golf and Country Club, Maple Bay Yacht Club, Rotary Anns and the Junior Hospital WA.

She is also survived by three sons: Maurice, David and James, all at home; two daughters: Mrs. Lynn Hull, Fairbridge, and Carol Ann, at home; her mother, Mrs. Grace Smith of Duncan, and four sisters and a brother.

Funeral services will be Monday at 2 p.m. at St. John's Anglican Church, with burial at Cedar Valley Memorial Gardens.

School Running Despite Decree

No word of the Aug. 1 deadline to improve sanitary conditions has reached Saturna Island free school.

School organizer Tom Durrie said today, "We've had no word from the board at all.

"We're just continuing to operate until we hear differently. None of us have really thought about the possibility that we might have to close down."

Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health on Tuesday released a letter addressed to the free school listing items that must be remedied if the school is to remain open.

Included in the list were installation of an operative sewage system and repair of broken windows.

BOARD REFUSED

"We had our septic system ready for use in October," said Durrie. "But the health board refused to allow us to use the Saturna Island gravel for the system."

He explained that the staff and students have been screening gravel by hand to use in setting up the sewage system and planned since fall to complete the time-consuming task in the summer when there is enough time.

Durrie denied charges by the health board that many windows in the school are broken and covered with cardboard.

"This simply isn't true. We replaced two windows upstairs with plywood because they were constantly being shoved against and we felt it would be safer."

Durrie mentioned other projects such as renovation of the kitchen that the school had already planned to undertake this summer before the intervention of the health board.

In regards to the ultimatum he said: "Certain aspects of this question are under consideration by the attorney-general."

BLUE LAW OPPOSITION STARTS

A Baptist minister said today he will oppose the campaign to have Sunday movies and commercial sport in Victoria.

"We are unanimously opposed to any commercialization of Sunday," said Rev. John Moore, Scottish-born pastor of Central Baptist church.

"We want to preserve Sunday as a day of worship — a day of relaxation for mind and body. Healthy outdoor exercise on a Sunday is a good thing; commercial sport is an evil."

Moore was commenting on a request by the Motion Picture Theatre Association of British Columbia that Victoria city council hold a Sunday sports referendum in December.

DECEMBER VOTE

Mayor Hugh Stepehen indicated Sunday entertainment will be put to the people in the December civic elections.

"If the people want Sunday sport and Sunday movies, they should have them," said Martin Cave, manager of the Royal Theatre.

"In Vancouver they've had Sunday movies for some time while many churches have dropped their Sunday evening services."

Jack Morgan, manager of the Memorial Arena, said Sunday entertainment is on the way "whether we like it or not."

"It's unfair that the man who can afford to join a golf club can have his sport on Sundays while the poor man is denied the pleasure of watching a game or going to a theatre."

IOCO (CP) — Vandalism and public misuse of facilities at Sasamat Lake Park is causing its closure by the Ioco and District Recreation Commission. FLASHBACK: Wilfulness Almost Cost Election

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Westell

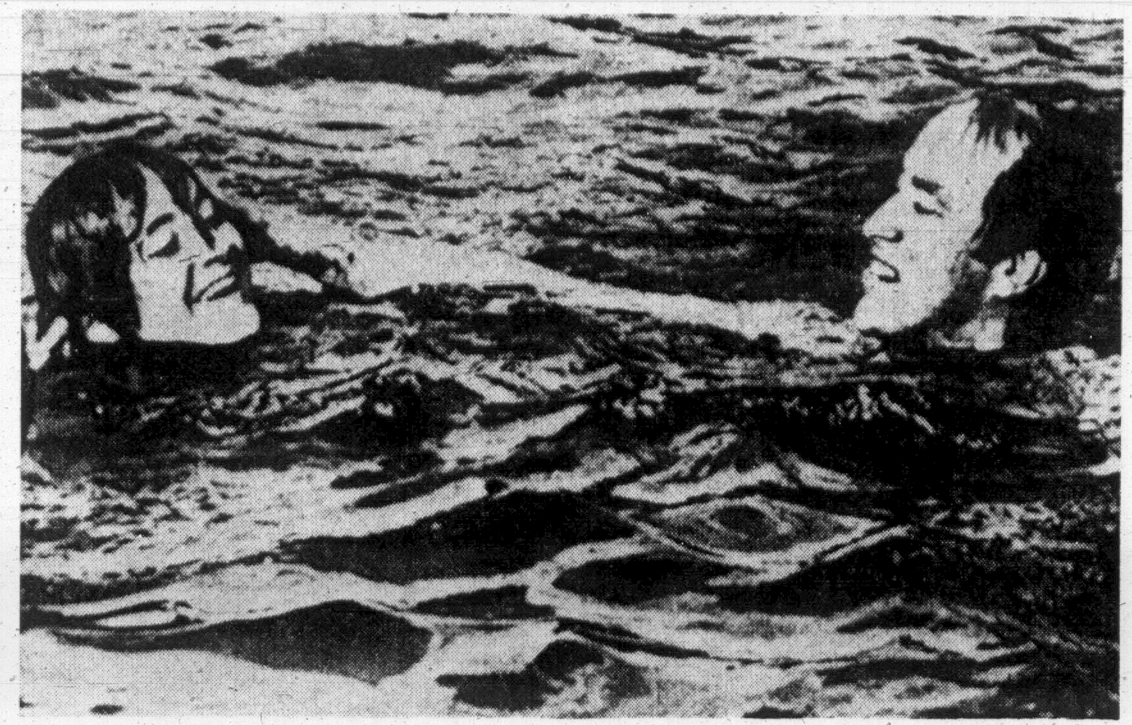
Flashback one year, to the climatic closing stages of the general election campaign — and the day when Pierre Elliott Trudeau almost blew away the victory within his grasp.

This is a footnote to history, about a decision that changed the course of national events — one of those might-have-been situations which are fascinating speculation and still important for the light they throw on the actors.

The story goes back to this weekend a year ago, to find Trudeau exhausted by weeks on the campaign trail, wilfully refusing to continue with the demanding election schedule, and driven on to victory only by a violent argument in a parked car at 3 a.m. as his RCMP guard hovered nervously nearby, wondering whether to intervene.

The few people who were personally involved in the crisis are still reluctant to talk for publication.

The several Liberal insiders who know parts of the story and have heard gossip about the rest are uncertain about details, after a year, or have allowed memory to color and dramatize some of the incidents.



TRUDEAU WENT SWIMMING and later in the weekend indulged in a bit of personal, private temperamentality which if it had not been overcome by his campaign workers could have cost him crucial votes and even the election, according to columnist Anthony Westell. (CP Photo).

Enormous Effort

But the outline of events and of critical decisions are clear and beyond dispute.

To set the stage for the reconstruction of the story, it is necessary to go back 12 months and to remember that Trudeau's campaign was moving out of the phase of relaxed, neighborhood meetings into a series of mass rallies.

The Liberal strategists had carefully planned the campaign to peak in the 10 days before voting on June 25.

Trudeau's style on the hustings appeared relaxed, hands-in-the-pockets and folksy, but in fact he was putting enormous personal effort into every puclic appearance.

As a relatively inexperienced politician, he lacked the training and the stamina to campaign 14 hours a day, seven days a week. He needed periods of retreat into privacy to recharge his batteries.

Trudeau also recognized his personal limitations, and he was being absolutely honest — although few people thought so at the time — when he said that it was not the end of the world to him to win the election and that he wasn't going to kill himself with effort in trying to prove he was more energetic and enthusiastic then he really was.

Arranged Swim

As the campaign wore on, Trudeau had become increasingly irritated by the local liberal organizers who kept sneaking extra events into his schedule. The tireder he became, the more he vented his temper on his personal staff, demanding that they ease the load on his stamina.

The job of finding a compromise between the prime minister's personal limits and the political requirements fell mainly on Bill Lee, who travelled with Trudeau as his chief of staff, and senator John Nichol, campaign chairman back at Liberal HQ in Ottawa.

By Friday, June 14, Trudeau was exhausted and his temper was running ragged, as he campaigned through Oakville and Burlington, Ont., heading for a monster rally that night at Hamilton.

To try to ease his tensions, Lee arranged for a liberal worker in Oakville to buy a pair of swimming trunks for the PM, so that Trudeau could relax in the hotel pool at noon—and the enormous spread of publicity that resulted from his display of diving was only an incidental benefit.

The campaign schedule called for Trudeau to make the long flight from Ottawa to the west coast on Sunday June 16, and then to work back east, building to a crescendo in Toronto, Winnipeg and Montreal before election day.

Now Trudeau announced flatly to Lee and Davey that he would not fly to Vancouver on the Sunday. He inisted that he must have time to rest and recuperate, and that he would spend Sunday at his official summer home on Harrington Lake, in the Gatineau hills outside Ottawa.

Trudeau Adamant

Davey conveyed the PM's decision to Nichol in Ottawa, who was appalled at the prospect of disrupting the schedule, losing momentum and gravely offending British Columbia, where the liberals were counting heavily on picking up seats.

Nichol phoned Lee to remonstrate, but merely had the decision confirmed. When he demanded to speak to Trudeau personally, he could not get through until a bright spark at Liberal HQ thought of asking the RCMP to arrange a hook-up over their security communications networks.

According to some accounts, in fact, Trudeau by that time had hardened his heart to the point of telling people in his entourage that he wasn't going west at all the following week, and would rest in Ottawa until he could pick up his schedule again in Toronto on Wednesday, June 19.

He was particularly angry at the Liberal organizers in Winnipeg whom he blamed for slipping extra events into his schedule on a previous visit, and he insisted that he was not going back for the Red River parade, where 150,000 people were expected.

But the immediate problem was the visit to the west coast, and Nichol made a top secret phone call to the British Columbia campaign chairman, Vancouver lawyer George Van Roggen, alerting him to the emergency that Trudeau might not fly west as planned.

Met Plane

The Liberal comapaign caught fire that Friday night in Hamilton, when 16,000 people turned out to see Trudeau. The following night, Saturday, Trudeau had another enthusiastic mass rally in Quebec City.

When is DC-9 jetliner brought him back into Ottawa about midnight that Saturday, Nichol was at the airport with his small private car.

He drove the prime minister to his official home at 24 Sussex Drive, arguing his case that Trudeau should put his own comfort and convenience to one side and honor his obligation to the thousands of Liberal workers supporting him by sticking to the schdeule.

Trudeau again angrily refused, standing on his rights as prime minister, insisting that the part and the country had to take him or leave him as he was — a man who needs periods of privacy and relaxation and who cannot go for days on end with the minimum of sleep and maximum of public exposure.

He apparently told Nichol, as he has told others since, that if he could not be at his best in meeting the people, he owed it to them and to himself to cancel the engagement.

His best offer was to take the Sunday off and to fly west on the Monday.

Strong Words

He put the case in the strongest terms that the Liberal strategy was keyed to winning seats in British Columbia, and to using the west coast as the base for a final drive back toward the east.

Both Trudeau and Nichol, according to some accounts, were using increasingly rough language, and Nichol is said to have sworn at the prime minister in his exasperation. But whatever the compulsion, Trudeau suddenly surrendered at about 3 a.m. and agreed to stick to the campaign schedule.

He summoned reserves of strength and flew to Vancouver on Sunday to be mobbed by about 10,000 people in Chinatown that night.

The headline in the normally conservative Vancouver Province next morning: City Goes Wild Over Trudeau. And he was off and running into the final, frenetic week of the campaign.

Airport Jammed

He helicoptered that morning into Burnaby-Seymour for a rally that defeated NDP Leader T. C. Douglas in the riding, went on to Fort Langley in the Fraser Valley to make the finest of his non-partisan campaign addresses, and dropped down by helicopter that night into an adoring crowd of 10,000 on a hillside in Victoria.

When his campaign jet took him into Calgary at 11 p.m., thousands of people were jamming the airport, swinging to the beat of go-go music and gyrating in the spotlights just off the tarmac.

That Monday, June 17, was Trudeau's most successful day on the campaign trail, and was the launching pad for the triumphant tour across the country, to talk to 40,000 people in front of the city hall, to the Winnipeg parade and into Montreal for the St. Jean Baptiste parade.

And that West Coast Monday was the day Trudeau wanted to cancel.

Had he had his way, he would certainly not have gained as many seats as he did in British Columbia, and his hesitation in the last stages of the campaign might well have confirmed many Canadians in their nagging doubt that Trudeau was a dilettante and not really serious about politics.

Some insiders insist that Nichol had his resignation as campaign chairman written out at one point in the crisis, and that its presentation late in the campaign would have been disastrous to public confidence in Trudeau and the Liberals. While the resignation story seems to be an exaggeration, who knows what might have happened at that 3 a.m. meeting in a closed car?

Trudeau-Bertrand Rapport Outstanding

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand are having a political laud-in unmatched since the 1962 days when Dalton Camp was praising then prime minister John Diefenbaker.

Outside of their tiff over location of the new Montreal airport, the prime minister and Quebec premier have been getting along famously.

As a result, relations between Ottawa and Quebec are more relaxed than at any time in years.

Informants said Friday Mr. Trudeau naturally does not plan to go as far as publicly endorsing Mr. Bertrand as Union Nationale leader in his competition with Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

But, they add, Mr. Trudeau will avoid any action which might possibly hurt Mr. Bertrand's chances of maintaining the premiership.

PRAISES ATTITUDE

Mr. Bertrand during the federal-provincial constitutional conference this week talked about the dandy new attitude of the federal government. It was much more flexible, he said.

Mr. Trudeau has said that federalism has been getting a better shake in Quebec lately, implying that this is thanks to Mr. Bertrand.

One of the peculiar features of this situation is that the federal Liberals are getting along better at the moment with the Union Nationale than with the provincial Liberals in Quebec.

Federal Liberal sources say the main reasons for this is that Mr. Trudeau and his associates are not absolutely sure of the federalist position of Quebec Leader Jean Lesage.

But they do seem sure, they add, that Mr. Bertrand is a convinced federalist working for Canada as well as for his own province.

IN AN UPROAR

Less than a year ago, relations between Ottawa and Quebec were in an uproar, mostly because of Quebec's insistence that it could not be represented by Ottawa at international education conferences. Education comes under provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Bertrand worked out a temporary compromise which has taken the heart out of the dispute.

Ottawa and Quebec have also argued about the federal two-per-cent social development tax and medical care insurance—but similar arguments have raged between Ottawa and other provinces.

If there must be fights between Ottawa and Quebec, Mr. Trudeau would like them to concern the same things as the capital and other provinces fight about.

To this extent at least, Quebec would be a province like the others.

Little Box To Analyse Red Planet

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Are there quakes on Mars?

A small black box that could tell what caused the craters on Mars—and even what that mysterious red planet is made of—is being designed at the California Institute of Technology.

The box, one of several experiments proposed for the Viking spacecraft to be launched in 1973, is a miniaturized seismometer much like those used to monitor earthquakes.

Dr. Don L. Anderson, director of Caltech's seismological laboratory and leader of a team designing the one-pound instrument, says it should survive and work even if something goes wrong and the spacecraft crashes into Mars.

Plans call for the 6,000-pound Viking to go into orbit around Mars and drop a smaller craft to land softly on the planet. The landing vehicle, patterned after the Surveyors which soft-landed on the moon, also will carry television cameras, soil samplers and other experiments.

BARMAID WINS MEDAL

LONDON (AP) — Mabel Marler, 65-year-old barmaid for the House of Lords, was awarded the British Empire medal today in the Queen's birthday honors list.

Mrs. Marler, who has quenched the thirst of British peers for many years, is retiring soon.

An MBE went to James Smith, a sheep farmer in Scalloway, Shetland, for inventing a gutting machine for small fish.

Beginning of the Approach

THE PROVINCIAL PREMIERS have left the Ottawa conference with expressions of satisfaction and optimism, and a feeling that much was accomplished in the two-day talks. That is as pleasant an outcome of such a gathering as it is unusual. But it should be remembered that the agreements reached were in principle only, and with some reservations in each case. There is a long way yet to go before the details of the general concepts are worked out and framed in a form which could be included in the new constitution.

The layman may wonder indeed, if, in view of the underlying exceptions held by many of the premiers, the principles should be so concretely installed in the national fabric. A law or a federal-provincial agreement can usually be terminated. But a constitutional clause carries much greater permanence, and amendments or deletions could take many years to achieve. There is, too, a thought to the experimental nature of some of the proposals advanced by federal or provincial spokesmen. Some of these might well be given a few years of trial operation before being cemented permanently into so stable a document as a constitution.

Much stress is laid on the use of a national consensus, particularly in regard to getting a green light for federally-proposed programs in such traditionally provincial fields as social welfare or education. But while this concept is acceptable, the delegates were still far from agreement on what should constitute a national consensus.

It is clear that the trend of the conference was toward strengthening the powers of the provinces and a corresponding reduction in federal powers. This movement was acquiesced in, even encouraged, by Prime Minister Trudeau. Curbs on the initiation of national domestic programs solely by Ottawa, sharing of certain tax fields heretofore exclusively federal, a trend toward more frequent consultation between federal and provincial authorities—these are indicative of the greater voice which the provinces appear to be gaining in the overall management of the country.

There are areas in which this may be beneficial, but there should be no weakening of the federal entity to the point where sectionalism becomes dominant. On major matters we must speak as one nation, not merely a collection of governments for whom local advantage is usually the dominant motivation.

It seems evident at this point that many more private and public debates of the constitutional changes must be held. This is all to the good. For Canadian men and women this is a new approach to a national structure which will govern and affect our lives, perhaps for generations to come. There should be every effort to publicize each question adequately, and time to permit full country-wide discussion so that an informed decision may be reached.

Dismaying Statistics

WITH A FULL YEAR REMAINING in the five-year trial period Britain established to test the results of abolishing capital punishment, debate is already building up between abolitionists and those who would restore the death penalty. The issue is of concern to Canadians who are now into the second year of a five-year trial period—and in at least one respect statistics in both countries appear unfavorable to the abolitionists.

In the 1965-67 period during which the death penalty was not enforced, England and Wales reported 133 capital offences, against 76 during the 1962-64 period in which executions were still legal. In January of this year, the Canadian Parliament was informed that 141 murders had occurred in Canada in the first six months of its trial period, compared with 122 for the similar period the year before.

As the debate is resumed in Britain, forces favoring return of capital punishment — and they seem to be led by Police Federation and Prison Officers Association spokesmen — contend there is a direct relationship between the removal of the ultimate penalty and the rise in the number of murders. Those taking the opposite view attribute the increase in capital offences to a general rise in the crime rate.

The argument may be repeated later in this country if the trend indicated during the first six months of Canada's trial period continues. Such a development would be used in any rebuttal of the contention that the death penalty is a negligible deterrent to murder. It would not settle the issue of conscience involved in the practice of authorizing society to take the life of the person who has killed with intent.

Much deeper analysis of the fragmentary statistics assembled both in Canada and Britain appears necessary, but the tone of debate in the latter country, one full year before the trial period is completed, suggests a serious problem for those who hope to convert abolition on a trial basis to abolition as a permanent policy.

The Knoll and the Cowichans

THE FATE OF THE SMALL knoll of trees on the edge of downtown Duncan appears to lie firmly in the hands of the Cowichan Indian band which owns the property and is now negotiating for its use as a shopping centre. This is the situation announced by Duncan's Mayor Quaife, who investigated the city's permit to use part of the Indian-controlled area while in Ottawa last week.

Preservation of the knoll has been the aim of many Duncan citizens who see in it an attraction still remaining from the days when good forest growth was general in the region. They have made their appeals to the Indians, who of course are entitled to do what they like with their own property.

It would be welcomed if the stand of trees could be saved, since it adds an attraction to the community that should have some appeal for the owners as well as for those who enjoy its shade and scenic charm. At a time when urbanization all over the continent is eliminating much of the natural scenery around towns and cities, the Indian owners may recognize the asset they possess, and incorporate it in plans for their shopping centre.

But the choice is the Indians'—a point which the other residents should contemplate as they recognize that the white man stripped his own part of Duncan bare of trees many years ago when faced with the same sort of economic decision that the Indians must make today. In view of this, there is a very unpleasant flavor to Duncan talk of a boycott of the new shopping centre if the Indians do not grant the whites' wishes, and particularly to Mayor Quaife's reported remark that "merchants locating there should perhaps be made aware in advance of this threat."

Washing the Water Away

I notice that this question of the sale of Canadian water to the United States is being discussed again, and it is always the industrial angle that is the basis of the argument; and from the point of view of Canadian needs for our industrial expansion, I am in complete agreement with those who oppose the export of our water.

But has anybody looked into the enormous amount of water used domestically in the United States? On my last visit to my Canadian-born daughter I undertook to do the washing—seven loads—which means, in these automatic washers, 14 tubfuls—not including the odd little washes done during the week. Then there are the dishwashers used generally once daily—rinse, wash, and rinse. How much water that takes I do not know. Multiply this for one family by the number of families in the areas clamoring for Canadian water, and add water for the needs of the gardens in the really dry parts.

If Canada ever gets out of the effluent age into the affluent, and those domestic machines become common in use here, we're going to find ourselves on the spot for water if we do not hang on to it now.

I think the United States should do a bit more cleaning up on the water they have before spending their money to buy ours.—British Canadian.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Threat of Black Violence Growing in Rhodesia

Frye

WHILE the attention of much of the world has been focussed elsewhere—on Vietnam, on the Middle East, and on Moscow — events in Rhodesia are approaching a historic watershed. This coming week, the point of no return for race war may be passed. On June 20, the minority white-supremacy government of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith plans to hold a national referendum (almost exclusively among white voters) on steps designed to guarantee that there can never be black majority rule. Whites constitute 4 per cent of the population.

The steps include adoption of a new constitution and proclamation of a republic—the later to dramatize a conclusive break with Britain and mark the probable end of all efforts for a negotiated accord.

For the past three and one-half years, since Smith declared Rhodesia independent, white Rhodesians have professed to be willing to compromise on a plan which would eventually let the 96 per cent black majority control the government.

The transitional period would have been long, and subject to additional delays. Britain was never satisfied with Rhodesian guarantees against its arbitrary and indefinite prolongation. Perhaps, as Prime Minister Harold Wilson recently said ruefully, "there never was a chance."

But if so, this was not acknowledged publicly. The principle of eventual majority rule was never ostensibly in dispute.

Now the Smith regime has acknowledged flatly that its purpose is to "remove" the "objectionable features" of the existing constitution, including provision for "eventual African rule."

Africans at the UN have been busy this past week making clear this means war—race war. They have been calling on the world community for help in waging it.

Blockade of Ports

A resolution passed by the UN colonialism committee June 10 demanded, among other things, a blockade of ports of entry and exit for Rhodesian goods; sanctions against South Africa and Portugal, which have been propping up Smith by frustrating UN economic pressures; and "all moral and material assistance" from governments and UN agencies to guerrilla bands which are trying to get a terrorist revolution under way.

This latter appeal is the one which has practical relevance. The others will not get off the ground, but this one might.

It is an umbrella under which countries sympathetic to the attempted revolt would be authorized to supply weapons, money and even fighting personnel. Sympathizers include Russia and Red China.

Nor is this all. At the very moment when Rhodesian guerrillas and their African allies are reaching out for help in conducting race war, knowing the help is likely to come primarily from the Communist world, the West is being sorely tempted to withdraw from efforts for an alternative solution.

Washington and London are becoming disillusioned with economic sanctions as a source of leverage for a peaceful, negotiated accord. Sanctions have had measurable impact on Rhodesia's economy, but they have not produced a significant liberalization of Smith's bargaining posture.

In order to make them work, the international community would have to do what UN Africans, this past week, were demanding: crack down on countries which have been deliberately frustrating the enterprise.

Costly for Britain

But sanctions on South Africa, which is subsidizing Rhodesia to the extent of thousands a year, would be prohibitively costly for Britain, and London is not willing to envisage them. The United States, too, would be extremely reluctant.

Indeed, most of the political pressure in London and Washington is in the direction of easing or abandoning existing sanctions. The Nixon Administration is under specific, and heavy, domestic pressure to permit the purchase of scarce chrome from Rhodesia.

Both the United States and Britain resisted the toughening of sanctions in the UN this past week. They were alone in voting "no."

Thus a dangerous polarization is in process. White Rhodesia is writing off efforts for compromise and setting out on permanent minority rule, with many of its ugly totalitarian features. Washington and London are unwilling to challenge this decision with peaceful measures commensurate to the task.

Mobilizing for War

So the Africans are mobilizing for war. And a nightmare which has haunted western policy planners for years is beginning to take tangible form: an alignment of black Africa with the Communist world against white Africa and the West.

If, concurrently, rumblings of race war in Rhodesia escalate into racial violence on a significant scale, the resulting crisis will be one of the ugliest the world has seen in modern history.

It need not happen. Many in Washington and London are determined that it shall not. But moderates are not necessarily in control of events; and the road to crisis is the one on which Rhodesia will have started if, as expected, Smith's white-supremacy constitution is approved this coming week.

FROM SASKATOON

By JAMES H. GRAY

Half a Million in the Hole for a Hill

Gray

IN the art of miscalculating financial escalations westerners can never compete with the master planners of things like Expo and the Ottawa Arts Centre. But those who assume that we never involve ourselves in hairy-type promotions have not paid attention to Saskatoon's Let's-Build-a-Mountain project. This has to be the wildest-eyed promotion since bunion derbies, though as a financitl blow-up it will be strictly minor league. It set its spending sights far too low at the outset to hope to rival Expo.

The news that Saskatoon was going into mountain building broke on the sports pages last spring via an announcement from Ottawa. The Canadian Amateur Sports Federation of the National Fitness Council awarded the 1971 winter games to Saskatoon. It did so with the proviso that Saskatoon would build a hill 300 feet high down and around which the skiers could cavort.

A Sour Joke?

The unlikely tone of the whole project was set by the original announcement. Ottawa had chosen Saskatoon over 15 other Canadian cities because it was completely lacking in skiing facilities. It would have to build the facilities for the games — facilities it never had before and never would have without the games. The cost of the project would be split three ways. With $360,000 in federal and provincial money to spend, Saskatoon easily convinced itself that it could build the 300-foot ski hill.

Now opinion is growing that the whole project is a sour joke, and not even the early preliminary steps have been taken. The height of the hill is to be sliced to 200 feet from 300. The proposal is to build it on top of the bank of the Saskatchewan River. The skiers could sloosh down 200 feet of hill, 100 feet of river bank and coast down the frozen river toward Prince Albert.

But wait!

The banks of the river are so notiriously unstable that gobs of money have been spent shoring up fringes of abutting residential streets. If they pile 200 feet of impacted dirt on the banks, will that not cause a gigantic mud slide that will block the river? Nobody really knows because no soil tests have yet been run.

Uncertainty about the stability of the river bank has given proposers of alternatives an open field. One wag suggested that they attach an inflated plastic type hill to a giant balloon. More practical, if as far out, is the proposal that the hill be dropped in favor of digging a hole in the ground.

The dig-a-holers have some fetching arguments. They are going to have to excavate anyway to get the dirt with which to build the mountain. Why not simply pile the dirt circularly around the hole as they excavate it and just keep digging and piling until they have a huge saucer a half mile wide and maybe 300 feet deep? The inside slope of the saucer can be used for skiing in winter while the bottom can filled with water for summer boating and winter skating. The main argument however is not about form but about money. The mayor has assured everybody that the job can be done for $500,000, which Saskatoon can have to spend by only putting up $160,000 of its own. The citizenry that recalls starting to build a $2.5 million auditorum that ran into many more millions is not convinced. Neither are the figure filberts. They do the arithmetic this way:

A 200-foot river bank hill would be roughly cone shaped. The sides could not be steeper then a 3:1 slope to prevent erosion. The base would thus be 1,200 feet in diameter, the hill would cover about 25 acres and would contain between 2.5 million and 3 million cubic yards of dirt.

Uphill Job

To get that much dirt would require the scraping of a yard of top soil off a square mile of ground, or a hole 24 feet deep over an entire quarter section — 160 acres. The dirt would have to be dug, hauled at least a mile and perhaps much farther, spread, impacted, smoothed and seeded to grass. The chair lifts would have to be installed and artificial snow-making machines set up.

And all that for $500,000? Would you believe maybe $5 million?

While the argument over money rages a new worry was casually tossed out by a visiting official from Ottawa. Where, he wondered out loud, would Saskatoon bed down all the 3,000 athletes who will turn up for the games? At a rough count, the town can sleep about a third that many athletes, one to a bed. Nobody has yet suggested building underground shelters for the competitors as the hill is being constructed if and where it ever gets off the ground.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

If you are driving up-Island be sure and stop off at Miracle Beach.

Wander along the trail behind the park's Nature House. Here you will see some fine specimens of hemlock, some of which are laden with their purplish cones.

On the ground there are very many seedlings of this tree, even though it is in heavy shade, for the hemlocks can stand more shade than any of our other conifers.

There are many clumps of the Douglas maple along the way. Notice how this tree sprawls and does not form a main trunk. See the tiny red dots on the leaves. This is one of the maples of B.C. that has a brilliant color in the fall.

Look at some of the old stumps in the forest. You will see many of them with the "spring-board" notches cut in them. It is apparent that this area was logged off about 80 years ago, and the new forest has come in and made a fine stand.

Several of these old stumps are inhabited by many species of plants which, in turn, are host to many different insects.

There is a small low-lying area where the false bug bain grows. In this shady spot you can find the star flower in profusion. There are many lady ferns growing here and where it is a bit boggy you will find the deer fern. See how the fertile or spoor-bearing fronds grow out from the centre of the plant and note the tapering frond on the vegetable part of this plant.

Go down to the beach and along the way you can find the Stika spruce with its sharp needles of bluish tinge. Close by the nine-bark is growing in abundance. It will be mingled with the osier-dogwood.

There are very many chocolate lilies and soon there will be tiger lilies in bloom.

Just before you reach the beach, you may find the wooly sunflower, with its soft, white, woolly leaves and yellow flower. Close by will be the blue larkspur.

When you get to the beach you will find on the "high gravel bars" the gum weed. Walk down to the rocky portion of the beach and you can find the glasswort. This plant is covered at high tide and is one of the few green plants that can stand such immersion.

Among the rocks you will find the pioneer animals of the sea, the tiny snail, acorn barnacle, the blue mussel and the little limpet. In the shade or under the stones you can find very many little beach crabs. Put the stone back please.

Out on the long sandy section of the beach you will find "sand-dollars". Some still have the dark, minute spines of this animal. Others are yellow while some have been bleached white.

If you are lucky and the tide is a long way out, you will perhaps see the sea gulls searching in the wet sand for the sea lance or needle fish. You may even see a bald eagle searching for the same kind of a meal.

Note the ripples in the sand and the tracks made by many of the little sea creatures.

Britain: What's The Fuss About?

By PAUL JOHNSON
New Statesman

LONDON—Governments are born to die, and particularly reforming governments.

Harold Wilson . . . paying price of reformer

To reform means to damage existing interests; and the anger thus incited is rarely balanced by the gratitude of beneficiaries. Men vote for hate-reasons not love-reasons.

Of modern reforming governments, the Campbell-Bannerman-Asquith regime lost its huge overall majority in less than four years, and Mr. Attlee, put in power by a landslide, was forced within five years to govern by the bath-chair vote.

So what is all the present fuss about? Mr. Wilson has been in power for four and a half years and is likely to have a working majority for at least 18 months more. Of course the government is unpopular; and its unpopularity is an index of the quantity of reformist legislation it has placed on the statute book — more than in any comparable period in our history.

Saved 3 Industries

Some examples are leasehold reform and the Rent Act; the Steel Act; the Industrial Reconstruction Corporation, with a whole series of measures to restructure industry and increase regional growth; the Industrial Training Act, perhaps the most significant in the long run; while in the pipeline, apart from measures like the public ownership of the docks, are the reform of the civil service, the most important since the 1870s, and of local government, the most drastic since the present structure emerged in the 1830s.

The Ministry of Technology, derided by ignorant MPs and journalists, but taken seriously by our more alert businessmen and technical experts has already saved three of our major industries — shipbuilding, machine-tools and computers —from virtual extinction or foreign control.

In the last four years, there has been a momentous and welcome change in Britain's world role.

We remain a world power in the sense that we are no longer, as Mr. Wilson put it recently, "a world policeman". We cannot be one, and we do not want or intend to be one.

★ ★ ★

The government, or some members of it, did not accept the change with enthusiasm; it was, rather, dictated by events.

But it has happened, and ministers are as entitled to claim paternity for success as they are invariably served with a maintenance order for failure.

So what on earth is all the despondency about?

Some Grave Errors

There are, it is true, genuine and grievous reasons for disappointment at the performance of the government: the persistent failure to bring Britain's visible trade into balance, and our seeming impotence over Rhodesia and Vietnam.

These have been due in part to government errors, some of them grave and obstinately repeated.

But the chief explanation is that Britain, alone, cannot bring about the structural changes in the financing of world trade which are required to pull us into surplus, and we are too weak both militarily and financially to exert much leverage on international events, even in areas, such as Rhodesia, where we have special responsibility.

ATTLEE

Failure abroad, then, can explain some of the defeatism on the Left. But more important causes are worth dissecting. The first is Labour's poor showing in the polls, byelections and local government results. This is appalling but not surprising: reforming governments, as I have said, contrive to make themselves unpopular.

Mid-term polls and by-elections are notoriously poor guides to what is likely to happen when the moment of truth comes.

The capacity of modern governments to retrieve their fortunes in the final weeks, even days, before general elections cannot be overestimated.

Needless to say, the behaviour of the communications media is a major contributory factor to the demoralisation of Labour MPs.

Misled by the halcyon period of 1963-1966, when Mr. Wilson was a press and TV pin-up, the PLP has forgotten that the primary purpose of the British communications industry is not to tell the truth but to maintain the status quo.

Universal Fantasy

The third factor is the universal fantasy that we suffer from what Mr. Enoch Powell called the other day the "British sickness" — the assumption that we, as a nation, are unique in our troubles and mismanagement.

He attributes the expression to his foreign friends. His foreign friends must be very peculiar people.

Wherever I travel I am invariably struck by the contrast between the tranquility and stability I leave behind me, and the spectrum of insoluble problems I see abroad.

Whether they be student or regional or linguistic or racial unrest, corruption and inefficiency in government, violence at all levels of society, party divisions, the threat or actuality of military coups, economic distress and the flagrant inequality between rich and poor — whatever ills may and do beset the modern state — we have a mild cold while the rest have raging pneumonia.

The obsession of the British press and TV with domestic concerns, and the inadequacy of their foreign coverage, conceal our good fortune from the public.

"You think you have problems," said a Belgium diplomat to me, with some irritation, the other week. "You don't know how lucky you are."

We, for instance, have a balance of payments deficit, about which we behave like a chronic hypochondriac; last month, happy little Denmark lost its entire gold and dollar reserves in one week of speculation against its currency.

In London, an LSE professor has a jug of water poured over his head: general outrage and letters to The Times follow; in California helicopters bomb a university campus with CS gas grenades; in North Carolina, a resident says: "Thank God they've brought the tanks in at last."

People Dying

Yes, we have our Ulster, and things there are likely to get worse before they get better. But in Brittany, in the Alto Adige, in the Basque country, and in many other places where comparable problems exist, people are killed almost daily.

If we want to face the truth—and this is the last thing that people who hate the Wilson government want to face — then we must admit that troubles begin at Calais.

GETTING INTO A BIND OVER CULTURAL BONDS

By GEORGE BAIN

OTTAWA — As is well known, editorial writers leap from their couches each morn bent on finding the silver lining that is in every cloud, the gold that is in every heart, and the good that is in everything.

These are the flower-children of the world of communications.

How characteristic, then, the serene judgment of a recent lead editorial on the business done the day before in Quebec City.

"No such common act in recent decades," said the editorial, breathily, "bears greater import for this unity (of French and English) than the cultural and education exchange agreement signed yesterday . . ."

Discouragement, editorial writers wot not of. But some of us, whose trust has been worn thin on the hard wheel of experience, perhaps may be excused if we permitted muted sounds of skepticism to escape us. For instance, I'll lay you three-to-one right now that . . . but let me illustrate:

Dear Jean-Jacques:

I've been thinking about a location for that Joint Secretariat to which we are each going to contribute $150,000 a year, and looking at the map, it seems to me that Lunenburg would be as equitable a choice as we could make, What do you think?

Yours fraternally, etc.

Dear John:

With ref. yours of the 8th and the suggestion that we locate the Joint Secretariat at Lunenburg, I have only one thing to say, which I hope you will take in good part — perhaps we can regard it as our first educational exchange — and that is this: Lunenberg is in Nova Scotia. I recognize, of course, how easy it is to make a slip when one has a big province to manage and one is busy. For myself, I think the best choice would be St. Sulpice.

Yours in harmony, etc.

Dear J.-J.:

I am quite aware that there is a Lunenburg in Nova Scotia, and I need no education from anyone in the geography of the Province of Ontario, which, unfortunately, it seems cannot be said for all of us. The Lunenburg to which I refer is a few miles west of Cornwall, and, so far as I can see, is about equal distance between Toronto and Quebec City. I have no objection to St. Sulpice, per se, but would point out to you that it will be difficult for me politically to agree to any place which is (a) plainly in your backyard, and (b) called St. Something. Some of my people still believe there is nothing beyond Westmount but the Vatican.

Sincerely, etc.

Dr. Mr. Robarts:

Obviously I have no comment to make on your last sentence except to say that it is a characteristic which has not gone unobserved. As to a site for the Joint Secretariat, I think that, in all fairness, you must admit that since your culture has invaded ours more than ours has yours, what we have here is not a matter of striking a balance but of remedying imbalance. What are a few miles one way or the other? Be fair.

Yours truly, etc.

Dear Mr. Bertrand:

Lectures on being fair are hardly in keeping. I would remind you of the phrase, British fair play. Those of us in Ontario who are of that descent have the instinct to fair play bred in the bone; our Ontarians of Italian, German, Ukrainian, Polish and other descent get it by contact, like measles. Actually, it was in the spirit of fair play that I suggested Lunenburg, wishing merely to offer a few of your people periodic escape from the shadow of the soutane and the isolation into which they have been cast in the name of cultural survival.

As ever, etc.

Dear Premier:

Au contraire, as we say, it is I who have been leaning over backwards attempting to be fair. If the Secretariat is to locate in Lunenburg, some of the undoubted WASPs of the town may feel obliged to learn a few rudimentary phrases of "the other language," thereby exposing their intellectual capacities to perhaps unendurable strain . . . etc., etc., etc.

Radicals Opting for Ignorance

By NICHOLAS von HOFFMAN

By all that the last five years ought to have taught us Larry Grauman should be one of those college faculty martyrs whose firing by a malevolent administration sets off a parade of student sit-ins and obstructionist demonstrations.

Larry Grauman was a dropout, an expellee from high school, never got a B.A., never bothered to write his doctoral dissertation, digs the revolution, cultural, academic and political, has an enthusiastic rap that should reach kids, is smart as hell, knows a tremendous lot which he's willing to communicate by conversation, not lecture.

He should be the kind of person deans hate and students love, but instead of being fired from Antioch College, he's thinking seriously of quitting.

"The real irony of me is that I'm almost totally in favor of every reform proposed. I've always been against grades. The idea of dividing knowledge into academic departments has always seemed absurd to me.

"I've never understood why we need boards of trustees. I've been with the revolution right down the line. I'm in favor of overthrowing the educational system, but for what?" asks Larry, who's finishing out his first year as an English teacher at the Yellow Springs, Ohio, institution which he describes as the "midway point on the Harvard-Berkeley axis."

On paper his background should make him a perfect match for Antioch, an expensive liberal arts college for the children of the rich, because the place is years ahead of most institutions when it comes to educational reform.

Student power was a working reality at Antioch even before the first comparatively timid demands for free speech were promulgated at embattled Berkeley.

Grauman's complaint about Antioch is that learning and education in any way has stopped.

He believes there is no need for any teachers there teaching by any method, that the kids are too distracted, too unfixed in themselves and toward the world, too undisciplined internally or externally to learn anything.

"They remind me of the New York taxi drivers who're becoming more and more inscrutably evasive. I do a once-a-week commute to teach at Vassar so I've had a chance to study those cabbies and I've discovered they've become more and more evasive. They don't want to pick up any kind of passengers, not just blacks going to Bedford Stuyvesant or Puerto Ricans going to Harlem.

"They won't pick me up and I'm always well dressed, so one day I non-violently interposed my body in front of one, and when I got inside the cab I started shouting at the cabbie: 'If you're avoiding people like me what is it that you want? What are you, an airport specialist? Or are you an East Side Drive specialist? A Wall Street man? What kind of passenger do you want? Or, are you crazy? What is it that you want buddy?'

"His eyes glazed and went out of focus and he said to me slowly, 'I don't know what I want. I don't know how to beat the traffic problem. I don't know if I want long rides or short ones. I don't know where I want to go.'

"That's just like the kids — very aggressive, nobody's going to impose on them, but when they're confronted with a number of alternatives in the real world they can't function.

Within a racist, capitalist world they still have a number of choices they can make for themselves, but they can't function in an existential situation so they just sit there and stagnate . . . like the cabbies."

Larry tells a story that illustrates what he's up against as a teacher. He has a class in literary journalism, six students — no mass education in these fancy schools — but he was unable to get these six kids to read one book at the same time so there was never any shared intellectual experience on which to have a class.

"In desperation one day I suggested we read "Armies of the Night" — I would have suggested it before but I thought they'd be tired of it by now, but it turned out they hadn't read it, which shouldn't have surprised me because they don't read anything.

"They were enthusiastic, so I thought I'd finally broken through to them. I suggested that we meet on a Monday night at my house in the yard. It's lovely there at this time of year in Ohio.

"I decided I'd make it a special occasion. I came home early. My wife baked a cake and I'm sitting there at 7:30 waiting, waiting, waiting. Finally one girl showed up. We talked about her personal problems, how she's dropping out to go live in a commune in New Mexico."

Larry Grauman isn't the first person to observe how ignorant upper-class, radicalized young people can be. They chirp anti-establishment slogans, but after they've sung their limited, little repertoire, and they're obliged to discuss what they think, it's apparent they don't know nothing from nothing, not about the system they rail against, nor even the thoughts of their leading personalities.

You may not like Marcuse, or Hayden or Cleaver or Oglesby, but they're deep, heavy men who've invested years of work and study in coming to the political statements they stand on. Many of their followers on the other hand, are living through a self-centred, self-indulgent, personal experience which has little to do with the issues and causes they vaguely associate themselves with.

This becomes clear enough when you listen to Grauman describe what goes on at Antioch in place of learning, any kind of learning, Even learning that might fit these precious ones for the revolution they gabble about but can never have any important part in.

"Antioch's divided between the affective education and the cognitive education groups. Affective education is the euphemism they've given it because it makes what they're doing sound like it was certified by Samuel Eliot Morison, when it's really sexual confession. T (therapy)-grouping, sensitivity training has replaced everything.

"I'm tired of hassling it out between the affective and the cognitive. They don't want my organized knowledge. I'm encouraged to pose as an authority on group psychology. You can spend your entire time as an adviser. There's no use for anybody to teach history or literature.

"Last week I got a mimeographed leaflet in my mail box called, 'Life Planning Workshop — free coffee and lemonade — where is your head at? — 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.' It was signed by the dean of students.

"To see a dean of students at a college suggesting you can plan your life in seven hours with lemonade is absolutely insidious," says Grauman, who adds they have a room at the college given over to sensitivity training and nude massage-ins.

He sees this therapeutic miasma floating into all the hotsy-totsy, "rich kids" schools: "I can see it coming at Vassar, the first signs. The generation there now is probably the last one of coercible, persuadable kids . . . many people stay and teach and suffer. The poor kids are trapped. Either they finally capitulate and give up trying to teach linear, sequential reasoning or they become embattled and bitter."

The graduates of such a system of education will be the true useless men, useless to the system they abhor, useless to the revolution they pine for, useless to the sylvan commune, useless to themselves, encapsulated as they are in the twitching of their own nervous system.

At best they can look forward to living off welfare or their parents' stock certificates; at worst, one firing squad or another will catch up with them, and they will learn that most people have been forced to grow up attending courses in insensitivity training.

Helping Little Acorns Into Sturdy Growth

By ART STOTT

When he stands tall, with his lacrosse goalie's stick touching the ground, the end of the handle rises only an inch or two above his head. His padded uniform shorts reach insouciantly below the knee. He can walk under the goal crossbar with four inches to spare above his protective helmet.

Stott

"But Cameron wants to play goal," the mother of a teammate explains. "It's the only position he likes—and he'll grow."

Once play starts and an opponent closes in to shoot, Cameron moves to cut down the angle. On the infrequent occasions when a shot bears directly on goal, he's more efficient blocking it with his body than his stick. The stick is heavy and seems to get in the way. There's not much area to the small body in comparison to the wide reaches of the goal, but there's lots of heart. Cameron doesn't duck or flinch. When the ball bounces off his chest protector and he goes down, manipulating the oversized stick to freeze the rebound, the supporters of both teams cheer. It's quite a show.

You can see it during the week as Victoria's tiniest lacrosse players begin to learn Canada's national summer game — and, it seems to me, learn much more as well.

These are small boys from five to eight, according to my informant — one of the mothers who predominate in the spectators' stands.

They perform under special arrangements. All must wear helmets, mouth guards, gloves and knee-pads. The knee pads are the lumpy protectors that droop to their ankles when they run, unless a far-sighted parent has bought elbow pads to protect knees not big enough to fill standard equipment. A coach from each team stays in the box during the game, directing his charges, trying to develop their understanding of positional play and to prevent them from dashing after the ball like iron filings drawn by a strong magnet.

When a pass is completed — actually caught by the player for whom it is intended — the cheers from the sidelines are almost as loud as they are for a goal, Expertness is still to come, but the little guys are learning.

They step into their checks with courage and determination. They learn to take their bumps when they go down. Occasionally there are tears and piping cries when the fall is hard or a random stick cracks an exposed shin. Any semblance of rough play, almost entirely unintentional, draws a penalty and the offender is led off quietly with none of the glamor attached to some "Bad boys" of senior sport.

They are taught give-and-take in legitimate body contact though not unnecessary roughness. The coaches are trying to teach them lacrosse, but stick-handling, shooting, floor work and the other ingredients of the game hold no priority over sportsmanship. And everybody plays. A whistle sounds and new lines come out, giving each youngster his share of the game regardless of comparative ability.

At the end of the game the rivals line up like finalists after the Stanley Cup series, file past each other and shake hands individually with their opponents. The coaches supervise that, too, telling the boys the battle's over and making certain that the handshakes are genuine. Then they split off for their respective benches, have a bottle of pop, shed heavy equipment and go home.

It is possible that tiny-mite lacrosse may develop some of the undesirable traits ascribed to other little league sport — the over-emphasis on victory at any cost, the emotional upset of youngsters too young to master their feelings, the creation of young prima donnas, the yen for commercialization. It's possible, but there was no evidence of it in the game I watched. The young adults who handled the show were mature enough to avoid such tendencies. If they saw the Mann Cup on the far horizon, they saw very small boys immediately in front of them and they appeared quite as interested in helping the small boys to grow as they were in manufacturing lacrosse stars.

As long as they keep it that way, they're doing a fine job. The incidental fact that they are interesting youngsters at a very early age in Canada's national game — which has to be taught — adds to the attractiveness of their activities.

It isn't important to me that the small ones grow up to become major leaguers. It is encouraging, though, to see them learning to play together, learning something of teamwork, how to take their bumps and, when the game's over, make the handshake mean what it's supposed to mean.

BEAUTIFUL B.C.

It's a Moveable Feast To Visit the Mainland

By BARRY BROADFOOT

This is the last in a series of articles the Times is presenting on Beautiful British Columbia.

When visitors arrive from the Prairies or Eastern Canada and command me: "Show us Vancouver!" I invariably find we are discovering new things to see and do together.

It works both ways, of course. They will want to see some sight they heard from back in Winnipeg or Toronto from a previous visitor to the city. Or I will decide to take them to some place I have heard about but never got around to seeing, even after 20 years of living on the Lower Mainland.

So Vancouver and district, in that sense, is a moveable feast.

The whole area — the Fraser Valley, Greater Vancouver, Howe Sound and the Sechelt Peninsula — is such a treasure chest that if you can't please visitors, then they should have stayed at home.

Some want to go fishing for salmon. I send them out to Horseshoe Bay where they can rent a boat for several hours for $8.

Or they want to climb mountains. Everyone crawls before they walk, so I sent them up Grouse Mountain in the skyride with a haversack lunch and they spend all the sun-filled day roaming the trails and alpine slopes and they have something to talk about all winter long.

Swimming, lying on the beach, girl watching? That's almost too easy. Point them at 10 a.m. in the direction of English Bay or Jericho or Spanish Banks, or send them out the Deas Thruway to Crescent Beach or White Rock and you can forget about them until dinnertime.

STANLEY PARK

Whenever I can, I take my friends to Stanley Park and give them my day-long super-duper tour of one of the world's great parks.

Another interesting day, but preferably two, can be spent in the Fraser Valley. Get a good road map, and leave Vancouver early. Take the Lougheed Highway and meander eastward towards Haney.

Turn left at the cross roads onto the Dewdney Trunk Road which meanders for miles and miles, through forests, past lakes, until it runs downhill into Haney.

Stop in at Harrison Hot Springs and for an hour in the new public mineral pool. Then, across the Fraser River to Highway 401, and turn off at Chilliwack, a bright and cheery city. Stop awhile at lovely Cultus Lake, or drive up the Chilliwack River Valley.

Another trip to write home about is one day, driving over the Upper Levels through West Vancouver and onto the Seaview Highway skirting Howe Sound to the bustling logging town of Squamish.

ALICE LAKE

Leave Squamish, and head north through valley and then mountain country to Whistler, the possible site of the future Winter Olympics. Here is a resort that will, within only a few years, become one of the greatest on the continent.

Take the chairlift to the top and watch a wonderland of alpine scenery as you eat lunch in the restaurant.

Stop off for a swim in Alice Lake before the 70-mile drive to Vancouver.

Another trip out of Vancouver is to the Sechelt Peninsula. If it's going to be just for one day, catch the first ferry in the morning from Horseshoe Bay, crossing Howe Sound and landing at Langdale. Then it's an easy, pleasant 54-mile drive up the peninsula through Gibsons, Roberts Creek, Sechelt, Halfmoon Bay and lunch at one of Pender Harbor's many fine restaurants.

For dining out in Vancouver, ten years ago, I'd have said you could eat out, in every sense of the word. But ten years have seen an astonishing increase in the number of top restaurants. You can still go wrong, of course, and blunder into a hash house disguised by $100,000 worth of decor, but it is highly unlikely.

LATIN NATIONS STRESSED

The striking contrasts which mark the nations on the continent and a half stretching from Mexico southwards to the tip of Tierre del Fuego are highlighted in a new presentation at Man and His World 1969.

The exhibit, built around the countries of Latin-America, will be housed in what was the pavilion of Ireland at Man and His World 1968 and the Pavilion of Economic Progress at Expo 67.

As soon as a visitor enters, he will see an immense Mexican painting of Our Lady of Guadeloupe, Latin America's patron saint.

Next, he will come to a sign that reads: "I welcome you"—a welcome that is underlined by the reproduction of a coffee bar, symbolizing the traditional hospitality of that part of the world.

The visitor then will reach a stage where brightly-costumes performers will show the music and dances of the various countries represented in the pavilion. The show will change each week throughout the exhibition.

Farther on, the visitor will see the front of the house of well-to-do people and, right beside it, a hovel made of oil drums set against the backdrop of the outlines of several skyscrapers.

The pavilion recalls the Aztec and Inca civilizations, with the reproduction of a pyramid.

P.E.I. BOOSTS FERRY RUNS

It will be easier to get to Prince Edward Island's broad beaches this summer, enjoy the rural beauty of this "million acre farm" out in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, get in some golf and fishing and attend the festivals and summer theatre.

Bigger, newer units have been added to the fleet of ferryboats plying between the New Brunswick mainland and the holiday island nine miles off-shore. The new boat John Hamilton Gray carries nearly 200 automobiles, easing the pressure on the Abegweit and the veteran Confederation.

Latest recruit is a vessel bought in Sweden, refitted at Saint John, N.B. and renamed the Lucy Maud Montgomery in honor of the Canadian author of the Anne of Green Gables books which have made Prince Edward Island familiar around the world to children and their elders.

Changing Times Confront Reluctant Scots

By ALVIN SHUSTER

EDINBURGH (NYT) — "Things change," said Jimmy McGuffie, the owner of McGuffie's Tavern and the restaurant upstairs. "But we still know what a Scottish gentleman is. He's a man who opens a bottle of whisky and throws away the cork."

Things do change in this enchanting capital of Scotland, and too fast for many of its half-million inhabitants. If 18th-century buildings are to be torn down, if towering new office structures are to go up in Georgian streets, let it all happen gradually.

The defenders of the traditional have won some battles: more are in progress. Though the city fathers have announced a decison to install 5,000 parking meters in the town centre, citizens' groups have not yielded. Appeals went out to the secretary of state for Scotland in London. Now there will be a public hearing.

Another struggle looms over the Pentlands, a serene stretch of green hills five miles from town where Scots in this area ride their ponies or walk and climb on sunny as well as — more likely — rainy Sundays. The army is the target this time because it recently announced that it wants to take over acreage for a firing range.

Apart from the loss of open country, the people cannot quite figure out why, if the British Army is closing up shop all over the world, it wants to expand outside Edinburgh.

●

No less than the British Horse Society, the Scottish Rights of Way Society, the Boy and Girl Scouts and Edinburgh University's physical education department have lined up against the Army's plan. The opposition groups are calling for a public inquiry.

Those in power have learned to take public opinion seriously on such matters. Two years ago the army tried to do the same thing, but gave up in the face of protests.

The town council authorized a beltway around the city in the hope of taking some of traffic out of the centre, but it found the opposition overwhelming. The roadway would destroy historic buildings, preservation groups argued.

The town council would not be swayed. The people appealed to the secretary of state. The decision: build half a beltway to ease some of the pressure.

Preservationists have had their setbacks. The changers, for example, are winning on Princess Street, the shopping boulevard running beside the gardens that stretch below the imposing Edinburgh Castle, but they must abide by an extensive master plan.

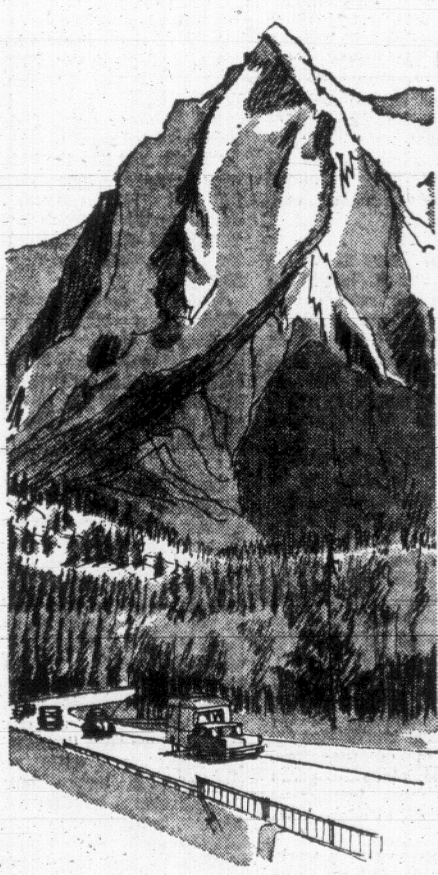
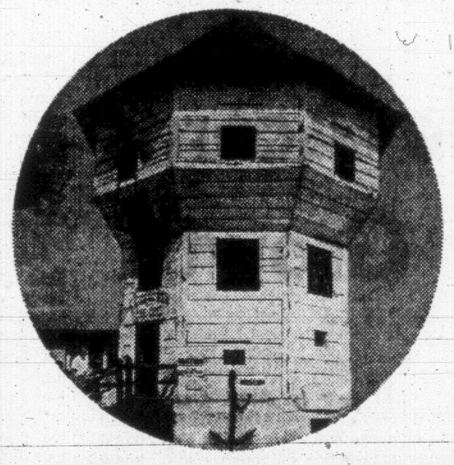
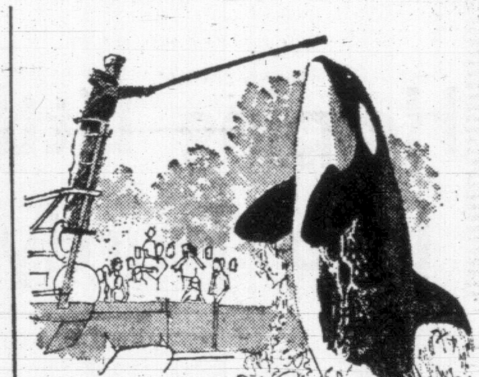
Pretend you're a tourist in the greatest tourist country going







Many British Columbians have the idea that far-away travel destinations are the best. But think about it and you'll realize that no other place offers the incredible variety of your home province. Where else can you find a highway like the Rogers Pass, wending smoothly through magnificent mountain vistas? Or a city like Vancouver with its spectacular setting and ever-changing attractions? Or a holiday region so totally "apart" as Vancouver Island? Or a valley like the Okanagan, with its lush fruit orchards, sandy beaches and sparkling lakes? The answer, of course, is nowhere else. So if you'd like to be a tourist in an excitingly different kind of place, try exploring in your own back yard. It's the greatest tourist country going.

Nuclear Vessel Launched

TOYKYO (Reuters) — Japan's first nuclear-powered merchant vessel, the Mutsu, was launched here Thursday.

When completed in 1972, it will be the world's fourth civilian nuclear-powered vessel, after the Lenin, a Russian icebreaker; the Savannah, a U.S. passenger-cargo vessel, and the Otto Hahn, a West German ore carrier.

The government-financed Japan Nuclear Ship Development Agency ordered the 8,350-ton Mutsu on an experimental basis to obtain a thorough knowledge of the construction and operation of nuclear ships.

It will cost $15,000,000.

The ship is 426 feet long, 67 feet wide, 42 feet high and draws 23 feet of water.

It is designed to have a thermal output of 36,000 kilowatts, and cruising speed of 16.5 knots.

That Water Pipe Was Needed Long Ago

Inside City Hall

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

UPWARD

Hume

A couple of weeks ago most of this column was devoted to singing the praises of Chief Water Commissioner Ron Upward and the efficiency of the District Water Board.

Upward and his political friends on the board should, therefore, be prepared for the brick-bat about to be thrown this week.

On Wednesday moring the water board met in solemn conclave to be informed that unless certain lengths of steel pipe, designed to hook Sooke Lake up with Sooke Tunnel, could be operable by Aug. 1, the district could be out of water.

The pipe, so they were told, was somewhere on the high seas around Los Angeles and would be 18 to 20 days late arriving in Victoria. And that in turn meant that to get the pipe installed before Aug. 1 would be a push job.

Ripped Up Later

Worse still, the installed pipe would have to be ripped up later in the year and returned to Vancouver for lining and other permanent treatment.

The board was regaled with a sad story about labor troubles in Australia, loading and unloading problems, and the wandering nature of the freighter carrying the pipe.

No one asked why in heck the order for the pipe wasn't placed a year ago — or two years ago — to ensure that it would be on site and ready to go when the time came.

The Sooke Tunnel has been under construction for four years. Designed as it is to end Greater Victoria's water problems for many years, the tunnel isn't the least bit good without the steel pipe link from lake to portal.

That small fact couldn't have escaped the builders, the organizers or the board.

And please let them not come back with the argument: "Well, if everything had gone on schedule we would have been okay," because that answer isn't good enough. When an entire project — and the steady water supply for a city — depends on 2,600 feet of steel pipe you make damned sure it's on the job long before it is needed.

While the barbs are out, let this be said quickly.

When last writing in praise of the water district we mentioned briefly a $176,000 job to be done at the Sooke dam. Only one contractor made a bid for the job, a contractor who quite naturally got the project.

Members of the water board might be interested enough in their business to check just when the specifications for the work were filed and when tenders were called.

They can get the information from Builder's Exchange or the Amalgamated Construction Association on Bastion Square. If they checked those dates, those same board members might realize why only one bid was submitted.

It was not because other contractors were too busy, but rather because the time from the call to closing bids was too short for most people to consider the matter seriously.

Contractors Unhappy

Should there be the odd board member who feels this is just a weekend for carping, the suggestion here is that he lifts his telephone and talks to some of the local contractors. He will find them, to say the least, just a little disenchanted.

And rightly so.

In summary — it is still felt here that in general the water district, with Upward at the helm, conducts its business wisely and well. But at this stage its slip is showing.

Readers may have noted in Friday's press that city council went into camera to discuss the latest stand on the now infamous betting messenger service.

Normally we would complain about that, but from the reports we hear of that closed-door session neither press nor public missed much.

Not that it was a short meeting. As a matter of fact it lasted almost an hour and finished in wretched confusion.

In the words of one gentleman who was present it was "the Keystone Cops plus Charlie Chaplin — but sad rather than funny." And if one austere alderman had to be reminded that he couldn't vote both for and against a motion, well, it isn't the first time that has happened.

No wonder they went into camera. Bad for the image for the people to know that our city fathers can, at times, be so funny — without anyone laughing at their antics.

Last week I wrote of a pending trip to Campbell River to fish for trout and salmon. And I boasted that I would retain the trout trophy won last year.

Should have known that while you can beat city hall, you can't beat 'em two years in a row.

Came back skunked. No trout. No salmon.

Deryk Wilde of the traffic engineers department took the salmon trophy with a five-pound, eight-ounce beauty. Dennis Young took the trout trophy with a cut-throat, weight unkown, length best not mentioned.

Treasurer Jim Bramley, with whom I fished for the big zero most of Saturday, earned special distinction. He was the only member of the party to fish for two days without getting a strike.

So be it, Bramley and I are still bitter.

CITY YOUTH REMANDED FOR POT SENTENCE

Magistrate William Ostler ruled aginst a legal loophole in convicting Jay D. Small, 18, of 1112 McKenzie.

Small's lawyer argued that the Crown must prove the 1961 federal Narcotics Control Act was in effect.

Ostler ruled that in narcotics trials the Crown need not prove the proclamation of the federal act.

He said the act had received sufficient publicity and notoriety because of the great number of cases and convictions in the courts.

Before the Magistrate

Robert M. Scott, 2383 Lyn, was fined the maximum of $500 in central court Friday after he pleaded guilty to operating a boat while impaired.

He was also prohibited from operating a boat in Canadian waters for two years.

Court was told he was jailed earlier in May for two intoxicated driving convictions.

Scott was arrested Tuesday night in a small motor vessel floating off Dallas Road. He was found slumped over the wheel and refused to come ashore.

Several citizens aided police in getting him and his boat on the land. He had to be forcibly removed.

A 14-year-old boy was given two years' probation on two charges of breaking and entering and theft. He was ordered to post a $500 good-behavior bond, to reside with his parents and to obey a curfew running from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m.

The youth was earlier raised from juvenile court to face the charges. He was put on indefinite probation by the family court earlier this year.

"I've never seen one so young with so much worldly experience," said Magistrate William Ostler.

He said the youth was too young to send to the young offenders' unit.

Frederick Henry, 118 Robertson, was sentenced to 21 days in jail for a second offence of impaired driving.

David G. Halls, 1141 Palmer, was fined $400 on the same charge.

In traffic court Thursday, James Morrison, 188 Obed, was jailed 21 days for impaired driving. Gilbert L. Lucier, 1525 Earlston, and Lawrence Shultz, 3178 Milgrove, were each fined $300 on the same charge.

Victorians Appointed As Advisers

Two Victorians have been appointed to advisory boards to the newly formed Manpower and Immigration Council.

John Dalgleish, director of Adult Education with the Greater Victoria School Board, was one of nine members appointed all across Canada to act as advisors on adult occupational training.

"I honestly don't know yet what I'll be expected to do with the board, but I'm going back to Ottawa June 25 to find out," Dalgleish said.

The appointment is for a term of three years, he said.

Mrs. Margatet McClung, administrator of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, was appointed to an advisory board on co-ordination of rehabilitation services for disabled persons.

"I think the appointment is a great honor, and a great honor to the clinic," Mrs. McClung said.

She, too, will attend the Ottawa meeting June 25 to find out the purpose of the appointment.

In all, there are four advisory boards, the remaining two dealing with immigrants.

The Big Wind Blows World Upside-Down

TIGER FLOWER by Robert Vavra with paintings by Fleur Cowles. Collins. $5.95.

Reviewed by Ann Saddlemyer

This is an unusual book. Part poem, part children's story, part revelation, it tells of a world that does not exist but should, yet where all, in the eyes of reason, is as it shouldn't be:

"where everything that
is big,
and everything that should be big,
is small" and
"no one has to be any way but
he is."

Robert Vavra's world is, of course, an accident. Tigers were mean crafty kings of the jungle, useless delicate butterflies moaned about all day, fierce lions roared unpleasantly, and birds foolishly tweeped in the usual-sized trees. Then came the big wind.

Now jungle beasts nestle cosily among king-sized mushrooms, hunting flowers or going for a row on the calm lake. Giant birds guard the cheetah's serenity and great butterflies sail boats with their wings. And tiger flower is king of the tall, tall grass.

Paintings by Fleur Cowles first created this world, which was then illustrated by the author, using photographs of the artists's paintings as his guide.

There is a preface by Yehudi Menuhin, and the book was finely printed by the Dai Nippon Printing Company of Tokyo.

Oh for a big wind.

Leacock Has Gone Behind the Beyond

BEHIND THE BEYOND, by Stephen Leacock. McClelland and Stewart, $1.50.

The reissuing of a book like this, commendable as the effort may be in theory, makes one realize that Stephen Leacock has been around for quite a while.

Humor at its best is timeless, but many of Leacock's contexts are now trite and old-fashioned. He makes much of being shaved by a garrulous barber and facing the gas in a dentist's chair. Such situations often distract the reader from the fundamental point.

The book does have some rewards. The clever title essay, "Behind the Beyond," parodies in content and title the over-earnest problem play, still very much with us.

Equally timeless are "The Advantages of a Polite Education" and The Joys of Philanthropy."

The former records the problems of establishing communications in France by one who has learned French at school in Canada; the latter concerns the ubiquitous custom of tipping.

"The Simple Life in Paris" is well worth reading in 1969, for Leacock's ridicule is devoted to the Parisian status symbols of 1913: Haute couture, food fads, dogs, etc.

What hits the reader of today is how completely we take for granted, as a part of our daily lives, things that Leacock regarded as silly eccentricities.

"Paris at Night" is a fun essay, about North American tourists looking for kicks in the world's most wicked city, and being assiduously provided synthetic thrills by the commercial interests.

About half of the items in this book are entertaining still, though not very exciting as either humor or artistry.

NOT ONE RIVET MISSED IN GREAT QE2 SAGA

Reviewed by William Benzie.

It is difficult to say which event looms larger in the public mind at this point, the QE2's embarrassing Christmas trial run that ended so abruptly when she limped back to Southampton on one engine, or her departure last month for New York as the flagship of the nation, a proud symbol of British craftsmaship.

Quite naturally Neil Potter and Jack Frost, authors of The Mary and The Elizabeth, choose to ignore the abortion and concentrate instead on giving a very full account fo "Betsy the Second" from drawing board to maiden voyage.

They are obviously determined to challenge Dr. Johnson's definition of a ship ("a prison, with the chance of being drowned") by almost overwhelming the reader with fussy little details of the QE2's lavish facilities and "ageless" equipment.

For instance, they assure us that "75 per cent of the passengers can enjoy a view of the sea from their cabins" and they dwell lovingly on such attractions as "she has the most technically advanced funnel" and "names given to the decks are in the modern idiom with a 'sea-going tang'."

Not a rivet escapes their attention.

IT'S ADAPTABLE

Of course, it's possible that the reader who likes to become involved with ships will want to know there are 140 waiters in the Grill Room and that the two million square feet of Formica decorative laminate which cover the walls of cabins and bathrooms do not look like laminate at all.

Of more interest for the general reader is this book's fascinating history of the idea of the new Cunarder. The authors have described with some skill how Cunard had to discard its 1930 attitudes in order to produce the most modern liner in the world, a large adaptable ship that would be at home equally as a trans-Atlantic ferry and as a cruising vessel.

This revitalization of thinking on the part of the Cunard Line is presumably going to be rewarded by the QE2's success.

Certainly, this absorbing and painstaking study of the development of a great commercial concept leaves no doubt in our minds about the great future of the new Queen.

A Plague of Red Butterflies Flits Around Nordic Health Bug

THE BUTTERFLY PLAGUE, by Tomothy Findley. Macmillan of Canada. 376 pp. $8.75. THE FIREFLY HUNT, by James Burke. Collins. 252 pp. $4.95. A TOUCH OF DANIEL, by Peter Tinniswood. Musson Book Co. 319 pp. $4.95.

Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins

The Butterfly Plague is far too long and untidy, yet its effect is nonetheless disturbing. Findley's allegory is open to a number of interpretations, but basically the plague of red butterflies that descends on California is symbolic of human bloodlust.

The story begins in 1938 and focuses on a segment of the Hollywood film colony who glitter through life (like butterflies) while war begins to rumble over Europe.

There's a lot about blood (three of the main characters are hemophiliacs) and there's a lot about fire, too, which seems to act as a supporting metaphor.

However, the most effective parts of the book are those in which the absurdist fable works towards revealing the human predicament. The film people visit a wildlife sanctuary full of celluloid vegetation; it catches fire, and the animals dash out in panic only to be held in by the wire fences that surround the place.

Their agonizing deaths are observed, and promptly put out of mind, by the visitors who have escaped.

It is this sort of episode, symbolic of the situation in Europe before the last war, that proves so disturbing. Most of them are clustered around the enigmatic figure of Ruth Haddon, an Olympic swimmer whose Nordic strength makes her something of a German health-figure.

She becomes the unwitting victimizer of thousands of human guinea-pigs, and returns to America full of the nightmare which she has glimpsed but only half-understood.

James Burke's The Firefly Hunt takes another metaphor, "a man's home is his castle," and makes it the basis of an absudist fable about an individual's struggle against the sustem.

Timothy Badger is on the run from society. Paying no taxes, living in rooming-houses, taking jobs as a casual laborer, he occasionally hurls a potshot at the establishment by mailing parcels containing loudly ticking alarm-clocks to certain public figures.

Then his uncle leaves him a neo-Gothic castle in the middle of a Canadian metropolis and he entrenches himself against the siege of bureaucrats and money-grubbers.

The writing is lively and stimulating in its intelligence, but to my taste the whole fable is too far removed from the average experience so that the book becomes a hybrid extravaganza.

DOWN-TO-EARTH

On the other hand, nothing could be more down to earth than Peter Tinniswood's A Touch Of Daniel. It is a very funny book indeed, packed with situations that become comic in their utter typicality, in the manner of the BBC's TV saga Coronation Street.

Tinniswood has a marvellous ear for dialogue, catching exactly the right idiom in exactly the right tone. Yet the odd thing about this novel is that though it is as hilarious in its seeming simplicity as Three Men in a Boat, it goes to prove that one apparently can't write that sort of a book these days.

The novel begins with a flip reference to death: "When Auntie Edna fell off the bus, she landed on her pate and remained unconscious for 63 days. At the end of this period she died, and they had a funeral."

The book continues in the same amusingly casual and unanalytical style, but gradually the dark notes increase until they have completely taken over. By the end, the folksy northern humor takes second place to a fabulous story about a baby whose touch has strange restorative powers.

Apparently modern comedy has to be absurd or "black."

'Make The Book Shut Once'

SAUERKRAUT AND ENTERPRISE, by Edna Staebler. McClelland and Stewart. $3.95 cloth, $1.95 paper.

The Old Order Mennonites of Waterloo County, Ont., eat bread and jam at the beginning of every meal. Then come the enormous servings of drepsley (dripped batter) soup, dandelion salad, schnitz and knepp and shoo-fly pie and all the other delicacies for which the Mennonites are justly famed.

This little book is like the bread and jam. It offers some basic information about Mennonite and Amish customs but never gets to the feast of history and character and anecdote that such a picturesque people must surely be rich in.

The Mennonites migrated from Pennsylvania (before that from Switzerland) in 1800; though most scattered across the country, members of the Old Order have stayed close to the original settlements near Waterloo and Kitchener.

They speak Pennsylvania Dutch among themselves, wear a plain costume that hasn't changed much since the 16th century, refuse to buy cars and radios, and regard most modern comforts as morally dangerous.

They do not attempt to convert others to their faith but keep themselves quietly and strickly to themselves.

The average outsider knows of their quaint English dialect ("Make the light on once") and their superb cooking; one feels that the author of this book, privileged to have shared fine meals in Mennonite homes and to have talked freely with friends there, could have told so much more than she does about both these topics.

The main problem seems to be that the book is a collection of magazine articles here reprinted with little or no editorial supervision.

The last chapter sings the glories of Kitchener and Waterloo — guide-book facts served up in a glow of civic pride. Another good piece that would have been best left in the magazine. "Make the book shut once".—J.C.

It's Powerful, It's Boring And Then There's Tom Titt

SEND DOWN A DOVE by Charles MacHardy. Collins, $4.95.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

This novel depicting life aboard British submarine Scorpion during the 1939-1945 war, takes its title from one of the more respectable songs that sailors sing:

O, Lord above, send down a dove
With wings as sharp as razors
To cut the throats, of them there blokes
Wot sells bad beer to sailors.

The words express at once the hope and defiance of the common sailor in the face of hardship and injustice.

Charles MacHardy saw action with the submarine service during the war; consequently he writes of the life of the men aboard these vessels with sympathy and accuracy of detail.

GRUMBLING DISLIKE

In all its stern harshness it is depicted here. The characters act and speak as such characters surely would have acted and spoken.

They possess in common a grumbling dislike of the officers over them, and of the privileges which rank allows. As men under tension will, they argue and squabble among themselves.

It is a harsh, brutal, bloody existence that MacHardy depicts. At times the reader needs a strong stomach to take the language and the action.

It is very much a man's book; women appear only in glimpses, as nothing more than the stuff of short-lived, unreal, distant dreams.

They are symbols of love and warmth and life that have no place in a world that is cold with hatred and death.

TOO MUCH JARGON

Even those readers who are not repelled by the life depicted in Send Down a Dove will find that there are some serious flaws in the novel. Perhaps the most irritating weakness arises from MacHardy's tendency to include far too much unimportant detail about the routine business of operating a submarine.

Many readers will wish for a diagram of the vessel; others will long for a glossary to explain the technical jargon and slang terms used by the crew.

It is also rather difficult to accept as the hero of a war novel a seaman named Tom Titt.

In fact, an irritatingly disproportionately high number of the characters have monosyllabic names: Corr, Bain, Wells, Blow and Rice are but a few.

Apparently it is only when one moves up into the ranks of the officers that one is entitled to a surname of two or more syllables.

Send Down a Dove, then, is a very uneven novel. At times the narrative is vivid and powerful; at times it is so preoccupied with trivia as to be almost unbearably boring.

Golden Age World Of Innocent Ninnies

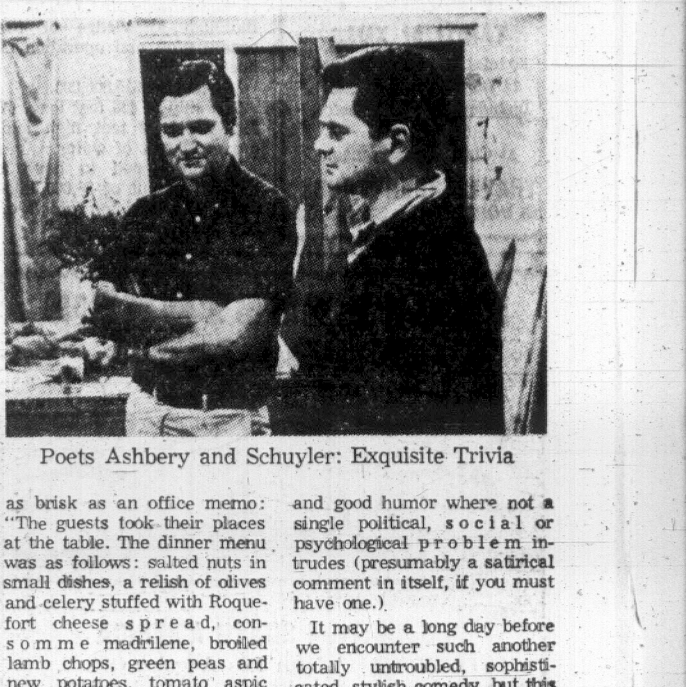
Reviewed by Joan Coldwell



Poets Ashbery and Schuyler: Exquisite Trivia

This is the kind of novel where it doesn't matter in the least if you are told every detail of what happens in the plot. Just think of how two likeable surburban New York families might make life pleasant for themselves — by eating, drinking and taking holiday trips — and there you have it.

The authors seem to have adopted Oscar Wilde's comic method of treating "all the trivial things of life seriously, and all the serious things of life with sincere and studied triviality."

SELDOM WEAK

In such writing, of course, style is the vital thing and the two American poets who have concocted this delightful novel seldom strike a weak note. The slightly stylized dialogue is hard to define exactly. The book jacket suggests that the "conversation has a kind of surreality, as if overheard out of context on a bus" but this does not seem to come close enough to a kind of formality there, reminiscent of Ivy Compton-Burnett's dialogue. Several of the characters are French and it seems that the others often adopt the precise enunciation of those mentally converting a foreign language into English as they speak.

(Just one hail-fellow-well-met New Yorker is consistently colloquial: "Both sky and sea grew pale beside Irving Kelso's shirt, on which azure and indigo nightjars were at work and play. 'It was certainly big of your dad,' he said, 'to cough up enough of the green stuff so that Victor could join us — I mean right after he got booted out of Syracuse'.")

Sometimes the narrative also used a comic heightening, suggestive of unskilled translations of epic poetry: "The hour was now far advanced, and the clientele of the bistroquet could be observed drifting out in twos and threes with all deliberate speed . . .

"It was decreed that the Carlsbad and Bridgewater tables be pushed together in such a manner as to accommodate all the friends at a single festive board, and to allow Mildred Kelso to converse with the hirsute youths who had so unexpectedly opened up new pathways in music appreciation."

At other times the prose is as brisk as an office memo: "The guests took their places at the table. The dinner menu was as follows: salted nuts in small dishes, a relish of olives and celery stuffed with Roquefort cheese spread, consomme madrilene, broiled lamb chops, green peas and new potatoes, tomato aspic salad, baked Alaska. Rolls and demitasse. The demitasse was served in the living room."

It is no accident that both of these quotations treat of festive fare. Eating and drinking, with details of the menus take up a considerable portion of the action (the characters sit down to eat 21 times and drink on 23 occasions.) Perhaps this is what makes this such a happy book. All the characters are just nice people enjoying life — ninnies maybe, but in the old sense of "innocents," who create a Golden Age world of pleasure and good humor where not a single political, social or psychological problem intrudes (presumably a satirical comment in itself, if you must have one.)

It may be a long day before we encounter such another totally untroubled, sophisticated, stylish comedy, but this one is clearly destined for a long life.

Skyscrapers Exist Oxford Concedes

POCKET OXFORD DICTIONARY, Fifth Edition, $3.50, Oxford University Press.

Canadian Press Review

To a purist in the English language, "contact" is a noun and forever shall be. "presently" means "in a moment," not right now.

But what better word than "skyscraper" adequately depicts the immensity of a building that reaches almost into the clouds?

Even the Fowler brothers have succumbed.

Oxford won't go for the vulgarisms of everyday life but in the fifth edition of its Pocket Dictionary it reflects changes that have occurred since the last edition was published in 1942. Newly added words set the contemporary scene.

There are not only words of the new technology: cybernetics, laser, maser, sputnik, and so on. There are also the domestic words that tell a story of shopping in the supermarket for scampi and paperbacks, of drip-dry T shirts for teen-agers, of golden handshakes and retirement pensions, of sacred cows and saunas.

New senses are added to old words: there are sick jokes, and surgical transplants. More-subtle changes are made in definitions and illustrative quotations.

The Pocket Oxford Dictionary was compiled by the Fowler brothers, famous for their books on English usage, and first published in 1924. The fifth edition has been revised by E. McIntosh with etymologies revised by G. W. S. Friedrichsen.

A feature of the new edition is the supplement of nearly 1,200 Australian and New Zealand words, many of them unknown outside the two countries.

Canadian Quality Can Compete!

VICTORIA: In the past many people felt that in order to obtain quality a product must be imported. A watch must be Swiss, wines French, etc.

This is no longer the case. We travel to these once distant countries and find people not unlike ourselves.

Is there any reason then why we cannot compete if we are willing to produce a quality product at a reasonable price?

A Victoria manufacturer feels we can. They have so much faith in the quality of their product that they guarantee it for twice the normal period, give a two week free trial and sell it for half the price paid for imports. NOW . . . Rock Goes Rural

By RUSSELL FREETHY

Freethy

A little more than a year ago, Roger McGuinn told me that country-flavored rock was to be the new happening. Judging by the quantity and quality of this type of music that is now being programed on both FM and AM stations, and by those artists and groups that have switched to this sound or returned to it, "rural rock", as it is tagged, is fast becoming the most commercial contemporary sound around.

This music is not just country and western, Tammy Wynette-type trash — it is a careful blending of styles from that idiom as well as from folk, electric and hard rock.

The Byrds have recorded two albums along these lines. The Flying Burrito Brothers are into it. Baez has done Dylan's songs with a country backing and Dylan himself has his million-selling Nashville Skyline album.

The Band, who have just recently returned to touring, put out "rural rock" with intricate simplicity. The Grateful Dead perform folksy, country rock exclusively, and the Kalidiescope have been doing it for years. So have the Lovin' Spoonful and Buffalo Springfield.

Elyse Weinberg, Lightfoot and even Judy Collins, Cohen and Joni Mitchell lend the folk influence to this music. Not to mention John Hartford (Gentle On My Mind), Steve Young, and Peter Yarrow.

* * *

Perhaps the most commercial of all the groups that are currently performing in this country-oriented bag are Love and Poco.

Although Arthur Lee has completey renovated his old Elektra group, resulting in a much tighter group from an instrumental and performance standpoint Poco has the edge (and more money).

The thick crescendoing guitar textures of Poco's music is more than slightly reminiscent of the Buffalo Springfield.

And so it should be. For the bassist is Richie Furay and the rythmn guitarist is Jim Messina, both of whom were with that group until it disbanded.

Tastseful drumming in contributed by George Grantham, who played with Young in an unknown group called — can you get this, — Boenzye Creouer.

Poco has been well-received in New York and should soon be appearing on the West Coast.

The first album for the group (Epic BN 26460) has just been released and I have heard four cuts from it, Pickin Up the Pieces" (the title tune), Calico Lady, Nobody's Fool and Short Changed.

Any one of these cuts would be suitable for top forty play, but it will probably take area and local stations forever before they realize it.

* * *

Canadian singer-composer, Neil Young has released his second album on Reprise since he left the Buffalo Springfield. He also is on the country trail and is doing very well on his current tour.

He is now accompanied by a backing group called Crazy Horse on tour and in the studio.

Seven original compositions are included on the set, but of special interest is the nine minute Down By the River.

Always a creative combination, Roger McGuinn and Bob Dylan have completed the score for Columbia Pictures' film Easy Rider, starring Peter Fonda.

If the film flops it certainly won't be on account of the score.

One of the most talented of the contemporary singer-songwriters is Joni Mitchell, naturally. With a bit of luck, she may make the charts with a track or two from her second album before another artist does.

Entitled Clouds, this set contains Both Sides Now and in it, as with her first offering, she plays piano and her guitar and sings her songs in a wholly distinctive manner — the way she feels them; the way they should be sung.

Some months ago this column elaborated on the talents of Felix Pappalardi, the producer of the late Cream. It was mentioned then that he was about to embark on a new career as a vocalist.

He has formed his own group, a trio named Mountain, and has produced an album for it which has received considerable FM exposure on the east coast and in California even before it has been placed with a label. With the exception of Dylan's Wheels On Fire all the material is original.

* * *

An exceptional guitarist, he performs equally well on a variety of other instruments and will add his bass to the guitar of Lesley West and the drums of N. D. Smart.

Pappalardi will begin touring with Mountain shortly and word has it that they will share the bill with Blind Faith on several dates during the summer.

Last 'Dumbell' Dies at 80

OTTAWA (CP) — Percy Hamilton Campbell, 80, one of the last surviving members of the First World War all-soldier review known as The Dumbells, died Friday.

Pvt. Campbell joined the music and comedy team designed to boost morale in the trenches in 1918 after serving for nearly two years with the 58th Canadian Battalion in France and Germany.

He had been at the National Defence Medical Centre for a year prior to his death. Mr. Campbell was born in Hamilton and later resided in Bristol, Que.

There Are Far Too Many Words For Any Dramatic Impact

Diamond In the Groove

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Puntila, an opera by Paul Dessau based on a play by Bertolt Brecht; DGG 139 280-81.

No matter how many times I listen to Puntila it remains a Teutonically didactic intoned play with superb, extensive incidental music — not an opera.

The failure of the opera to synthesize is not surprising in view of the history of its composition.

Brecht finished the play in 1940 and Dessau wrote incidental music for it. The basic precept of the play, that a prosperous landowner suffers from periodic attacks of total, senseless sobriety might suggest a comedy or even a farce but not in the hands of teacher-Brecht.

Primarily concerned with describing the contrasting, schizophrenic sides of this man's nature and their socio-psychological effects, Brecht went further to describe in some detail, the attitudes and situations of those with whom he came into contact.

So the basic dialogue of the opera comes from a play which, instead of developing dramatically, merely poses contrasts and comments upon their implications.

Even though, in writing his opera, Dessau had to cut down the original dialogue and thus give greater prominence to Puntila himself, there are still far too many words for dramatic impact.

One is tied irrevocably to a text, to lengthy descriptions and myriads of fragmentary scenes as the story follows Puntila around.

Puntila's character is confusing in that he does not really become wholly transformed when affected by liquor.

Certainly he sees two forks where there is one when he is in his normal, drunken state of bonhommie and he becomes more aggressively the wealthy landowner when his attack reduces him to facing the reality of a single fork, but in both states, traces of the other nature are discernible and his moods change from moment to moment.

Sober, Sensible

The matter is further complicated in that Puntila represents one class while Matti, the ideal servant represents the sober, sensible, virile and independent working man.

Puntila's shrill-voiced daughter who succumbs to Matti's attractions but fails to qualify as a chauffeur's wife when she reckons herself insulted by a pat on the behind — a sad shortcoming in the wife of a servant in those days — complicates the action yet further.

The casual way in which Puntila upsets the lives of poorer people who depend on him is strongly contrasted by his socialistic ideals which prevent him from contracting with a servant from the market as he would buy a cow.

Sung Speech

All this remains a discussion of the dialogue, the original Brecht play, for the matter completely dominates the music.

That Dessau chose to compose on a tone-row emphasises this disparity for there is very little conventional melody, some lyrical lines but a great deal of sprechgesang (sung speech) which frequently descends to the level of normal speech for contrast effect.

With the exception of an accordion melody used to introduce the servants off-duty, and a sort of Red River Valley tune to which the aspiring working-class brides set their own words, there is no conventional melody in this opera. It gives in fact an overall impression of linked recitatives unrelieved by arias.

Limited

The music seldom accompanies the singer even on the few occasion when true singing is introduced. Most of the time it is limited to appropriate interjections at strategic points in the longer speeches or musical commentary between sections.

The saxey wiggle which accompanies Eva's husky-throated efforts to vamp Matti, the rolling drunken sounds of the opening and the fishlike contortions in the description of the simple life, all these are fine but they remain incidental music.

Vivid Picture

I could not but compare this with Elgar's Falstaff which, by taking the concept behind the character and abandoning words, draws so much more vivid and realistic a picture than the text-anchored descriptions Dessau limits himself to.

The voices used in this recording are good. Reiner Sub has a wide vocal range which allows him to move from the rich bass tones to the squeaking high-pitched question-marks called for in the often shapeless vocal line.

Kurt Rehm as Matti sounds stocky, strong and sensible and Irmgard Arnold adds shrill shrewish tones to the role of Eva.

IT'S PRIME ENTERTAINMENT

For two weeks in July there will be a concentrated making of music under the banner of Victoria Fair.

As befits the University of Victoria-sponsored summer festival, its core provides exceptional learning opportunities for students both in the music and theatre areas.

But also, being a professional summer festival that hopefully will establish continuity as a major Canadian festival in ensuing years, Victoria Fair will provide exceptional and prime-quality entertainment for residents and visitors.

For music students there will be a workshop in chamber music during the two weeks from July 7-18.

Daily sessions from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. will encompass coaching and rehearsal in the music wing of Uvic's MacLaurin Building.

The faculty, a distinguished group of visiting and resident artists, includes many of the performers who will take part in the Victoria Fair concerts.

14 CONCERTS

There will be a series of 14 concerts which will include two piano recitals by the brilliant young English pianist, David Wilde, song recitals by soprano Audrey Farnell, Winnipeg tenor Victor Martens and new Victoria resident, soprano Catherine Young.

Mrs. Farnell and Martens are two of three artists-in-residence for the period, brought to Uvic by a Canada Council grant.

The third is young Canadian cellist Sharon McKinley.

Artist in residence at Southampton University in England, Miss McKinley is a member of the university's trio which has just won the BBC's prize for trios.

RECITAL

It will be playing at the Cheltenham Festival immediately before Miss McKinley's departure to Canada.

She will be heard three times, including an ensemble performance and a full-length recital.

Robin Wood will close the concert series with performances of Copland's Piano Fantasy and Beethoven's last great sonata on July 25.

The Brno Children's Choir from Czechoslovakia will sing on the evening of July 10, and Dr. Bernard Rose of Madgalen College, Oxford, is to give an organ recital and will direct the University of Victoria Chamber Singers.

Other artists resident in the city who are taking part in the series are Jack Kessler, Hugh McLean, Elfrieda Gleam, James Hunter and Winifred Scott.

OPENS JULY 4

Victoria Fair's concert program opens July 4 with a program that includes a wind ensemble, the Victoria Trio in Ravel's Piano Trio, Audrey Farnell and David Wilde in songs by Faure, Victor Martens singing lieder and Mozart's clarinet quintet.

Season tickets which are transferable, offer a 40 per cent discount on single admissions.

Instinct—Journey of Discovery

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Returning to Shakespeare this summer is a journey of discovery for red-haired, 23-year-old Canadian actor, Neil Munro.

After roles at Stratford last summer, came a winter season of television engagements in Toronto and contemporary plays with the new, professional Theatre Calgary.

Now he is in Victoria rehearsing Shakespeare's romantic Bassanio in The Merchant of Venice and Laertes in Hamlet, two of the three Victoria Fair plays to be staged at McPherson Playhouse in July and August.

"I enjoy doing modern roles but I'm happy to get back to Shakespeare for a time," he says.

REALLY WORKS!

"I'm interested in finding out if my instinct about it is the same — if it really works."

The "instinct" he speaks of is housed in the belief that Shakespeare's people must take precedence over his poetry.

An ear for music, a sense of rhythm are essential to the Shakespearean actor, he agrees, but self-conscious utterance of poetry inhibits the creation of real human characters.

MUSIC FIRST

He had thought of a musical vocation before turning to the theatre. For eight years he played the trumpet and in his teens had his own jazz and dance bands, for which he frequently made the musical arrangements.

"I tried to keep up my trumpet playing after I enrolled at the National Theatre School," he comments, "but it soon got to be impossible. You can't do your best at anything if you try to concentrate on too many areas."

Although he has entered a professional acting career through the portals of the National Theatre School, he has reservations about how much an actor can be taught in a school.

"But experience in classical acting is vitally important as a basis for all acting." He is definite on that point.

EYES, EARS ONLY

He says that young actors coming out of theatre schools tend to be very opinionated but if they are wise they will keep their mouths shut, their eyes and ears open and just do what they're told.

"When I became a member of the Stratford Festival company, at first, in rehearsal breaks, seasoned members of the company would ask me what I thought — just to be friendly I guess.

"I told them. And it didn't go down at all well."

Asked if he had any thoughts of going to England or the United States to pursue his theatre career, he considered a moment before shaking his head.

There is one important thing for the actor starting out to keep in mind — connections.

"You work with somebody, he moves on to another place, an opening occurs and he remembers you.

For instance I got to know Christopher Newton (also in Victoria to play Hamlet) at Stratford.

"When he became artistic director of Theatre Calgary he asked me to come there to play leads in Black Comedy a play by Canadian author, James Reany. After that came the suggestion that I should join the Victoria Fair company."

Merchant of Venice closes Victoria Fair on Aug. 30 and after that Neil Munro goes back to Calgary as a salaried member of the only permanent theatre company in Western Canada.

DEADLINE EXTENDED

Deadline for discounts on season tickets for Victoria Fair's three McPherson Playhouse productions has been extended to Wednesday.

Purchase of season tickets—which are transferable—for Hamlet, The Merchant of Venice and Tartuffe, can mean a saving of almost 20 per cent if made before that date.

Full information on Victoria Fair events can be obtained by writing Box 1700, Victoria, or by telephone, 477-4821.

Dyson Joins Smile Show

From Amahl and the Night Visitors to the Smile Show via My Fair Lady is the interesting show business route taken by city singer Bill Dyson.

Bill is one of three newcomers to the famous Jerry Gosley show, now in preparation for the June 28 start of its eight week run at Langham Court Theatre.

By public request the run has been extended from its usual seven weeks, with the final performance scheduled for Aug. 23.

The two other young people in the London music hall-type program, though new to the Smile Show cast are known widely in the Victoria area.

They are dancers Cam Connolly and Lana Check.

Familiar talents returning to the cast are, besides Jerry himself, Bill and Sylvia Hosie, Ian McIntyre, Pam Trueman and Clare Wynters.

Great Teacher's Work, Influence Will Live On

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It is almost a year ago since there died, in a London, England, hospital, the shy, gentle musician to whom Victoria's musical population owes so much more than perhaps it has fully realized.

Stanley Shale, who loved his London deeply but who spent many years in this city which he also loved, was a sensitive, intellectual pianist of impeccable taste and discernment.

But most important to us as his heirs, was the fact that he was a great teacher. He had a fabulous gift for opening the minds of his students to the inner truth of the music, for encouraging original thought and discovery, for moulding taste.

He brought those who were moderately talented to levels they could not have achieved without his inspiration and made it possible for the uniquely gifted to come to the fullest realization of their powers.

Much of the excellent music-making and outstanding teaching now being done — which is steadily and surely developing Victoria into a leading music centre in Western Canada — can be laid originally to his influence.

Greatest of his students, Robin Wood, whom he taught from the age of 10 until he won a Royal Academy of Music scholarship and went to England, now heads the already widely reputed Victoria Conservatory of Music.

•

On Wednesday, in the conservatory's recital room at Craigdarroch Castle, Stanley Shale's memory will be honored in a way that would have delighted him as nothing else could.

The event will be a piano recital by a most outstanding young artist of this city who is in turn a student of Wood and a junior teacher in the conservatory.

She is Linn Hendry whose outstanding virtuoso and artistic ability led to the offer of an English scholarhsip two years ago. She returned to the conservatory last summer after spending a year studying in London.

Her recital has been designated as a Stanley Shale memorial scholarship concert and all admission fees or contributions will be used to establish a permanent musical scholarship fund in his name.

LINN HENDRY
. . . "rich" program

Miss Hendry's program selections will delight the discerning and stir the admirer of virtuoso performance.

She has chosen Bach, the Toccata in G major; Beethoven's Sonata Op. 31, No. 2 (The Tempest); Brahms' Op. 119; the Hindemith Sonata No. 2; Chopin E major Scherzo, No. 4, and Debussy's Suite Pour le Piano.

Considering the richness of the program material and splendid talent of the artist; and remembering the debt musicians and music lovers owe the teacher whose work here spanned three decades, it becomes a privilege to have some part in this act of memoriam.

Artist Willing To Go Exploring

By GORDON RICE

A short while ago Victoria artist Flemming Jorgensen began working with a technique that was new for him and seemed full of possibilities.

While some of his new paintings suggest, intentionally, the outdoor space he had been painting, they are all highly abstract. And they are predominantly white.

White and Grey Become Colors

The show, which runs through June 28, consists of four large acrylic paintings and 12 collages.

The paintings have a subtle and exquisite color; this is most evident in the two "landscape section" convases. In these, color that might seem slight and vague at a casual glance becomes full and definite with a little attention.

Creamy whites and bluish whites meet at edges painted with a severe precision. Light white is contrasted with slightly graying whites and takes on a fluorescent quality. Shapes painted with a delicate sheen contrast with areas painted matte. White and gray, in these new paintings, definitely become colors, and interesting colors.

Ask yourself if these pictures balance, if they have stability. You'll see not only that they do, but you'll gain an insight into the processes involved in making pictures.

You'll notice how the introduction of low-keyed pinks and yellows doesn't disturb the balance of the whites and grays. You'll sense, perhaps, the way in which soft pencil lines, deep charcoal lines, and the hard precise contour lines left by the masking tape all contrast with one another in a balanced relationship.

It is interesting, too, to contrast these two "landscape sections" paintings with the studies Jorgensen has made, for them. These studies are collages, made with pencil and watercolor on heavy paper.

Several drawings have been cut up, trimmed, and then pasted together as one drawing in a way which is quite subtle. The artist seems very relaxed here, in these studies, but it is the relaxation which follows a great deal of effort and necessary uncertainty.

Any real exploration in art gets one into uncertainty. The good thing is that some artists are willing to be uncertain and take chances, for the sake of making new discoveries.

It should be added that these studies are finished works, in a sure and certain style.

It's interesting to ponder the relationship between these pictures and what we know of landscape in our everyday vision. This is stretching it, perhaps, but one of the "landscape section" studies might remind you of a louvred window. Each pane of louvred glass, cocked at a different angle, is reflecting a different section of the clouds above. The hatched lines of pencil, in different thicknesses, do seem to hang and float like vapors.

Then again, a very thin strip of paper, cut from a larger watercolor, suggests a lot of activity seen through a tiny crack in the blinds. This cut-paper technique has its origins in a style called Cubism, but is here quite removed from the original Braque and Picasso collages.

Jorgensen is very much concerned with problems of visual design. Yet the most basic exercise in balance, unity, and distribution becomes for him the occasion for a refined playing with visual effects.

It's been said that good artists always return to the basic elements of their craft. In doing so they rediscover, and come to understand better, the underlying basis of their ways of working.

These pictures have a refreshing simplicity to them because of this, but beyond this, they have a lot about them which is far out and quite surprising. When you try to examine closely, basically, just what you are doing in your art, you stop taking your way of working for granted.

If you then abandon something that you've been doing, and which your regular viewers expect of you, it's because you've seen new and refreshing possibilities.

Gondolas Stop In Protest

Farmhands and mental-hospital employees have also joined the list of workers on strike throughout Italy.

The gondoliers went on strike Friday but were scheduled to return to work today. All kinds of boats use the canals in Venice and the gondoliers want some reserved for the exclusive use of gondolas.

Garbagemen in Rome are seeking higher wages and less stairway climbing. The strike has lasted a week.

King and I Has a Fall Date

Following the outstanding box office success of the Victoria Operatic Society's production of My Fair Lady, the society has selected Rodgers and Hammerstein's The King and I as its fall production.

Auditions will be held for all parts June 23 and 25 at 8 p.m. in Servitus Hall on Superior Street. The auditions are open to anyone interested.

Stage director for The King and I will be Allan Purdy who previously directed Oklahoma and The Red Mill for VOS.

At the annual meeting held this week, Janet Senior was elected president by acclamation. She succeeds Gwen Glew who has just completed her two-year term.

Garden Club To Hold Show

The Esquimalt Garden Club will hold a show and competition in the Jubilee Hall, Fraser Street, as part of the municipality's Buccaneer Day festivities.

The event will take place Saturday, June 21, from 2 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Many categories will be listed in the adult section and a special event for children has been planned, a miniature garden competition.

MARKET REVIEW

Friday Rally Ends Sharpest Slump Ever

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Friday the 13th, to the superstitious, is known as a day of bad luck, but for Canadian stock markets this week the 13th held only good news.

The sharpest nine-day slump in the history of Canadian markets was interrupted Friday after stocks plunged to their lowest levels since last October.

The slump, which began June 2, one day before the federal budget was brought down, extended the markets' decline to four consecutive weeks.

The real plunge began Monday following increases in United States bank prime rates to a record 8½ per cent from 7½.

The Bank of Canada quickly followed the American increases by raising its lending rate to 7½ per cent from seven Tuesday.

And as expected, all major Canadian chartered banks lifted their prime rates to eight per cent from 7½ Wednesday with the exception of the Toronto-Dominion Bank.

The Toronto-Dominion rate, which was moved up to 7⅝ per cent from 7½ June 6, was further increased to 8¼ per cent Wednesday.

Friday's rally was expected as most observers were certain some investors would enter the market for "bargains" or to average down their losses inflicted by the slump.

But most analysts said the rally might end abruptly if interest rates are suddenly raised again — which is what most financial experts are predicting will happen.

Central banks in Canada and the United States have for some months undertaken a policy of monetary restraint to curb rising inflation.

The result is that credit is harder to come by even at increasingly expensive rates.

One observer said he was surprised that Canadian rates did not come up to or surpass the new American rates.

He said that Canadian rates traditionally have been on the same level with or higher than U.S. rates and that he expected another rate jump possibly within a month.

For the last three years in Canada, money, while becoming more and more expensive to borrow, has not necessarily been tight — until now.

The prospect of a federal budget surplus will take some pressure off Ottawa's borrowing needs and will allow the Bank of Canada to rein in the money supply to fight inflaton.

Tight money limits inflaton becuse the money is scarcer with the effect of less spending power in the economy.

Therefore, it is more difficult for corporations and governments to raise and spend money for new factories, new roads and other projects.

In the last several years, the Bank of Canada has been restricting the ability on the part of chartered banks to make loans.

Ford Plant Picketed

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Several hundred dayshift employees of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. stayed off their jobs today but a company spokesman said production continued at a reduced level.

The spokesman said the workers are protesting the company's implementation of a 56-hour week for dayshift employees. The union claims the men, on a 40-hour week, should not be required to work more than eight hours overtime a week.

The spokesman said the company is requiring longer hours from workers because of an increased demand for production of the new Maverick compact car which is made at the plant.

Workers set up picket lines early today, but the spokesman said they were abandoned after more than half of the dayshift employees reported for work.

French Trade Deficit Up

PARIS (Reuters) — The French external trade deficit increased by about $58,000,000 in May, provisional figures issued by the finance ministry indicates.

The May deficit was $306,000,000 compared with a deficit of $248,000,000 in April.

Officials blamed the deterioration in the country's commercial position to buoyant demand on the home market, which is not only absorbing imports but also potential exports.

Since the imposition of exchange controls in November, reserves in France have been sapped by the imbalance of trade and capital movements have been restricted severely. were mainly responsible for a decline in non-durables production. The decline was general in non-durables, except for output of knitting mills and the textile industry.

Wall Street Stocks Hit Low For Year

NEW YORK (WP) — Monetary and economic problems gnawed through Wall Street this week, touching off active liquidation that sent stock prices to their lowest postings of the year.

Headaches were pinned to the uncertainties surrounding the fate of the 10 per cent income tax surcharge, which is scheduled to expire at the end of this month unless a rebellious Congress reverses its field, and repeal of the 7 per cent investment tax credit, an administration idea which has also run into roadblocks.

Compounding the grief is the probability that failure to enact the twin anti-inflation measures will open the doors to imposition of wage and price controls—a tough pill for a performance-oriented market to swallow.

While the jockeying went on in Washington between administration economic experts and congressional leaders, the Dow Jones industrial average tumbled 29.93 to a close at 894.84. The decline plunged the Dow to its lowest levels of the year before a mild Friday rally brought a respite.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite dropped 3.47 points to 98.61 and the New York Stock Exchange index fell 2.08 points to 55.00.

Volume for the week climbed to 59.85 million shares from the 56.1 million turned over a week earlier.

The overall box sore was no contest as declining stock swamped gainers at 1,501 to 160. In the previous week, 1152 issues fell and 450 rose. New 1969 lows totalled 721, nearly double the previous week's 364, as 18 stocks reached new highs, down from 79.

Wall Street talk during the week was all money—its cost, its availability and, in light of the strong inflationary pressures, its buying power.

Monday's boost in banks' prime lending rates to a record 8½ per cent, combined with the statement by Treasury Secretary David Kennedy that failure to extend the surtax and repeal the investment credit would raise the strong possibility of controls, hit Wall Street a double-barreled blow. By and large, the street has been focusing on the persistence of the inflation in spite of government counter-actions and on common stocks as a hedge against the erosion of the dollar. The week's events seemed to bring home the other side of the coin, the likelihood of even stronger measures to cut down on business activity and hold back the surge of prices.

U.S. STEEL MAKES PACT AGAINST MONOPOLIZING

By JOHN P. MACKENZIE

WASHINGTON (WP) — United States Steel agreed Friday not to use its economic muscle and reciprocal purchasing arrangements with suppliers to monopolize steel markets and deprive certain suppliers of a share of the steelmaker's own market for raw materials.

U.S. Steel and the justice department filed a proposed consent judgment in the federal court in Pittsburgh, ending a major lawsuit as quickly as it was filed.

Under the agreement the steelmaker was able to state it would comply with antitrust law while denying any violation. A court judgment would have opened U.S. Steel to expensive private damage suits. And the government won a sweeping and detailed court order without going to trial.

Veteran justice department trustbusers were cheered by the entire action as a fresh sign that the Nixon administration, like the Jonson administration, was committed to fighting reciprocity practices, the widespread business habit of channeling purchases to a supplier who favors one manufacturer's products when he buys.

The lawsuit was the first "pure reciprocity" action, where only the reciprocal trade relations are attacked. The previous administration sued two years ago, in a case still in pretrial states. to stop General Tire and Rubber Co. from allegedly using its purchasing power to coerce suppliers to buy its rubber products.

Utility Control Seen for Data

By G. S. KENT
Business Editor

The day when Big Brother has us in his clammy grip comes starkly closer when the computer has files on everyone. All kinds of people, and all kinds of information are grist for the data mill.

And electronic data processing people assure us that day is almost upon us.

The data bank concept, being developed rapidly in a wide variety of industries, is on the verge of such further development that would see unification of several data banks or even all data banks into a super storehouse of private information about ordinary people.

A touch of a button, literally, will yield such confidences as a man's stock holdings, his credit rating, his medical record, his international travels, bank balance, income, pension and employment records if the single data source becomes reality.

The prospect is disquieting. That insensible, impulse-motivated machine will spew facts indiscriminately, incapable of using discretion, yielding to all comers holding the right key.

The benefits to legitimate users of such information could be immense, but the loss of privacy by individuals would be beyond measure.

Two things are proposed to ameliorate this situation, one of which may take place before the creation of any single data bank in Canada. C. C. Gotlieb, director of the University of Toronto computing centre, this week urged at the Information Processing Society of Canada meeting in Ottawa a committee to study the implications.

The security of information and the degree of privacy invasion would be under scrutiny.

Gotlieb said there are almost no legal safeguards to prevent files on individuals being used without their knowledge, or in ways which could be damaging.

The society agreed to set up the study and to hear a report at the annual meeting slated for Vancouver next year.

It will likely consider licensing or bonding of computer personnel for the exercise of professional privilege when making use of data; control over transmission of information between data banks, prohibiting such movement without permission; access to files by individuals who would have the right to request correction of errors.

The other thing is the prospect of designating data banks as public utilities, thus placing them under direct government control. Limitation on foreign ownership could be one of the areas dealt with by a regulatory commission.

Another might be prohibition on the movement of specified data across the international boundary, suggested Dr. J. H. Chapman, assistant deputy minister of research in the department of communications.

It might also be asked whether a common carrier, such as CN-CP Telecommunications, should offer computer services, he said.

●

"Time-sharing devices and computer utilities are in an area of explosive development," Dr. Chapman said.

"The department of communications is interested because if you take a computer, connect it to a communications system and add the necessary software, you have a utility."

Thus, many customers would be connected through remote input-output terminals to a master data storehouse on a regional, national or international network.

Chapman said a decision on whether unregulated, competing computer utilities would be permitted to develop in Canada would be decided in a few months. Privacy also would be considered, he said.

"We are moving towards a time when data banks will include information on a person's legal, medical and financial history.

"A very important traditional freedom of the individual is compromised if this information can be used for purposes which could be to his disadvantage," Chapman told the society.

Meanwhile, the computer industry continues to burgeon, with new companies and new share issues becoming the new darlings of the stock market.

Investment men are asking the same sort of questions about them that they were asking about real estate companies a few months ago — where is the performance record and how many computer-based businesses can the industry support? Can they all be successful? Only time and management — or lack of it — will tell.

STRIKES LOWER OUTPUT

OTTAWA (CP) — Strikes and other industrial bottlenecks caused a sharp decline in production in April, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports.

The bureau's industrial production index, based on 1961 output of manufacturing, mining and the utilities equalling 100, dropped to 167.7 from 171.1.

The drop wiped out the strong gain made in March and put the index back to about where it was in February.

Staff Urged to Study Wild, Conflicting Company Reports

Company statements or prospectuses making flagrant claims should be studied by a staff within their professional association, members of the B.C. Institute of Chartered Accountants said Friday.

V. H. Chadwick, of Chadwick, Potts and Co., Vancouver, spoke in summation following a group of seminars held by the institute at its annual meeting at the Empress Hotel.

He said a permanent staff should study egregious statements and where there are inconsistencies with bulletins or accepted accounting principles, they should be brought to the attention of the association's professional practices committee.

From there, such cases could be brought before the institute's ethics committee and if action is taken—such as a censure to a member—then a full report should be made public.

After making his report, Chadwick elaborated on this aspect by pointing out that some reports prepared by firms and financial institutions are impossible to decipher, mentioning a case that has recently come to public trial.

STUDY PROJECTIONS

In a similar vein, Chadwick reported there was agreement that accountants must study non-historical reports or statements, such as projections outlined by a company, to which accountants at present are prohibited by the Securities Act from attaching a certification.

There was criticism of the profession's relations with the public, Chadwick said.

Period publications are not sufficient to keep the public informed. "We should make pronouncements throughout the year (to show) that we are providing service, that we are policing ourselves and serving the community through the year," Chadwick said.

INCORPORATION OUT

Members rejected the notion that accountancy firms incorporate, or that companies invite public investment. The reasons against this are the necessity of maintaining personal liability (with malpractice liability insurance), and the risk of losing member-control of individual firms through diversified ownership.

"If we do (incorporate), our image is ruined," Chadwick said.

Another idea finding favor was a course outlining requirements of the superintendent of brokers, which are apart from those of Vancouver Stock Exchange, and to issue these in bulletin form.

Chadwick said some rulings of the superintendent are based on discretion rather than formal regulations or legislation which are already available in published form.

Veteran Belter One-Man Show For Baltimore

By The Canadian Press

Outfielder Frank Robinson went to great length Friday night to prove his value as a hitter for Baltimore Orioles.

The 33-year-old native of Beaumont, Tex. collected three singles and they all contributed runs as the Orioles came from behind in the late innings to trip Chicago White Sox 5-2.

In other American League baseball action Friday, Cleveland Indians downed Minnesota Twins 6-4, Oakland Athletics beat Boston Red Sox 4-1, Detroit Tigers blanked the expansion Kansas City Royals 6-0, Washington Senators bounced California Angels 6-2 and Seattle Pilots, the other new AL club, nipped New York Yankees 2-1.

THEY ALL HELP

With the White Sox ahead 1-0 in the sixth inning, Robinson gained his first single to place Baltimore's tying run into scoring position.

Two innings later, with the Orioles again behind by one run, Robinson connected for a two-out single and dashed across the plate to force another tying score.

With two out and the bases loaded in the ninth, he struck for a third time. The Orioles were ahead 3-2 and Robinson singled to drive across two insurance runs.

HAS EXTRA SENSE

"That's one thing about him," Baltimore manager Earl Weaver said, "He has that extra sense of doing the right thing at the right time.

"Frank started when the season started. He's done everything. He's done it all for us."

So far this season, Robinson has a .322 batting average, 14 home runs and 42 runs batted in.

Ken Suarez was the big man for Cleveland, triggering a four-run outburst with a homer in the sixth, and then driving in the decisive run in the ninth with a single.

Gene Brabender stopped the Yankees on four hits while the Pilots won the game in the eighth on Tommy Harper's run-scoring single off Mel Stottlemyre.

BEST PERCENTAGE

In the National League, Juan Marichal hurled San Francisco Giants to a 4-2 victory over Montreal Expos to step up with the best winning percentage in baseball.

Marishal's six-hitter raised his record this season to 7-2 and his career mark to 177-79, a .691 percentage. He had entered the contest tied with former New York Yankees ace Whitey Ford, who was 236-106 for .690.

In other National League games:

Rick Wise turned in a three-hitter in pitching Philadelphia Phillies past San Diego Padres 6-1, Alan Foster scattered seven hits as Los Angeles Angels nudged New York Mets 1-0, Pittsburgh Pirates edged Atlanta Braves 2-1, Houston Astros overcame St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 and, in the only hitter's contest, Chicago Cubs tumbled Cincinnati Reds 14-8.

Marichal, who turned in a 6-2 record in 11 games with the Giants in 1960, has been a 20-game winner five times since then.

Sandra Post Far Off Pace

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, winless in seven outings since equalling a Ladies' Professional Golf Association record with four straight triumphs, charged into a two-stroke lead Friday in the opening round of the $23,000 Patty Berg Golf Classic.

Miss Whitworth, 29, scored a 69 over the par-73 Pleasant Valley course.

Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., was well off the pace, shooting 40-38—78. Miss Post defeated Miss Whitworth in the play-off for the LPGA championship on the same course last year.

FATAL START FOR LE MANS

LE MANS, France (AP) — Forty-five drivers took off at the start of the Le Mans 24-hour race today, but one of them, John Woolfe of Britain, died in a flaming crash that destroyed his Porsche 917 on the first lap.

He was dead on arrival at the Le Mans hospital.

Charging Beman Lauds 'Secret Development'

COOLING IT, lanky George Archer takes a big gulp of water during U.S. Open golf championship play at Houston. Also cooling off was Archer's game. He fired second-round 74 Friday to fall six strokes off pace. (AP Wirephoto).

HOUSTON (AP) — A confident Deane Beman said Friday a secret development program, not yet complete and 1½ years old, helped put him in the second-round lead in the U.S. Open golf championship.

Beman, a former U.S. amateur champion from Bethesda, Md., won't identify his program, but he says "it's improved my game a great deal."

Beman, who turned professional two years ago after a lengthy amateur career, scored his first pro victory last month in the Texas Open.

He shot a second-round 69 Friday for 137, three under par for two trips around the 6,967-yard, par-70 course.

That gave him a one-stroke lead over Bob Murphy, the first-round leader who went to a 72, and Miller Barber, 71, both tied at 138. Bob Rosburg is alone at 139 after scoring 69 Friday.

PALMER FELL BACK

Jack Nicklaus remained in contention with a 67 for 141. Arnold Palmer fell back with a 73 for 143. South African Gary Player had a 75 for 146, 1969 Masters champion George Archer went to 74 for 143 and Julius Boros had a 73 for 144.

Defending champion Lee Trevino, troubled by an injured left knee, blew to a 75 for 149 and missed the cut for the final two rounds. The field of 150 was trimmed to the low 60 scorers and ties, with a score of 148 needed to continue into today's third round.

Al Balding of Toronto made the final two rounds after shooting a three-over-par 73 for his second 18 holes—one better than his opening 74. It gave him a total of 147.

Two other Canadians, Ken Fulton of Montreal and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., missed the cut. Fulton soared to an 81 for a two-round total of 159 while Panasiuk's 78 gave him a 157.

Murphy complained he was bothered by photographers.

"Twice, on 16 and 18, they took pictures right before I putted," he said. "They cost me two shots. When that click goes off before you putt, you lose your concentration."

Trevino said he hoped to get some rest on his ailing knee, injured when he stepped on a ball about two months ago.

Others missing the cut included leading money winner Gene Littler, 152, and former Masters champion Gay Brewer, who had a nightmare nine on a par three hole—he was in the water three times—en route to an 83 for 158.

Bonallack Wins British Amateur

HOYLAKE, England (AP) — Mike Bonallack of England defeated Bill Hyndman of the United States 3 and 2 today to win the British Amateur golf championship for the fourth time and the second successive year.

Bonallack thus becomes the first to win the coveted crown in successive years since the late Lawson Little accomplished the feat in 1934-5.

Bonallack was one up after nine holes, then slowly increased his lead to three after the first 18 of the 36-hole final when the 53-year-old American grandfather appeared to lose his putting touch.

A former Walker Cup player from Huntingon Valley, Pa., Hyndman won his way into the finals by defeating Dale Hayes, a sensational 16-year-old South African, 3 and 2 in Friday's semi-finals.

FAST ACTION IN SIX-A-SIDE CRICKET EVENT

Eleven sides are entered in the fast-moving event, which starts at 11 a.m. and will continue through a series of matches until the final at 6 p.m. Since each club will have only four fielders instead of the usual nine, stamina could be an important factor in the long day.

GOLF WEEK . . . . . . ALSO STARTS

Only Three Victorians

One of the largest fields in years, 108, has entered the 1969 B.C. Amateur golf tournament, but only three Victorians will tread on fairways when the qualifying round gets under way Monday at Richmond.

Former B.C. champion Laurie Kerr of Colwood and Dave Mick, the Gorge Vale junior who won medallist honors in the provincial tee test last year, head the Victoria entry.

Eight golfers will move to match-play action after 72 holes of qualifying play.

Also starting, but less restrictive, is National Golf Week. A money-raiser for junior development, the event began today as golfers throughout Canada set out to match scores with George Knudson, Marlene Stewart Streit, Lynda Devine and Doug Stewart.

SHORT CHIPS: Larry Palmgren defeated Art Davis on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff to win the annual Hotelmen's golf tournament at Colwood . . . Both finished the regular round with 81s . . . Bert Hawkins won low net honors . . . Gerry Smith and John Devlin were major winners of the men's-wear tournament at Uplands . . .

Canadian Armed Forces monthly medal tournament will be played Thursday at Gorge Vale . . . Glen Meadows' third annual Father's Day tournament will be played Sunday with the following draw:

9 a.m.—Embury, Dowds, Gaunt, Mischki; 9:07—Hunter, Donald, Crocker, Brown; 9:14—Young, Price, Tobin, Cooper; 9:27—Campbell, Moe, Martin, McLister; 9:28—Hay, Walton, Green, Parish; 9:35—Morgan, Coulter, Rainey, Domoney; 9:42—Topalian, Drew, Brand, Evans; 9:49—Casey, Another.

Anne, Stephanie Yield Drama of First Night

Both Equal National Record As Langdale Nipped at Tape

(Special to The Times)

BURNABY — Anne Langdale, a swift bundle of running energy from Mount Douglas, sat at the recorder's table Friday night and accepted congratulations from teammates and friends. In between, she managed to inscribe her name on a large sheet of official-looking paper.

It reads that on Friday, June 13, at Swangard Stadium, Anne Langdale ran 100 metres at the first day of the B.C. high school track and field championships in 11.6 seconds. The time equals the Canadian junior-juvenile record and the paper asks recognition of such.

Minutes earlier, another girl, Stephanie Berto of West Vancouver had gone through a similar routine. She, too, was applying for the record-equalling status.

The two had provided the drama this night in a foot race that was a classic.

But wait.

Here came Miss Langdale, cutting the margin stride by stride. They ran as a team the final five metres and hit the tape together.

The judges gave the decision to Miss Berto, but Miss Langdale was so close they were given the same time. Afterwards, the two talked about it.

"I thought I was way out front," said Miss Berto. "So I relaxed a bit. Suddenly there was the tape and I felt someone breathing down my neck. I lunged. Guess that's what won it for me."

"I knew Stephanie had a terrific start," said Miss Langdale, "so I figured I had to get a good one, or there was no way I could win it. I got the start I needed and just tried to stay close."

Dave Weicker Easy Winner in Heats

The 17-year-old, Grade 12 Mt. Douglas student then turned and headed for the track again, to compete in her heat of the girls' 400 metres. She won in 58.5 seconds to qualify for today's final.

It was a good beginning for Miss Langdale and a host of Vancouver Island athletes who figured to play a prominent part when the meet resumed here this afternoon.

Sharing the spotlight with Miss Langdale Friday was the Claremont boys' 400-metre relay team. The foursome of Glen Robison, George Richey, Ray Thornber and Ted Clark won their semi-final heat in 43.8 seconds, breaking the B.C. interscholastic mark of 43.9 set last year by Burnaby South.

Today's final promises to be a dandy, because Mt. Douglas also won its heat in 43.9 seconds (a bad baton pass on the second exchange probably took away their chances for a record). Kelowna also was timed in 43.9 finishing second to Claremont.

Mt. Douglas won its heat of the girls' 400-metre relay in 48.9 seconds while Victoria won another heat in 51.5 seconds.

Oak Bay's Dave Weicker, the experts say, is the finest middle distance runner in B.C. high schools. He did nothing to tarnish that tag, winning his heat of the boys' 1,500 metres in 4:06.5 and then winning his 800-metre heat in 1:55.1.

Hooker Reaches Two Hurdles Finals

Two Island athletes finished third in other finals. Murray Keating of Mt. Douglas threw the hammer 130'10" to wind up third behind Gordie Geiger of Trail, who won the event at 194' 10". Nanaimo's Ed Shook ran the 1,500-metre steeplechase in 4:26.1.

One of the evening's highlights was provided by John McNulty, 16, of Abbotsford, who captured the stamina-sapping steeplechase despite injuring an ankle during the race and despite the fact it was only the second time he had competed in a steeplechase.

The six-one runner finished the event in 4:20.1 to chop a whopping 13.6 seconds of the Canadian interscholastic record and slice one-tenth of a second from the national juvenile mark.

Other Island athletes who reached today's finals were:

Daryl Hooker, Mount Douglas, who won his heat of the 300-metre hurdles in 41.5 seconds. Hooker also won his heat of the 110-metre hurdles in 15.6 seconds;

Penny May, Mount Douglas, who won her heat of the girls 80-metre hurdles in 12.3 seconds;

Nancy Chamberlayne, Qualicum, who finished second to Miss May in 12.6 seconds;

Allen Mcallister of Shawnigan, who won his 800-metre heat in 2:00.3.

When the two-day meet ends sometime late this afternoon, it is expected that athletes from Mount Douglas will have captured the team title, an honor that has been won the past two years by Burnaby South.

The inspiration is certainly there for Mount Douglas.

Traded Hurlers Get Coast Posts

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox have traded pitcher Sammy Ellis to Cleveland Indians for pitcher Jack Hamilton. Both were assigned to Pacific Coast League clubs.

The White Sox recalled pitcher Billy Wynne from Tucson after assigning Hamilton to the Coast League team.

Russia, Romania Take Lead in Cup Contests

By The Canadian Press

Romania and the Soviet Union Friday moved one victory away from facing each other in Davis Cup tennis European zone sectional play.

The two Communist countries both grabbed 2-0 leads after winning the opening singles matches in Section B semi-finals.

West Germany Friday won a doubles match to hold off elimination in their A section semi-final against Britain. The British team, which now leads 2-1 in the best-of-five round, won the opening singles matches Thursday. The winner will move into the A section finals against South Africa.

Wilhelm Bungert and Christian Kuhnke teamed up for the West Germans at Birmingham, England, and won a marathon 95-game, four-hour doubles match over the British. They won 10-8, 17-19, 13-11, 3-6, 6-2 over Mark Cox and Peter Curtis.

At Valencia, Spain, Romania's Ili Nastase defeated Jose Luis Arilla of Spain and Ion Tiriac downed Manuel Orantes to leave the Spaniards near elimination.

HIGHLY-RATED U.S. ATHLETES ENTER . . . . . . Y-TIMES TRACK MEET NEXT SATURDAY

Vaunted Foes for City's Bevy of Distaff Stars

DORIS BROWN
. . . U.S. champion

Women's events could grab a big chunk of the spotlight at Centennial Stadium next Saturday during the annual international track and field meet co-sponsored by the Victoria YM-YWCA and The Daily Times.

An entry of six top female athletes from the United States combined with an unusually strong field of Victoria girls should make for some red-hot competition in open events.

Heading the list of entrants will be Doris Brown, a 27-year-old housewife and school teacher from Seattle who specializes in distance events.

Member of the U.S. Olympic team last year, Mrs. Brown finished fifth at Mexico City games in the 800-metre run. She has been women's cross-country champion of the world three times in the last five years, is currently the American 880 champion, and holds the world record for the indoor mile.

Mrs. Brown's best 880 time is a fast 2:02.1, and her best mile clocking is 4:40.4. Last year she won the Y-Times International 440 with a time of 55.8 seconds.

Final decision on which event she picks Saturday hasn't been made yet, but if she runs one of the two longer distances her local competition will be Wendy Thompson and Debbie Reid.

Wendy will run the open mile and 880, while Debbie will run the 880 in the midget division and then jump up to the open mile.

Other top-notch distaff talent in age-class performances will come from Rosemary Daggett, a high-jumper from the Flying Y club, and Susan Hutchinson, a Flying Y sprinter.

Leading a highly-rated field-events contingent from the United States will be Helen Thayer, formerly discus champion of New Zealand and currently rated one of the best in the U.S.

She will be joined by young shotput star Lynette Mathews, who is rated fourth in the U.S. and considered a fine prospect for international stardom.

One of the biggest duels of the meet will likely come in the women's javelin event, where Viriginia Husted, one of the top U.S. competitors for the last five years, will clash with Jay Dahlgren.

Victoria Track Club's bright young prospect Vicki Hammond will be the local entry in the javelin, and will also long jump.

Another local athlete, Penny May, who provided one prong of Mount Douglas High School triple threat of Lindsay Jack, Anne Langdale and Miss May, is expected to set a Canadian record in her event Saturday.

Miss May will run the 200-metre hurdles for women, a new and gruelling event.

An interesting effort should also come from Gail Davis, a finalist in the U.S. Olympic trials last year, who is expected to enter at least three of the pentathlon events which include the shotput, hurdles, 220 yards, high jump and long jump.

There also promises to be some stirring competition in men's events. Meet officials are expecting several noted U.S. contestants to shoot for honors against the best of Victoria's male crop and many competition-tested performers from the Vancouver area.

Next Saturday's meet will run through most of the day. Heats are scheduled to start things off and finals are slated to start at 6 p.m. on Centennial Stadium's all-weather track.

Tough Field Test For Victoria Reps

The cream of Victoria's field hockey crop will face international talent in next Thursday's game against touring Casuals Club of Trinidad-Tobago.

Forward, half and defensive lines of the touring team all hinge on stars from Trinidad's national representative team, and the coach can choose between a pair of brilliant international goalies to fill the nets.

At inside-forward for Cauals will be Pat Gomez, considered the most experienced player in that country. He captained the Trinidad-Tobago side at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg.

TALENT SHOWS

Flanking Gomez in the forward line will be Tom Garcia, another inside-forward who has led Casuals' scoring for the past few years.

Pivot man in the half line is Winston Govia, a well seasoned stickhandler who has played internationally at centre-half and left half for Trinidad. The top-ranked defenceman is Gene Govia, also coach of the Trinidad national women's team.

Youthful Bertie Steuart and Robert Elias have been sharing goaltending duties. Elias, rated the more experienced performer, is famous for his hefty clearing kicks.

PRACTICING HARD

From Red Barons will come Gary McGregor and Jim Mitchell. Tigers will provide Munjit Singh and Raj Pagely. Oak Bay Redmen have four players assigned — Doug Carrick, Roy Scott, Craig Wilson and Malcolm Calloway. Stew Bailey and Mike McGarry were selected from Shawnigan Lake.

Half-back John Pendray leads the University of Victoria contingent, which also includes Bob Rain, Rick Hoos, Al Shaw and goalie Mike Hayes.

The Victoria squad has been practising for more than a month, and Uvic coach Rick Hoos, an international player for Canada, led his team of Vandals on a trek to Calgary to give his players more experience against top-notch players.

Distaff Aces Seek Berths On B.C. Team

Trials that will decide British Columbia's women's golf team for inter-provincial competition started today on the Mainland and will continue next weekend in the Victoria area.

Distaff divoters seeking team berths were at Chilliwack today and will continue the quest Sunday at Pitt Meadows.

Next Saturday they'll be at Glen Meadows in North Saanich and the following day shift to the Royal Colwood course. Final two trial rounds will be at Vancouver in July.

On the local fairway front, Nora O'Connell and Pearl Ott won the Hannan Cup at Gorge Vale and the Gorge business ladies took a five-point lead over Colwood rivals in the first half of the annual Corby-Wiser Trophy event.

At Colwood, Onaugh Painter won the business ladies' championship with Helen Erickson, Vi McLellan and Elinor Muston taking flight honors. Mary Bliss and Anne Shields were division winners in a par test and Pat Bishop, Marion Coxford and Corothy Kelly tied for "C" section laurels.

Anne Thomson was the "A" division leader in a spring eclectic contest and Doreen Brundson won a similar event for business ladies.

Bouncy Belle Wins Feature

Bouncy Belle paid $7.60, $4 and $3.10.

The quinella in the eighth race paid $94.10 when The Jones's, ridden by Gene Salas, combined with Basil Frazier on Riley's Luck.

Frazier had the best day with two firsts and two seconds.

In the fifth race Dreams Best, ridden by Brian McLeod, won to pay $66.70, $18.40 and $5.20.

Dale West Retires

REGINA (CP) — Dale West, 28-year-old Canadian defence back who has played seven season for Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League, has announced his retirement.

West was selected to the Western Conference all-star team in 1963, 1964, and 1965.

Commuting Days On Tennis Front

Victoria's annual tennis shuttle scramble has started.

During recent years, the Oak Bay Tennis Club and the Racquet Club appear to schedule their club championship tournaments at the same time. Some players belong to both clubs and have a merry scramble trying to compete at both sites.

One of the title threats working the shuttle schedule this time is Martin Taylor, who started earlier this week in defence of his Oak Bay singles crown.

Today, Martin was also swatting in opening rounds of the Racquet meet, attempting to regain the singles title he won in 1967.

Competition in both tourneys was carded today and will continue Sunday.

Industrial Softball

Gilmour rapped Bapco Paint 11-2 Thursday in Industrial Softball League action at Macdonald Park.

In other games, Six-Mile House edged A & B Drywall 8-7 and Kents downed Hillside 66, 7-4.

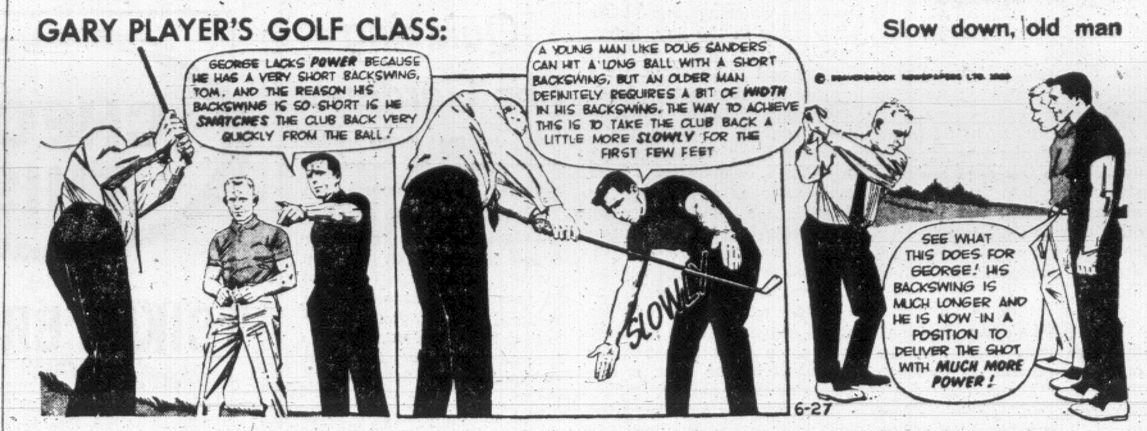
GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: Slow down, old man



GEORGE LACKS POWER BECAUSE HE HAS A VERY SHORT BACKSWING, TOM. AND THE REASON HIS BACKSWING IS SO SHORT IS HE SNATCHES THE CLUB BACK VERY QUICKLY FROM THE BALL!
A YOUNG MAN LIKE DOUG SANDERS CAN HIT A LONG BALL WITH A SHORT BACKSWING, BUT AN OLDER MAN DEFINITELY REQUIRES A BIT OF WIDTH IN HIS BACKSWING. THE WAY TO ACHIEVE THIS IS TO TAKE THE CLUB BACK A LITTLE MORE SLOWLY FOR THE FIRST FEW FEET
SLOWLY
SEE WHAT THIS DOES FOR GEORGE! HIS BACKSWING IS MUCH LONGER AND HE IS NOW IN A POSITION TO DELIVER THE SHOT WITH MUCH MORE POWER!

Bates' Barry In Fine Form

Barry Jackson tended to his business in workmanlike fashion on Friday, Bates won another game, and that clears Central Park's softball diamond for a trio of exhibitions.

Jackson unfurled a masterful one-hit display to carry Bates to an easy 5-0 victory over Luckies in Major Men's Softball League action Friday.

On the 13th, it was victory No. 13 (in 14 tries) for the talented Bates. Jackson struck out 12, walked but one and allowed only a fourth-inning single to Larry Mongomery.

Besides the walk to catcher Muzz Smith, Montgomery also was safe on an error to supply Luckies only three base-runners. None went beyond first.

OUTFIELD QUIET

The best measure of Jackson's effectiveness might be the fact that Luckies managed to hit the ball beyond the infield only three times. Montgomery's clean hit to left, and two easily-caught lofts made it an easy night for the outfielders.

The comedy-minded California Cuties headline action at Central tonight and Sunday afternoon. The touring team plays Langford tonight, starting at 7 p.m., and Molson Vicettes Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

A third exhibition, at 7 p.m. Sunday, will send Bates against Nanaimo O'Keefes, the Western Canada champions two years ago. O'Keefes, Bates and Victoria Molsons are Vancouver Island's entries in the B.C. senior tournament to be played in Vancouver next weekend.

West Indians Fare Poorly

MANCHESTER England (AP) — The West Indies cricket team slid to 104 for six wickets Friday night and was deep in trouble in the first Test match against England.

The visitors were replying to England's 413, compiled patiently and ruthlessly over 10 hours.

The West Indian batsmen were mown down by John Snow and David Brown. Only two men — Basil Butcher with 31 and Charlie Davis with 34 — offered any real resistance.

Canadian Bows In Semi-Finals

NOTTINGHAM, England (Reuters) — Faye Urban of Windsor, Ont., was beaten in three sets by Britain's Nell Truman in the women's singles semi-finals at the Nottingham open tennis tournament here Friday.

Miss Truman won, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1, and advanced into the final to meet another Briton, Christine Janes.

Argo Training Camp Threatened by Strike

Hayman met this week with player representatives Mike Wadsworth and Bill Symons to discuss players' demands of $100-a-week payment a man for pre-season training.

The Eastern Football Conference Argos open their pre-season camp Monday and unless the money question is settled a strike is possible, players warned.

In past years, players from out of town received $50 a week to cover expenses while the Argos were drilling, but those who lived in Toronto got nothing.

When the club moved to its training base near Aurora, 25 miles north of Toronto, nobody was paid anything. The players are not paid for exhibition games.

Argos signed Dave Mann, who has punted footballs a little more than 27 miles in 10 seasons, to a new contract Friday and also signed Roger Scales whose rights Argos obtained in a 1966 trade with B.C. Lions which brought Bob Swift to Toronto for Bill Crawford.

Other clubs were also busy signing players. Lions, who had earlier signed Canadian rookies Roger Flewelling of Vancouver and Ross Bannister of Calgary, announced Friday the acquisition of three new imports.

Agreeing to terms of Lions contracts were:

Winnipeg Blue Bombers have purchased veteran guard John Atamian from Saskatchewan, signed Gene Lakausiak to a new contract and added rookie Canadian linebacker Dave Brown.

Combos' Distribution Short-Circuits Phones

Canadian Forces Base Combos spread the action all the way down the line.

B.C. Telephone didn't, and distribution proved best as the Combos came through with a 5-3 victory in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Sofball League play Friday at Heywood Avenue Park.

The Phoners got all their hits (5) and all their runs (3) in one inning (the fifth). Combos spread eight hits over six innings and produced runs in four of the frames.

Bob Harris went the route for Combos' victory, scored one run and drove in two with a pair of singles. Jim Buchan batted three-for-three while Barry Granger contributed two singles to Combos' attack.

Water Must Be More Than Surface Deep

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

Every gardener realizes that plants must have water to make growth. Without water most cultivated plants will die during our normal summers.

This fact makes it necessary for the gardener to spend considerable time providing water by artificial means to his plants.

Whether the amount of time is well spent or not dpends on the gardener's understanding of his plants and their habit of growth.

Without fear of contradiction it can be said that hundreds of hours and millions of gallons of water are wasted by gardeners every summer.

Since water is becoming a more precious commodity every year, and need for relaxation increasingly important for maintainance of mental and physical health, it seems wise to take a long look at this business of watering plants.

Out of 14 calls to determine the reason plants were wilting and dying, the cause in 12 instances was dry soil at the roots.

Gardeners seem to forget that plants are anchored to the soil and cannot roam around to secure food and drink.

An analogy would be a man lashed to a tree with a bathtub of water a foot away. The man could die of thirst although water was almost within reach.

In the 12 instances mentioned above, regular watering was practised, in fact, the majority did watering every day or every second day.

However, a small hole dug between plants revealed slightly damp soil for the first two inches and dust dry soil from there to the 12-inch level.

●

This meant that the plant roots, which for established shrubs can be considered to lie in the six to 12-inch range, were totally without water and for this reason the plants were wilting.

Excepting in the case of seedling plants, it does not matter how dry the surface of the soil may be, in fact a two-inch dust mulch is considered beneficial.

The thing that matters is the amount of moisture down where feeding roots are located, not the amount of moisture at the surface.

The only way to determine the state of soil moisture at root level is to dig down and see for yourself. Don't dig into roots, but into a space between plants.

If gardeners could do this once a week they would soon have a very good idea of how much water their soil needed and how often to water.

They would also have better plants, less mildew and fungus diseases, a lower water bill and extra time for relaxation.

Tips for The Home Gardener

To maintain adequate moisture at root level, garden watering in this area must be started by late April in an average season. But the end of April was too late this year because soil water table had dropped considerably by mid month.

●

Evaporation and soil moisture tests show that for optimum growth on southern Vancouver Island our plants require one inch of water every 10 days, or three inches of water a month.

One inch of water, either from clouds or a sprinkler, is equivalent to four and two-thirds imperial gallons to a square yard.

A garden 60 by 45 feet contains 300 square yards and requires, in our climate, 1,400 gallons of water every 10 days. A popular model of sprinkler applies 450 gallons an hour at 40 lbs. pressure. This would need to operate for 3 hours.

When watering is started soon enough (at least the end of April) and maintained on a regular schedule, soil moisture will be adequate for plant growth, regardless of the surface becoming dust dry between waterings.

In fact, a dry surface reduces incidence of fungus diseases. For this reason, garden watering should be done early in the day, before noon if possible, so that foliage and soil surface has a chance to dry before lower evening and night temperatures prevail.

Water lying on foliage and moisture evaporating from soil surface condensing on foliage, for 12 hours when temperature is low, causes most summer fungous diseases that trouble gardeners.

Lawns are particularly susceptible to fungous troubles when watered late in the day, and some lawn browning, so prevalent in our area, is due solely to this practice.

Now that the soil has dried out, how can a gardener get water down to roots without a lot of waste?

The best solution is a canvas soil soaker laid over the root area of the plants. The tap is opened just enough to give a continuous drip which will slowly soak down instead of running over the surface and evaporating.

A plastic soaker could be used providing all holes are cleaned and operating and that it will drip without spraying high in the air. Most of them won't!

Hose pipes, sprinklers, soakers, and underground sprinkler systems are conveniences, but it still takes a gardener with a spade to find out if plants have any water at their roots.

●

Quizzing The Gardener

Q. Is the shrub called Mock-orange the same as Syringa? J.K.B., Victoria.

A. The shrub now in bloom with scented white single or double flowers about size of a nickel is commonly named Mock-orange. Botanically it is Philadelphus. Syringa is botanical name of lilac, although syringa is used in England as common name for philadelphus.

The mixup occurred years ago in England when the wood of both these plants was used for making smoking pipes.

●

WORK FOR THE WEEK

Rhododendrons and azaleas in bloom now will be those more likely to escape bud damage from frost in March, since buds will not be so far advanced. Consider these when purchasing.

The early tulips will have leaves limp now, and the bulbs may be lifted for summer storage. Dry them in shady, airy place before putting away.

If necessary to lift narcissi wait for leaves to become limp.

Colchicum leaves have now wilted and faded. They may be cut off at ground level. Do not pull off.

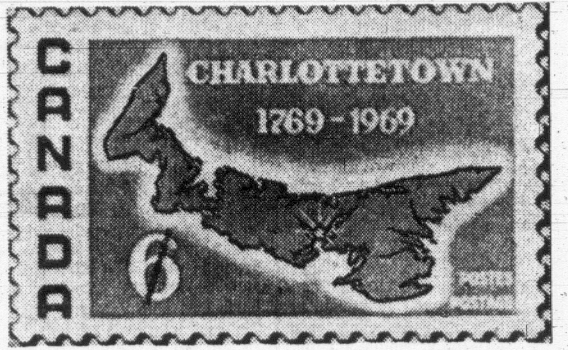
'PROVING HIS PRESENCE—REFLECTING HIS GLORY'



HONORING Charlottetown's 200th anniversary as capital of Prince Edward Island is this commemorative stamp to be issued by the post office August 6. It shows a map of the island province in reddish brown—to represent its rich earth—superimposed on a blue background, representing the sea. City became the capital on August 4, 1769.

STAMP NEWS

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

A blue and brown 6-cent stamp will be issued by Canada June 23 to honor Sir William Osler. Prominent is an engraved portrait in brown of this noted physician.

Also depicted is a symbol of medicine — the serpent-entwined staff of Asclepius (a legendary Greek physician.) Above Osler's head, in English and French, is the name of his medical encyclopaedia: "The System of Medicine."

This stamp was designed and printed in steel engraving and photogravure by the British American Bank Note Co., Ottawa. The size is 24mm by 40mm.

Dr. Osler was born in Bond Head, Ontario, on July 12, 1849. He was educated at Trinity College School in Port Hope, Trinity University in Toronto, and at McGill University in Montreal, where he obtained his M.D. in 1872.

Subsequently, he studied medicine in Europe. For a short time in Dundas, Ontario, he had a private medical practice.

After his return to Canada in 1874, he taught consecutively at McGill University, Pennsylvania University, Johns Hopkins University, and at Oxford University. The most famous of his many works, "The Principles and Practice of Medicine," was published in 1892.

William Osler was made a baronet in 1911. At Oxford on Dec. 29, 1919, he died of pneumonia. Sir William is remembered for his profound understanding, contributions to science, and for his greatness as a teacher and diagnostician.

The Cayman Islands on June 5 released 15 definitives to replace the regular series of 1962. The new denominations run from ¼d to £1.

On June 10, Switzerland issued an overprint on their 30-centime International Labor Bureau's official adhesive of 1960. It reads: "Visite de Pape Paul VI Geneve 10 Juin 1969."

This commemorates the historic June 10 visit of Pope Paul VI to the headquatrters of the International Labor Organization in Geneva.

A pictorial with a face value of 20 gold centimes will be placed on sale June 16 by the New Hebrides condominium. It honors and publicizes the timber industry in the New Hebrides, and portrays a towering Kauri pine tree.

Denmark June 12 will issue a 60-ore stamp observing the 750th anniversary of the descent of the Dannebrog (Dane's cloth) from heaven. Featured is the red and white Dannebrog which has been the Danish flag since the conclusion of the Battle of Lindanissa in 1219.

There Is No Conflict In a Graveyard

By REV. L. KINSOLVING

Kinsolving

The "Presbyterian church in the San Francisco Bay area became nearly schizophrenic under the duress of the battle over Saul Alinsky," writes Rev. Robert Lee, professor of social ethics at the Presbyterian seminary in San Anselmo.

"The church was severely split and the division has not yet healed," contends Lee, collaborating with Russell Galloway and William Eichorn, in a book commissioned by the Board of Christian Education of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Entitled "The Schizophrenic Church", the book is already engendering a storm of controversy within the 3.2 million-member denomination.

The authors provide detailed, objective and quite devastating scrutiny of the ill-fated attempt by ardent liberals to have Alinsky paid $200,000 in Presbyterian funds to organize ghetto residents in the Bay area.

They list all details of the bitter infighting that had Presbyterian leaders shouting and threatening each other, before the Alinsky proposal was set aside. They also provide similarly detailed accounts of how the controversy raged in five local churches.

The names of these local Presbyterian churches are disguised in the book — apparently in order to avoid spending time answering possible libel suits, or threats thereof. But this also stimulates the interesting game of trying to identify just who, for instance, is "Dr. Comfort of Pleasant Ridge Church."

Out of this sharply intricate history of a bitter ecclesiastical row, the authors reach several conclusions which should be of vital concern to all religious denominations:

- "The tension that church members feel today is an indication of the nature of Christianity, not a sign of disease ... conflict is an unavoidable fact of church life, one that can be ignored only at grave peril ... the days ahead will see more conflict."
- "The fact of conflict is an extremely simple inference from the doctrine of original sin. This much-maligned doctrine may be taken at the very least to mean that man is almost unavoidably self-centred ... Indeed the only place where there is an absence of conflict is the graveyard."
- "One of the reasons that the church has been able to avoid conflict is that its principal commodity is the grace of God — which by definition is available to everyone. The bestowal of grace on one person does not diminish the supply available to others. As the church moves into the political and social arena however, it begins to deal with scarce commodities and it comes face to face with conflict."

The authors plead for the development of adequate tools for what they define as "conflict management". They suggest among other things:

- Recognition that "conflict clears the air". "Groups should encourage the immediate and direct expressions of antagonisms and provide channels for such expressions."
- "Conflict can even bind together antagonists" since "psychiatry has told us that love and hatred are closely bound together. By getting in touch with their own resentments and expressing them, the (church) members are also able to get in touch with dimensions of love that make their former 'good nature and loving-kindness' seem superficial indeed."
- "Probably the most significant method of conflict management is the 'institutionalization', or the provision of a permanent forum in which complaints and controversies can be aired as they arise." But the authors note that most Presbytery meetings "have traditionally been concerned with administrative matters and have provided limited practice in dealing with conflict. (So, for that matter, have many denominational journals, which are often "joy-journals" dedicated to avoiding any bad news—and thus escaping from reality.)

One Day It's a Lab, the Next a Pulpit

Sundays he's a priest at Saint Barnabas Anglican Church.

But the 32-year-old Englishman, probably the only chemist in Canada who doubles as an Anglican priest, does not find a contradiction in his dual role.

For him the traditional division between sicience and religion does not exist—in fact, he says his study of chemistry leads him to a better understanding of God.

Sitting in his Elliott Building office discussing religion and science, Dr. Moss came across more as a spiritual man than as a scientist. He's engaged in some pretty sophisticated research, but his mild manner is that of a man of the church.

TEST-TUBE LIFE

He's optimistic about some of the far-reaching developments in organic chemistry, such as creation of life in a test-tube.

"A lot of people are afraid of these things because they think they will make man less human, but this may be a good thing because it shows there is concern for man's human characteristics."

He said the division of science and religion is fairly recent. At one time religion, morals, science and aesthetics were all one discipline.

"Today we tend to fragment our knowledge more and more. God has been found an unnecessary hypothesis in one after another field of study and experience, until he has been relegated to the study of religion, and even here we are told that God is dead.

"The great majority of people can see the benefits of science and technology because they have and are experiencing them in almost every phase of their life."

IMAGE OF GOD

But he said they fail to see the benefits and inherent importance of the Christian life.

"Most people think scientists know what they're doing. But they don't — they're always changing their minds. During the last 30 or 40 years scientists have begun to recognize the importance of uncertainty.

"If I believe that I was made in the image of God—in that I have the same qualities, such as a capacity for love, passion, creativity—then I can get to know more about God by investigating chemistry."

Because science itself is a religious activity he argues that scientists are part of the company of God's messengers.

FLEXIBLE ATTITUDE

"One of the things my colleagues in the humanities don't appreciate is that research is creative. Creating a new molecule can be a very moving experience."

He said the church on the other hand, tends to cling to the past because many good Christians can't face the implications of new knowledge.

"A flexible attitude is necessary to face these new discoveries. Frequently they lead us to new possibilities of understanding the nature of God's universe."

Dr. Moss studied chemistry at Imperial College, University of London. He said the college, which has only science students, has a strong humanistic outlook, for it was formerly attended by Aldous Huxley and H. G. Wells.

He brought his family to Canada in 1962 and taught four years at McMaster University, Hamilton.

It was following his arrival in Victoria three years ago that he expressed the wish to become a clergyman in the Anglican Church.

He was made deacon in June, 1966, and was ordained as a priest last Nov. 1.

Crusade to Open

Rev. Abraham Kudra and his wife, a musical and preaching team known as The Musical Kudras, will conduct a Canada for Christ crusade at North Douglas Pentecostal Tabernacle Sunday to June 29.

Baptist Meet Scheduled

The 42nd convention of the Regular Baptist Churches of British Columbia will be held in Central Baptist Church here Tuesday to Thursday.

Chief speakers will be Rev. C. St. Clair Robinson, minister of Elliott Heights Baptist Church, Hamilton, Ont.; Dr. John Watt, general secretary of the Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches of Canada; and Norman Barton, Vancouver, president of the Regular Baptist Churches for the current year.

Business sessions will be held each day and a final public meeting will take place each evening at 7:30. Music and vocal items will be given by choirs and singers of Central Baptist.

The College: New Deal In a Hustling World

By Don Vipond

Why? What is a district college? Who is it for? How will it work? And who pays how much?

On this page some of those most closely concerned with local senior education discuss the why of it and talk about the kind of Greater Victoria College they would like to see.

But in a nutshell, a district or regional college is a two-year school with one foot in high school, the other in university, but both hands out to help people who are not a part of either.

It's a new deal to meet new education needs at a time when society values the graduation diploma right up there with motherhood.

Some people would go to Victoria's college to complete high school, others to take one or two years of university courses, later to transfer to a university.

But probably most would be there to train—or retrain—for many kinds of jobs calling for special knowledge or skills.

The two-year college has arrived largely because high school standing is no longer enough and university is either not necessary or not specific enough for an increasing number of specialized jobs.

An example—the high school graduate is not qualified to become a lab assistant. But he doesn't need an honors degree in chemistry from a university either. The college can train him.

If the department of education approves, the Greater Victoria school board will be asking the public to approve the district college idea by plebiscite.

As trustees see it, the college could operate for the time being on the old Lansdowne campus, from the buildings of the Adult Institute it will replace.

Funds for any future construction program would require a 60 per cent referendum majority.

The difference between a district and a regional college lies in the administrative setup. The district college is operated by the school board of the district while the regional college, a co-operative effort by two or more school districts, has district representation but also government appointees on its council.

There are now six regional colleges in B.C., only four of them actually in operation at the moment. But the province has only one district college, Vancouver City College.

Four years old, it was created by combining the Vancouver School of Art, Vancouver Vocational School and King Edward Centre.

The King Edward Centre probably best illustrates what may be created in Victoria. It operates year-round, in three four-month terms. Two terms constitute a one-year program.

The centre offers short courses, workshops and seminars to meet requirements of special community groups (something the Adult Institute has been doing).

But most full-time programs consist of two terms (for a college certificate) or four terms (for a college diploma).

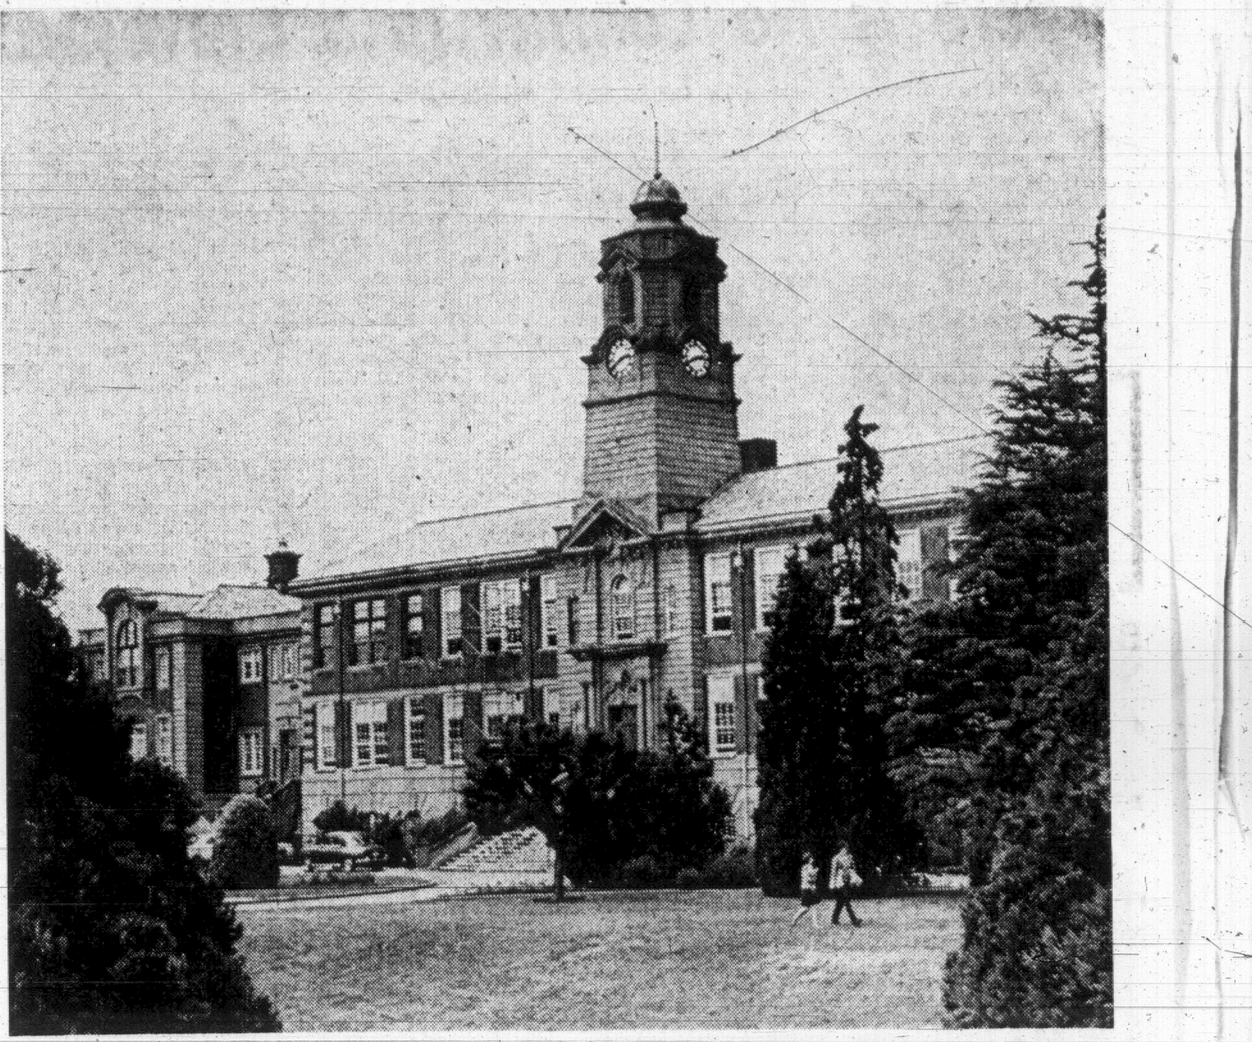
Requirements for the centre's arts and science programs are very flexible and many courses can be taken through evening classes. They lead to more specialized training in a technical field or to second-year university standing.

Students not qualified for them may take the college's preparatory program, in day or evening classes. The college day runs from 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.

Under business administration the centre offers full-time courses in accounting, secretarial science, finance and investment, marketing sales and data processing.

In community services are courses for training food service technicians, library assistants, museum assistants, pre-school teachers, recreation technicians, teacher assistants and welfare aides.

The question of fees has yet to be settled. But Malaspina College, which opens in rented quarters at Nanaimo in September, is considering $100 a semester ($200 a school year) for students from participating schools districts, double that for students from districts where there is no contribution from local taxpayers.



CLOCK TOWER LANDMARK of the Young Building marks current site of Greater Victoria's Institute of Adult Studies and likely future location of a local two-year college. Red brick structure and handsome grounds have varied history. Constructed in 1912, building served as convalescent hospital for wounded during First World War before housing Victoria Normal School. Later it became the centre of Victoria College and came into the hands of the Institute when college achieved university status and moved to Gordon Head campus.

JACK DALGLEISH

ROBERT WALLACE
. . . essential development

Take a Victoria boy, 18 years old, just graduated from high school and not sure what he wants to do.

What choice has he?

"Many people who come to this university today come because there's nowhere else to go," says Robert Wallace, acting president at the University of Victoria.

The college concept has Wallace's whole-hearted support.

"I think we can say without a shadow of a doubt the university will say this is a very essential development in post-secondary education. I certainly do."

Two allied problems haunt the university and its president sees a local college going a long way to meet them.

The day will come when Uvic has grown as big as it can and still provide a solid teaching environment, he suggests. That might be around the 8,000-enrolment mark but whenever it arrives, there will have to be some sort of restricted enrolment to keep it at the optimum point.

The likely control, whether for space limitations or lack of operating budget, is through higher entrance requirements. But Wallace believes there must be an option open for students who don't meet those requirements but still want a try at a university program.

A college offering the first two years of university would provide it, giving them a chance to prove themselves.

●

Then there is the problem of a first-year failure rate at Uvic which approaches one in three. One of the obvious reasons is freshmen who find out too late they don't belong in the course they've chosen or possibly even at the university.

Again a college with a highly flexible internal transfer system could counter this, giving students a chance to switch at the end of a four-month semester rather than waiting a year.

Wallace says the college could serve another group eyeing the university, the adults considering going back to school.

●

"If they don't feel quite up to the university, they could try their wings at the college."

He sees its technical or semi-professional courses as even more important than its college-to-university transfer program. It could turn out needed computer technicians, forestry and possibly landscaping specialists and first-class secretaries, for example.

The school board wants to have two or three courses on the university transfer program to offer this September and the president says negotiations on three—economics, psychology and geography—are under way.

University recognition of any college's transfer courses is of course vital and Wallace says co-operation is good and there are no difficulties in sight.

Must Be Nimble To Meet Future

The future holds many jobs yet undreamed of, says Jack Dalgleish, director of adult education for the Greater Victoria school board. The college above all must be a flexible operation, able to spot new needs in the employment field and move quickly to provide job training for them.

He also believes the bulk of the college effort should be directed to training for occupations common to the community around it.

There might be a full-time program for the staff who operate day-care centres. Or there may be courses for police and possibly firemen.

"We're already working with the Saanich police on this."

The college should offer the first two years of university programs but Dalgleish sees this is a minor sector of the operation. In part it is needed for people who have been away from school for a time and are afraid to go directly to the university.

Another secondary but important function: courses enabling students to complete high school and advance to other training.

"Many of the people who go there may not want to go to the university. They will be looking for semi-professional training."

Supports Academic-Vocational Merger

Dalgleish says he would like to see the two-year colleges and vocational schools in the province amalgamated.

"I think it would serve the people better."

Technical training requires a much broader education today, he notes. For example, electricians require more mathematics. And technicians of all sorts need to know how to handle people and this could be better met with some training in psychology.

"Education is getting away from just trades training. There has to be general training too.

"I like to think of it as a combination of competency and literacy. In other words, you need to know a fair amount about a number of things today as well as having competency in a narrow field."

Dalgleish says the sort of broader-based education a combination college and vocational school could provide would also make it easier to move to another occupation if technology wipes a job out.

"It's far more important to teach students how to learn rather than a lot of subject material which could be obsolete before they get out."

Like others, he believes an internal system which makes it easy to shift courses is essential. The college then serves partly as an orientation centre. ("Lots of kids fail first and second year of university because they don't belong there.")

"And I think it's important that (the college) not be a big ponderous institution that imitates a university—it shouldn't be a decapitated university—but a young flexible institution able to cope with rapid change."

ALLAN BATEY

AFTER CONSULTING THE CUSTOMERS

A Means to Sample Careers

The district college must offer a variety of attractive alternatives to university, says Allan Batey, principal of the Institute of Adult Studies.

He favors a survey of local businesses on job needs and of students on their interests as part of the groundwork.

"By all means let's consult the customers."

It's natural for many students completing high school to be undecided on their careers so the college must make it easy for them to sample the choices.

This means a highly flexible transfer program within the school coupled with a top-notch counselling service.

Like others interviewed, he sees the college's main effort in training for jobs the Greater Victoria area specifically will be offering.

Administration, commerce and service industries are big employers locally so these are logical fields where training should be offered.

And the college is the place for technical training, for "the man who works alongside the professional."

COME BACK

Batey believes it must also continue the role of the Institute in providing a place where adults can come back to complete high school.

Not just adults. There must be room, an open invitation, for the high school kids who somehow got turned off, dropped out and want back in.

There is another high school group the college may serve better. These are the young people with Grade 12 but a little short on the emotional maturity an impersonal university demands.

The college should offer a closer relationship between teachers unfettered by research projects and their students.

Offerings should include the first two years of university programs but Batey recognizes that plenty of students who start along that trail discover it's not for them.

At university, most drop out or flunk. That's a traumatic experience, shattering self-confidence, embittering many for life. It could be different at a district college if the path is clear and easy to switch to studies more suited to their talents.

"We've got to build success experience."

BECKON DROP-OUTS

In passing, he notes that the evolution of the regional and district college has left Grade 13 to die on the vine in B.C. There is little incentive for the department of education to update its curriculum when the colleges are gulping up great numbers of Grade 13 candidates.

Batey says one thing a district college should not be and that is a sort of sawed-off university.

More Options Are Needed For Graduates to Explore

A two-year college will be concrete recognition of a changing world educators have been hearing about for years, says A. J. Longmore, the district's new school superintendent.

"Sociologists have been telling us for a long time that many people will be experiencing a number of vocations in a lifetime."

The college will prepare many of them and the need for it seems to be a phenomenon of any urban area, Longmore notes.

PEOPLE IN-BETWEEN

"You have schools and you have a university—and you have the people in-between."

There are simply not enough options for the Grade 12 graduate to explore now. The college will offer ways to new skills, making them more employable.

It's not so much high school graduates don't know what to do.

"They see the hurdles. They have to go to Vancouver or Dawson Creek (for more training in the field they want) so they go out and get a job."

Other in-betweeners the college will serve include the people who on their own initiative want to improve their academic standing, for a promotion or just to do a better job.

Then there are those who don't like the work they are doing and want to break into another vocation.

Touching on the college's role in community service, Longmore says there are a number of local firms now running training courses on a limited basis. The college could run them better and year-round.

A shift in this direction has already developed between the Adult Institute which the college would supercede and the University of Victoria. The institute has taken over the university's pre-school teacher training and earlier took on a training program for X-ray technicians.

FACULTY SQUEEZE

There will more pressures for this sort of transfer as the university's graduate program grows and faculty is squeezed for time. The college will be the inheritor.

Longmore says the existing space in use by the Adult Institute will provide room for about 1,400 college students without major adjustments, people not only from Greater Victoria but the adjacent school districts.

MOST ON TECHNICAL

He anticipates 30 to 40 per cent of students would be on the academic program leading to the university, about 40 per cent would be taking the broad technical program and the remaining 20 per cent or so training in community services courses.

He notes about half of the 30 per cent of university freshmen who fail their year are A and B students. They are apparently not socially mature enough to cope with the impersonal university. The more traditional school format of the college could help them.

A. J. LONGMORE

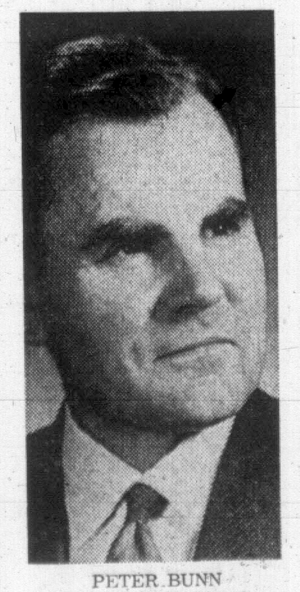
Tailored to Fit the Community If Control Kept in Local Hands



PETER BUNN
. . . for local control

In any community there are people whose education needs don't fit the standard mold, says trustee and former school board chairman Peter Bunn.

A district college would be for them.

"For the woman who suddenly finds herself widowed at 40. She can be tested, then probably guided into certain courses to enable her to do whatever she can do.

"For the guy at the Dockyard 20 years who suddenly finds he's been bumped by a new machine. He can get advice and testing to find the (education) gaps, then have a chance to pick up the training he needs to work elsewhere."

★ ★ ★

Bunn advocates a district rather than regional college because the governing councils of regional colleges are weighted with government appointees.

Big government is necessarily ponderous when it comes to dealing with changing needs at the local level, he says.

"We feel the internal concept of the college can be changed to meet the needs of the community at the time. But we feel this can't be done unless it's in the hands of the local representatives."

Over seven years as trustee, Bunn has taken a special interest in post-secondary education trends. He was in on the initial debates in 1962 which eventually led to establishment of the Adult Institute.

But three-quarters of the potential enrolment and over three-quarters of the current assessment and school costs are within the Greater Victoria school district, which includes the municipalities of Victoria, Esquimalt, Oak Bay and urban Saanich.

The college Bunn envisages will serve as a terminal school for some and stepping stone for others.

In part it would be for the boy who dropped out of grade 10 or 11, "pumped gas for a year and decided this was not the life for him."

At the college he could finish high school and perhaps advance to university or technical training.

"It's so important to give a second chance to the kid who is bright and has been bored out of school . . . It's much cheaper to re-educate a person than pay some state agency to house him. This is by far the cheapest form of reclamation . . ."

In post-secondary education he says the college should be "an economy-class university, frill-free" but offering as much in terms of academics as the initial years at a full-fledged university".

"What is most encouraging is the ready acceptance of the college by the University of Victoria. We're getting a good response from UBC and the British Columbia Institute of Technology too, so there will be no problem with them absorbing the college graduates."

He notes that Simon Fraser's semester may mean even more to the college's students, enabling them to transfer without waiting for the start of a new university year.

CITIZENS SAID LITTLE TO LIQUOR PROBERS

VANCOUVER (CP)—Judge C. W. Morrow, chairman of the three-man commission inquiring into British Columbia's liquor laws, said Friday he was disappointed the commission hadn't heard more opinions from the average citizen.

The commission wound up five days of hearings in Vancouver Friday and Judge Morrow said he was delighted with the reaction from special interest groups but was disappointed more private citizens hadn't appeared.

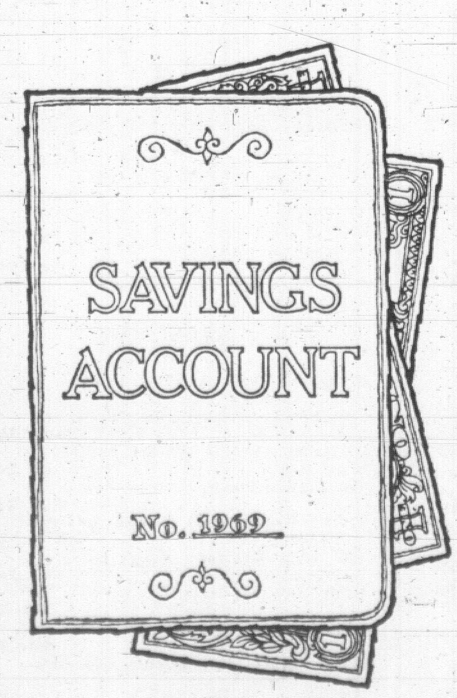
Newspaperboys
Make Paper Money
—PLENTY OF IT



Money may not be everything, but it's way ahead of whatever else is in second place these days.

When you become a carrier boy for this newspaper and deliver newspapers to subscribers, you are well rewarded. In addition, you receive tips. You end up each month with plenty of paper money. A newspaper route encourages savings.

What's more—you're in business for yourself. You are your own boss. You learn how to handle people. How to handle money. You learn responsibility. You gain additional confidence.

If you're 12 years of age or older, telephone or write the circulation department of this newspaper today. If you're a parent and want to help your son, we suggest you telephone or write.

Get-Tough Approach on Roads Drives Motorists to More Care

By The Canadian Press

If toughness is the only language motorists understand, then Canadian drivers are likely to see more of this approach.

This was spelled out by Fernand Lizotte, Quebec's minister of transportation and communication, and a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates that toughness is being applied in all provinces—and is paying off.

Mr. Lizotte said "we intend to use this method to enforce the law."

Provincial statistics show that since 1967 accidents and fatalities in most provinces have declined or, at most, are up only slightly.

Both police and highway department authorities credit the success to stricter penalties and new approaches to driving.

In British Columbia, where fatalities for the first three months of 1969 totalled 68 compared with 124 for the same period in 1968, motorists may well be looking at what's happening in southern Vancouver Island.

VARY POINTS SYSTEM

The islanders have a new demerit system designed to relieve police courts of petty driving infractions.

Instead of paying a fine for, say, driving through a red light, a motorist is given three points instead of a summons. After six points, he gets a warning letter.

After nine points—even though he may not have paid any fines—he is called upon to show cause why his licence should not be suspended. In several other provinces, the points system is used as a supplement to the normal fines for violations.

In Ontario, which has had the points system for some years, Transport Minister Irwin Haskett is setting up stricter penalties in addition.

HASKETT
. . . harshness saves lives

It appears that he wants to maintain the trend of 1968, when Ontario had 1,586 traffic fatalities, down from the previous year when the figure was a record 1,719. The new penalties include:

—Harsher fines for higher speeds.

—A minimum fine of $100 instead of the present $10 on conviction of careless driving.

—Increase in discretionary jail terms to six months from the present three months, on careless driving convictions.

—A new requirement that a driver must identify himself at the demand of a police officer.

CHANGES 'REALISTIC'

Mr. Haskett said the changes to the Highway Traffic Act "are calculated to be more realistic in the light of present-day conditions" and draw a sharper distinction between serious and minor violations.

He said penalties in the past have tended to be too mild.

The number of motor vehicle registrations rises by about four per cent nationally each year. In Ontario, the department of transport expects about 2,350,000 Ontario cars on the road this summer.

Alberta expects at least 800,000 cars this year compared with 780,000 last year. Fatalities there for 1968 totalled 400, up slightly from 395 in 1967. During the first three months of 1969 there were 66 deaths on the roads compared with 64 for the same period in 1968.

Saskatchewan has introduced stricter penalties for drinking drivers.

Impaired drivers automatically lose their licences for six months on a first conviction, and for one year on subsequent convictions.

Saskatchewan's worst year for traffic fatalities was 1967 when 292 persons lost their lives. In 1968, the figure was 268.

Manitoba, like all other Canadian provinces, has instituted safe-driving programs in both urban and rural areas.

The province has also made the wearing of helmets by motorcycle drivers compulsory, and introduced breath-analysis tests March 1.

Manitoba had a record 208 fatalities in 1966, 202 in 1967 and 199 in 1968.

Mr. Lizotte said Quebec's tough approach to traffic is paying dividends.

The minister said traffic deaths decreased in the last two months of 1968, compared with the same period in 1967, even though car registrations were up eight per cent.

"We intend to run used cars off our roads and highways if they are not in good condition. We intend to show that we value more than anything else the life and health of those travelling on our highways."

During the first two months of 1969, there were 153 fatalities in Quebec compared to 166 for the same period in 1968.

New Brunswick introduced a new compulsory car inspection April 1. Owners have 14 days to repair any necessary defects.

A fatality statistic comparison between 1968 and 1967 also shows a drop in that province. In 1967, a record 240 persons died on New Brunswick roads, compared to 231 in 1968.

This summer provincial authorities expect about 160,000 local cars on the road, about 10,000 more than last summer.

Victoria Daily Times

Arthur Mayse

Late this summer, 20-year-old Faye Luxemburg will set out from Victoria to test the dream she has cherished for much of her life. Her destination is Kibbutz Dovrat on the old border of Jordan, in the Republic of Israel.

In a sense, her journey is a pilgrimage. But Faye, who lives at 351 Arnot Avenue with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Luxemberg, will not be going as a tourist.

She has signed up for a two-year stay, during which she will spend half of each day studying the Hebrew language, religion and history. She'll work for the other half on any job to which she is assigned. A graduate of Esqumalt High School, she hopes that experience gained from her office job with Pacific Logging Company will help her to an eventual post with Israel's reforestation department.

Other candidates for the disciplined life of the collective farm villages will be on the plane that takes off from Montreal on Sept. 1. Some who go may find the life too hard, and return as soon as they can.

Fay expects to remain beyond her two years.

The dream began for her when she was a child at a summer camp on Gabriola Island. The camp is operated like a kibbutz, with the older helping the younger and all duties shared. It is sponsored by the local "Ken" (club) of a Jewish world organization called Habonim, or in English, "The Builders."

Last summer, Faye spent her weekends helping at the camp as an unpaid volunteer. She will work full-time this summer as a counsellor for the children of 10 to 15 who attend. This to get her "into the spirit of communal living."

Why should a girl born and schooled in Canada choose to make so drastic a change in her life?

"For somebody who is Jewish and a Zionist," she explains, "I suppose it's a Zionist goal. I want to see the country of my forefathers, and to serve there. And it's a great adventure."

I suggested that Israel could be involved in further wars. Wasn't she afraid of that?

She gave a fatalist's answer. "Whatever is going to come will come."

Will she return to Canada in some future year? Yes, though not necessarily to Victoria.

Faye's parents are proud of her, and they are going to miss her. Said Rita Luxemburg, her mother: "I'd like to go myself, if I were younger."

But it's her daughter who will go to that other homeland of the Jewish spirit, paying her way with money she has saved, as others have done before her.

One was a young reporter who came over from Vancover for a weekend in Victoria. He had meant to sleep in his car, but he wound up under our shingles. Israel was his frontier, and he spoke of going there, but so casually that we doubted he ever would. Not until after the six-day war did we learn that he had found his Promised Land.

Mother Cecilia Mary and her Good Shepherd Animal Shelter have made the headlines many times. However, it remained for Edward D. Ward-Harris of the paper that shares our presses to gather her amazing career into a book.

At a price of $1.25, it has already sold well over 2,000 copies, and repeat orders are coming in to William Collins and Sons of Canada Ltd., at Toronto.

Ward-Harris introduces the reader to Mother Cecilia as a child in Victorian England. He tells the story of her convent years. Then he carries on through her defiance of a Vatican command to a present, that finds her still busy among her animals at the age of 80.

The story of this stubborn, intrepid friend and defender of animals is a natural for a motion picture, although Hollywood might well flinch from portraying its climactic struggle with Roman Catholic authority.

That's it, except for a Happy Father's Day to us dads, the salt of the earth and sometimes the pepper!

SUBSTITUTING gestures for words, Captain Giuseppe de Luyk, skipper of the cruise ship Princess Italia, overcomes the Italian-English language barrier this morning as he describes the bridge to Victoria's Mayor Hugh Stephen. The captain led an early-morning welcoming party on a guided tour of the spacious liner shortly after it docked at Ogden Point. (Irving Strickland Photo).

Captain Giuseppe Comes Back But This Time With a Liner

The skipper of the Princess passed through Victoria last year to study the feasibility of setting up a tourist cruise between San Francisco and Alaska for his employer, Princess Cruises.

"They wanted me to scout around to see if it would be a worthwhile venture.

* * *

"Everything went smoothly, there were no surprises."

Born in Trieste, Italy, he went to sea at 19, after graduating from the Nautical High School. He got his master's licence in 1936 and his first command during the war.

Since the war he has been associated with passenger liners, and has commanded them for the last 12 years.

* * *

"Of course, it's not as easy to get a command on one of these ships as it is for a freighter — there's more prestige in this."

Capt. de Luyk is married, and has two sons, a daughter and four grandchildren in Trieste.

"I hope I can get my vacation in September. Otherwise I won't be able to get home to see my family until next year."

Hospital Stays Empty As Haggling Goes On

It has been that way since February. It probably will stay that way for the next six months.

The hospital is the Eric Martin Institute for the treatment of mental illness, located alongside Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The hangup is: who will run it, the province or Jubilee? Nothing has been settled so far.

Opening date for the $6 million 170-bed Institute was set for mid-summer,.

Informed sources blame prolonged negotiations betweeen the province and Jubilee for the delay.

STAFF AWAITED

The Institute has been sitting empty except for offices of the mental health centre formerly on Fort Street—awaiting furnishings, beds and staff for four months.

But most of all, a decision is needed settling who will be in charge of the Institute.

The Institute was built by the province and it was announced by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark that Royal Jubilee was expected to assume operation.

Negotiations to that end were opened but soon hit a snag. The Institute required $135,000 in operating capital to carry it until the first receipt of operating funds from B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Eventually, the Greater Victoria and Gulf Islands Hospital District said it would provide the money.

FINAL STAGES

Now negotiations are said to be in their final stages but there remains the question of completing furnishing and acquiring a minimum staff of 400 persons.

Efforts to learn how great an impasse this situation represents brought small comment from provincial government sources.

The usual comment was "You will have to go to Dr. A. C. Pickles at Royal Jubilee for information."

Dr. Pickles, executive director of the hospital, said in turn; "At the present time and until an agreement has been signed with the province, Royal Jubilee Hospital has no authority of any kind."

RAPID TRANSFER

Dr. Pickles said that as soon as an agreement is signed there could be a rapid transfer of Royal Jubilee's Bay Pavilion—a 40-bed psychiatric unit—to one floor of the new building.

But this would not increase the facilities now available to the mentally ill in Victoria.

Meanwhile, it was also recalled that since the new hospital's completion, the interior has been altered to locate electric shock treatment rooms closer to the wards.

Thursday, Health Minister Loffmark said he was launching a recruitment drive to find 76 staffers for mainland mental institutions. There was no mention of requirements here—but if Royal Jubilee assumes the administration, this would be a local problem.

Mills Rapped For Chip Scum On Beaches

By ED GOULD

A scum of wood chips and sawdust which is contaminating Salt Spring Island beaches is the result of "sloppy handling" of chip barges by pulp mills, says Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

REYNOLDS

Kiernan made a tour of Salt Spring Island this week and viewed a huge mass of wood chips, sawdust and dirt which had drifted into Vesuvius Bay, making swimming there impossible.

Ganges Chamber of Commerce president Gavin Reynolds places the blame on the Crofton Pulp and Paper mill, 10 miles north of Duncan and directly west of Vesuvius Bay.

KIERNAN
. . . "sloppy handling"

"The chips are everwhere," he said. "They are ruining beaches and, if permitted to continue, will destroy all sea life in this area."

Kiernan said mills could be required to handle materials with greater care.

MUST BE ACCIDENT

"As far as contamination of the water by chips and sawdust that is just sloppy handling," he said.

Crofton manager George Slater said today that no one has contacted him concerning the contamination of beaches.

"I agree that chips in the water are the result of sloppy handling," he said. "When it happens we get after the people responsible."

"But if chips are going into the water it must be accidental," he added.

Slater said the only way chips can be transported to mills on the Island is by barge and some chips may spill from these barges.

Another mill spokesman said a chip barge had struck a rock earlier this week and tipped a quantity of chips into Stuart Channel, but Slater said he didn't know of this.

This incident is believed responsible for the sudden increase in contamination this week.

"The scows that go by the island are not all coming to Crofton," Slater said. "In heavy seas these scows could definitely spill some chips."

"They're spilling a hell of a pile of chips lately," said Reynolds.

STAYS FOR DAYS

"The water is no longer clean and the beaches are filthy."

Reynolds said the floating scum stays for days, moving in and out with the tide.

"It's difficult to assess the effect on sea life but I know there are places where you used to catch cod and now you don't."

Slater explained that the chips used in making paper are brought by barge from Victoria to a dock at Crofton and unloaded onto a conveyor belt. "In the process some chips get in the water but we watch this very carefully," he said.

"We're willing to talk to anyone with a complaint about pollution," Slater said. "But these people haven't even contacted us."

A 30-foot band of wood chips and sawdust spread over beaches at Crofton and Maple Bay Friday but had cleared this morning.

Salt Spring residents report that beaches on the west side of the island have been coated by the material which moves from area to area.

AWARDED the Knights of Columbus Silver Sword for exemplifying good citizenship was Police Chief Jack Gregory at banquet here Friday night. Chief since 1963, he has been "directly responsible for the peace of mind of the citizens of Victoria," said former alderman Michael Griffin as he presented the annual award.

Is She A Martyr Or Not?

Newspaper publisher Philip Bickle today refused to make a martyr of a woman employee who demonstrated Friday against a Vietnam war movie at the Campbell River theatre he owns.

Morgan MacGregor who was, or is, the women's editor of Bickle's weekly newspaper The Upper Islander, insists she has been fired.

"As far as I'm concerned she's still working for me. If she wants to quit she should give two weeks' notice."

Mrs. MacGregor said she was told by Bickle she would be fired if she joined a Voice of Women demonstration at the Van-Isle theatre showing The Green Berets.'

"I took part in the demonstration so I consider myself fired," she said today.

"We had some discussion about that," said Bickle when asked if he had presented Mrs. MacGregor with the ultimatum. "But she's still in my employ."

Mrs. MacGregor said she realized she could not legally be fired for taking part in the demonstration.

"But I can't go back to work after what has occurred," she said. "He has made it plain that I have alienated myself from the newspaper by my action."

The protest of 18 members of the Voice of Women and high school students paraded in front of the theatre with signs and passed out pamphlets. They plan to demonstrate again tonight.

Juveniles Suspected In School Break-In

About $10 was taken from a desk drawer in the principal's office at about 4 a.m. Entry to the building was made by smashing a window.

Police said three windows were broken and there was some damage to the desk.

EXPROPRIATION PUT OFF

'We'll Leave the Lady Sitting'

By STEVE HUME

Victoria city hall will not pressure a 91-year-old widow holding out for higher stakes for her aging house in the middle of the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme, officials said today.

Catherine S. Telfer, 2648 Rose Street, has filed legal notice she will not accept the city's offer of $10,000 for the home expropriated a year ago.

She is demanding $50,000 for the 30-by-90 foot lot and the frame dwelling she has lived in since 1921.

Earlier this year, city hall ran into trouble when William Coburn, then at 2640 Blanshard in the same urban renewal project area, refused to vacate an expropriated house and rejected cash offers and relocation proposals.

SHOW OF GUNS

Coburn, under pressure from the city, finally settled for $12,500, with more coming up for arbitration under the courts, but not before barricading his house and waving away city officials with a show of guns.

He said in an interview this morning he estimated legal fees have already eaten away 20 per cent of the $12,500 he was awarded.

But city officals do not foresee a similar situation developing over the Telfer property.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said the property comes under the second phase of the urban renewal scheme and will not be required for several years.

He said if Mrs. Telfer is adamant in her refusal to surrender the house and property the city will likely allow her to remain and develop the area around her.

"I certainly don't want to push people out of their homes if they don't want to leave unless it is essential," he said.

"My inclination is to say fine, we'll leave the lady sitting there and carry on with the project around her."

William Hooson, assitant to the city manager, also said he anticipates no problem.

"I'm fully sympathetic to the fact that Mrs. Telfer has been living in that house for a long, long time. There's no urgent need for her to move for a couple of years, and we have no intention of intimidating an elderly person," he said.

Victoria lawyer Herbert Matthews, who represented Coburn against the city earlier, also represents Mrs. Telfer.

VALUABLE PROPERTY

He said earlier the city was not intending to expropriate the land for building new houses.

"The city wants this to sell as part of a motel site, and as such it is valuable property," he said.

Hooson said the area is earmarked for commercial development through private enterprise, but he said no final decisions on specific construction sites have been made.

"So far the whole scheme is to upgrade the area into some kind of general commercial area through private development, but we just haven't made any real decisions yet."

He said that if Mrs. Telfer was still adamant about moving when development started, the project would simply mushroom around her property.

GIVEN ALTERNATIVE

The city has offered alternative housing arrangements for Mrs. Telfer should she decide to accept offers, Hooson said.

He said she has an option to move into housing units of the Rose-Blanshard development when they are completed.

"There is no coercion involved, but when the housing development opens they will have first call on it and prior right to housing in the new site."

Mrs. Telfer's 61-year-old daughter Janet, who lives with her mother, told The Times they did not want to move into the housing development. She said alternative houses proposed by the city are not comparable in comfort, convenience and actual worth to the house on Rose Street.

Q. Is there a class or group which one may attend for the study of practice of Yoga? — M. E.

A There are several such courses available. The adult education section of the Greater Victoria School Board holds classes, both during its Summer Happening program, July 11 to Aug. 2, and its fall-winter program. The department will have an advertisement on the summer program in the June 21 edition of the Times. Further information may be obtained by phoning the adult education department at 592-1211, local 258. The YM-YWCA also holds courses but for women only. The next session begins Sept. 29. Further information may be obtained by phoning 'Y' officials at 386-7511. The International Mediation Society, Victoria Centre, also studies and practises Yoga. The president is Hugh Hunt, 2937 Tudor Road, 477-5756.

Q. Where can I obtain a schedule of the Seattle Pilots' home games? C. L.

A. Write to Seattle Pilots, 2700 Rainer Avenue South, Seattle, Wash. 98144.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Theft Staggers Beer Shop Staff

Provincial liquor store employees in Esquimalt aren't talking today about how two young men made off with 20 cases of free beer Friday.

The men walked into the store about 6 p.m. and ordered 20 cases of beer which they loaded into a car.

Employees at the store at 1310 Esquimalt told police there was "some confusion." When things settled down the men and the beer were gone. The beer was not paid for.

Today a spokesman for the liquor store would only say "we're hoping they come back today" when asked how the theft occurred.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Delectable dresses for now and later . . .

Has this ever happened to you . . . seeing dresses which you'd give your eye teeth to own pictured in fashion magazines . . . but despaired of ever finding in our fair city? . . . Well, we've news for you: there's precious little that's good in current fashion that can't be found at Miss Frith's! . . . Browsing around in this exciting specialty store earlier this week . . . we were almost overwhelmed with the extent and scope of the dress section . . . and the wide range of sizes . . . which go from 5 to 20 in regular, and 12½ to 24½ in half sizes! . . . There's every fabric you would possibly want . . . including lots and lots of polyesters which actually improve with washing . . . never need ironing . . . With fashion labels like Jr. Vogue . . . Aljean . . . J. B. Marciano . . to mention but a few . . Each one of these dresses, we learned, has been personally selected by Mr. Dan Nash, who has a long record as a top dress buyer . . . Certainly they're all tops in styling, quality and value . . . And don't overlook the tremendous selection of those very popular polyester suits . . . priced from $26 to $50 . . . For our money, they're the best values in town! . . . And speaking of values . . . we noticed that all of Miss Frith's spring hats are reduced from ⅓ to ½ . . . You'll want a beguiling new chapeau for the Garden Party as well as summer weddings, etc. . . . so do go and see them at . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Wilson's have clogs from Denmark . . .

Clogs, we'd always thought, are certainly intriguing to look at . . . but we couldn't quite picture ourselves ever wearing them until, that is, we tried on a pair of the Danish clogs just newly arrived at Wilson's . . . You wouldn't believe how comfortable they are! . . . Orthopedic, really . . . the wooden sole is moulded to fit the contours of your foot . . . so they actually ease and strengthen your feet . . . No wonder they're so popular in Europe! . . . Uppers are suede or leather in various colors . . . some are perfectly plain . . . others have punch work or braided leather trim . . . and there's a composition grip bottom to keep you from slipping or sliding . . . A full range of sizes . . . several colors, including combinations thereof . . . Price is just $13.95 . . . so why not go and try on a pair? You'll find them great around the house, garden or patio . . . as well as for beach wear . . . Wilson's also have a whole lot of small articles like eyeglass cases, change purses, evening wallets, etc., from England . . . Some are from Liberty of London . . . made of pretty paisley cotton in red or blue . . . Most unusual . . . Others are flower-sprigged cotton brocade . . . In this group there's even a mini-jewellery roll we find fascinating . . . You'd be smart to pick up some of these things now and stash them away for Christmas giving! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Rompers with that intriguing French look . . .

Like something unique in play clothes . . . that will set you apart from the crowd and rate more than a passing glance? . . . Then run, don't walk, to Impacts 'n' Imports where we saw a few . . . and we mean a few . . . romper suits from Paris . . . They're cute as all getout . . . and have that very special French boutique look which is hard to define, but very much visible! . . . They're made of a polyanide and cotton terry-like stretch fabric . . . in two different styles . . . One is a sleeveless front-zipped romper trimmed with white . . . in lime or royal blue . . . With it comes a cover-up in an A-line with stand-up collar, three-quarter length sleeves and white patch pockets set low . . . The other style is a romper alone without a cover-up . . . it's hot pink with a wide blue band edging the V-neck and short sleeves . . . One thing sure, you won't meet yourself coming and going in one of these outfits . . . and you'll look mighty chic around the pool or patio . . . We saw a couple of very smart linen jacket dresses too, when were in I 'n' I . . . grey, navy or green with white contrast . . . A-line skirts (which we should tell you are quite short . . . but just right if you're on the short side yourself) . . . Both dresses and jackets are fully lined . . . and we think they're a very good value at $80 . . . Impacts 'n' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

Collector's Items at the Handloom . . .

The Handloom is just full of surprises! . . . Here's a rundown of some of the eye-catching things we saw when we dropped by this week . . . Batik neckties by Eileen Alfondy . . . in lovely subtle shades . . . just different enough to please the discriminating man who likes something a bit out of the ordinary . . . Cloud-soft mohair bed throws from Scotland . . . plaids in pastels or deeper colors, beautifully soft and muted . . . Hand-made candles done in a clay cast . . . complete with their own matching pottery holders . . . Eskimo carvings, which include a graceful long-beaked bird made from a caribou antler . . . Three little ivory seals resting on a base of petrified bone . . . and a bone Narwhal whale with long twisted tusk, set in a soapstone base . . . each one of these is truly a collector's item! . . . There are three delightful nursery wall hangings . . . Rumpelstilskin and Puss in Boots . . . the figures in cut-out felt on natural or turquoise burlap background . . . lovely gift for your own or a friend's young child . . . We love the dogwood pictures too . . . one is a big single ceramic dogwood on wood, in a wood and burlap frame . . . the other a branch with four dogwood flowers on black velvet . . . The effect is 3-dimensional like a shadow box, and most attractive . . . And getting back to neckties . . . which is where we started . . . Handloom has a new shipment of gorgeous handwoven ties by Karen Bullow . . . The Handloom, 18 Centennial Square, 384-1011.

Tiny watch movements encased in clear lucite become 3-inch wide bracelets and rings.

Seems as if everyone's beating a path to Sydney Reynolds these days . . . and those who aren't inside the store are pressing their noses to the windows oh-ing and ah-ing over the displays! . . . Anyway we managed to penetrate within . . . and almost immediately our eye was caught by a table of pewter finished porcelain pieces . . . which come from Beswick of England . . . There are mugs, jugs, wine tasters (which make nice ash trays), plates and tureens . . . all in authentic old pewter shapes . . . exact reproductions of pewter pieces curent in England in the Middle Ages . . . They're very interesting indeed . . . have a lovely soft lustrous sheen, and are surprisingly inexpensive (mugs average around $3.50) . . . Also from Beswick there's a set of Canadian bird ornaments . . . hand-finished porcelain, and priced at just $6.50 each . . . This is a new line which Mr. Reynolds considers very good, as well as very reasonable . . . We were enchanted with the small flower arrangements in Staffordshire bone china which had just come in . . . Known as the "flowers of the month" . . . there's a different arrangement of miniature flowers in a pot for each month of the year . . . Just $3.75 . . . and quite charming! . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., 383-3931.

The most important looks are the dress-and-coat ensemble for day: the rain or shine pants suit.

For your "hour of beauty" close to home . . .

Well, we've now tried it out ourselves . . . the new House of Glamour at Junction Centre . . . so are in a position to tell you about it from first-hand experience rather than hearsay . . . First of all, the day was hot outside . . . but delightfully cool in this new beauty salon . . . It's light and fresh and most attractive with its white and gold decor . . . Everything's spotless . . . the Misses Marcia, Grace and Rosemary are friendly and eager to please . . . Grace shampooed and set our hair, and we were quite delighted with the result . . . We always think a good shampoo-er is a pearl of great price! Grace is a graduate of the Glamour School . . . as is Rosemary . . . and both have already won styling awards . . . If you're driving, there's plenty of free parking on all sides . . . And, of course, you never need to dress up . . . just go in slacks or shorts or whatever you happen to be wearing . . . Now that the word has gotten around, it might be as well to make an appointment . . . Any one of the three girls will be happy to look after you . . . and we've no doubt that your visit to Junction Centre H of G will be a pleasant, relaxing interlude in your day . . . Why not plan for a weekly "hour of beauty" at . . . House of Glamour, Junction Centre, 1639 Fort St., 386-7715.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Jayne Regresses To Teen-Age Stage

By PENNY SAVER

"Honestly, Aunt Penny, it was so embarrassing. I only had enough money to buy one outfit, but I just couldn't decide which to choose! They all looked so—well, groovey. I was as excited as a teeny-bopper. Still am, in fact. So I said I'd think about it and come back later. I hope they haven't sold the ones I liked."

Jayne was dragging me—literally pulling me by the hand—to a dress shop she had just discovered. As her words show, she was terribly excited and her excitement was catching.

She had arrived at my house completely out of breath and talking a mile a minute about these beautiful, wonderful, feminine clothes. She insisted I had to put on my shoes and come with her right away. Even five minutes was too long to wait. "I was beginning to give up on finding an outfit that was really me," she explained at one point. "Then to find so many all at once . . . Well, I'm speechless with delight!" If only that had been true.

When we reached the shop Jayne disappeared into the change rooms with an armload of dresses and I was left to inspect the place on my own. As I gazed around aimlessly I became aware of a flickering above my head. I looked up and saw that there were colored lights inset at an angle in the lowered ceiling.

"They are set to flash with the music," said a voice beside me and I turned toward a chunky, red-headed man whom I later learned is the owner. I looked back at the lights and, sure enough, the green one in the centre seemed to be following the heavy notes of the rock guitar.

At this point Jayne whirled out in a slinky pant suit with white, wide-legged pants topped by a drapey blouse with a high neckline and long sleeves in a black, red and white print. "Lush," I agreed. "How much?" "Only $33," she replied. "Tell me how you like it after you've seen the next one."

"Our clothes don't have hanger appeal," explained the proprietor while we waited for Jayne to reappear. "But they look smashing on. The secret is the fabrics and the design. Most of our clothes are from England but I hope to get exclusive lines from Canada as well."

For the most part the clothes in this shop are for the young. But the young at heart can wear them too. The secret is that they have style, and style will suit any age group as long as the hemlines are in the right place. (If only women, young and old alike, would take a good long look at themselves from back, front and side before parading out in mini-skirts, some, I am sure, would drop their hemlines immediately.)

The clothes are reasonably priced, too. I saw a wild beach dress for $19.98 and a striking shirt dress in transparent white striped with blue and gold lurex for $25. There are pant suits galore and even bathing suits, hats, scarves, purses and stockings.

Just for fun, the shop has some of those honeycomb paper popouts. There are wild flowers for $3.50 that would look great on a wall. (The shop uses them to decorate the window.) For $3 there are popout ice-cream cones.

Jayne tried on at least five outfits before we decided the first suited her best of all so I had a lot of time to prowl. I agree with Jayne, this shop is interesting and it should get more interesting all the time.

If you would like to know the location of this new dress store, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Fur Fun In Pants And Stoles

By LOUISE COOK

NEW YORK (AP) — Wild and wacky Giorgio de Sant'Angelo has jumped into the fur market and his initial collection seems more comedy than couture.

Sant'Angelo — who started the craze for gypsy fashions — clearly likes to think of fur designs as something to have fun with.

At his first fur showing Wednesday, the designer offered such unusual items as a pair of brown seal overalls — complete with suspenders bib and presumably meant for the wealthy farmer's daughter.

He also offered a cowgirl outfit — blue fur hip hugger pants stitched in white to look like denim and topped by a matching battle jacket. The midriff was bare.

The gypsy turned up again in the guise of a spotted cat coat with a stole of chevron patterned mink skins worn with a bright red cloth turban, a rope belt and fringed gloves.

A spokesman for Chambers Sherwin — the company marketing Sant'Angelo's designs — said retail prices ranged from $195 to $4,000.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Sing Out Complaint

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have been married for one year. My husband is 70 and I am 61. I knew when I married him that he was fond of music, but I didn't know that he had to have the music going from the time he opened his eyes in the morning until he closed them at night.

He doesn't hear too well, so he keeps the volume up. Worse yet, our tastes differ. He likes the classics and the old stuff which makes me sad and I like Nat King Cole, Herb Alpert, Dixieland and jazz.

This man listens to music while reading, watching TV, and even during mealtime, which means there isn't much conversation between us. I can't do anything while there is music on except listen to the music.

Would you call this a serious conflict? Am I overly sensitive or am I normal? I don't want to upset my husband as he is very considerate in other ways, but I must confess, this is a problem. What is your opinion?—Too Much Music.

DEAR TOO: If your husband subjects you to irritating music from dawn until dusk, the other ways in which he is considerate of you don't count for much. You have a legitimate complaint. Put it to music and sing it to your music lover.

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago I went on a skiing weekend with my father, uncle and older brother, and I saw something I still can't believe. I saw my father and uncle with other women, and they certainly weren't acting like married men.

I told my brother how shocked and disgusted I was and that I was going to tell Mother when I got home, but he said I shouldn't because Dad and Uncle didn't do anything most married men don't do, and besides it wasn't so terrible.

Well, I never said anything to my mother about it, but it still bothers me something awful. I thought of talking it over with my father, but I hate him so much I don't even want to look at him.

If all men act like this, I am never getting married. I guess maybe it's true that nothing lasts forever. Please give me your advice.—Disillusioned at 17.

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: Don't judge all men by an episode involving your father and uncle. And don't judge them until more years and experience have given you added insight and wisdom. There are many marriages in which the partners—whether by commitment, effort or good luck—are faithful forever. And you can have such a marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think I'm awful but policemen turn me on. How can I meet one?—Dotty.

DEAR DOTTY: That's easy. Drive 50 miles an hour in a 30-mile-an-hour zone. (PS: But if you don't "turn him on" he's apt to turn you in.)

Marks Bring Trauma Time

By DOROTHY RICH

VASHINGTON — The big me-school communication of : year—the final report rd—is on its way.

[eachers are busy filling in ters or numbers on those ıocent-looking cards which oduce so much trauma in so ıny homes.

Vhile most teachers recog- :e the severe limitations of : report card, most parents d children don't. These ırks tend to be vastly over- :ed by parents as prophetic, -knowing measures of their ıld and by students who her like themselves or not pending on their grades.

As long as report cards exist, there's no sense in saying, "Don't worry about them." Let's face it—marks have importance out of all proportion to their worth: they decide a child's school placement; they decide whether a high schooler goes on to college.

The most constructive thing a parent can do now, aside from urging his school to rethink the giving of grades in the first place, is to try to see these grades in perspective and, insofar as possible, use these marks for the child instead of against him.

The Parents' Role

- Help the student see the oort card for what it really It is an attempt by chers to assess what stu- ıts have learned. An honest cher will admit that no itter how hard he tries he ınot really judge what a dent has learned. But to isfy everyone's desire for horitative-looking records, ʌn goes that grade.

- Discuss the grades. Try figure out what went into m. A mark can be reveal- ; of an ability you hadn't own about. If neither you : your youngster under- nd how the teacher got to ıt mark, contact the school find out.

- Try not to focus on the gative, that one low mark ıt sticks in your throat. olding a child for his pidity or his laziness un- tunately doesn't make him nt to do better. Instead, it ·ms to make problems take eper root and robs the dent of the guts it takes to prove.

- Use marks as clues to ır child's strengths and aknesses. A low mark in math is not total disaster; it may mean that help is needed now to prepare the child for better work next fall. Look into the possibility of an older student to tutor your youngster this summer.

- If the card indicates that your child is being kept back or "non-promoted" as the current school vernacular puts it, get together with his teachers before his failure is an accepted fact. Failure should never come as a last-minute surprise. (If you hadn't been told of your child's difficulties, you have cause for more than complaint. Non-promotion may be a good idea in your child's case, but statistics in the past have shown that keeping a child back usually results in greater subject difficulties and emotional troubles.)

- In an end-of-school-year talk with your children, ask what their marks left out.

This is a good time to assess what the school didn't. Talk with your children about what they thought they learned this year and what marks they would have given themselves.

Increase Award — Members of Esquimalt Chapter IODE decided to increase their award for the student with the highest standing in Grade 8 at Esquimalt Junior Secondary School to $20 from $15 when they met recently. Mrs. Lance Hall, education secretary, announced she had represented the chapter in presenting a book, Mr. Prime Minister, by Bruce Hutchison, to Esquimalt Senior Secondary School. Services at home and abroad secretary, Mrs. Mary Smith, reported she had 39 knitted vests which she would request be sent to the Northwest Territories, and five quilts for the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for the Handicapped. Mrs. W. R. Jeffs, regent, was appointed to represent the chapter at the semi-annual meeting in September.

Problem On Your Hands?

We use our hands so often, in so many different ways, it is important that they always make a good impression.

That's why PROTEINAIL has made such a name for itself in a very short time. Made originally in Hollywood, for beauticians, it is a pink, high-potency organic protein lotion that helps revitalize soft nails, brittle nails, splitting and peeling nails.

PROTEINAIL massaged under and around the nails twice a day (without removing or damaging nail polish) is guaranteed to show quick results and to give you flexi-hard nails within three weeks. It is an excellent hand cream too and is ideal for softening skin on elbows and feet.

$1.75 a tube (3 weeks' supply) at drug and cosmetic counters everywhere; if you hurry you may still be able to get the special offer of Economy size bottle and purse size tube, regular $3.95 value for only $2.95.

Counsellor Gives Hope To Despairing Debtors

HALIFAX (CP) — Robert Oxner doesn't face the same budget problems as many other Canadians: He faces more serious ones more frequently.

As family debt counsellor for Halifax and Dartmouth, he handles borrowing problems when they become too much for the people who come to him in desperation, he says, many just a step away from mental breakdown.

"Their debts have made them a community problem," Mr. Oxner said in an interview. He blamed lack of education, irresponsibility toward credit, heavy drinking, family strife, loss of employment and divorce as principal causes of unmanageable debt.

Mr. Oxner's job is to work with creditors and arrange sensible budgets, usually through reduced payments.

He recalled one case where a father of six earned $624 take-home pay each month and had acquired $10,000 in consumer debt. Nine creditors were demanding a total of $352 a month, but $205 was the maximum he could pay after family expenses and rent.

Mr. Oxner re-arranged the man's budget, gave him strict orders not to acqure more credit during the payout time, and put him "back on his feet."

'WRITE THEM OFF'

Another man, an alcoholic, earned $80 a week and had bills from 12 finance companies.

"This was one case where the only advice I could give creditors was to write off the debts until my client's circumstances changed," he said.

No new budgeting could have helped.

He said finance companies held 36 per cent of the average total debt; department and retail stores, 35 per cent; collection agencies, 10 per cent; hospital and medical, seven per cent, and banks and credit unions two per cent each. Taxes and living expenses accounted for the remainder.

Mr. Oxner says his service is not an easy way out. A client "must pay his own way out — it will not be easy or quick."

Small Touches Brighten Historical Restoration

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — If you had an income of $1,000 a year and were living in Canada 100 years ago, would you have been apt to own a mahogany four-poster bed?

That is the sort of question that preoccupies people who are in the business of re-creating the last century's lived-in look in an old building or pioneer village.

Dorothy Duncan says it is attention to detail and authenticity that gives value and charm to the working-model museum set up to demonstrate the life of another era. It also is what gives headaches to museum organizers.

COMPROMISES TOUGH

"The most difficult things to find are the little things: the pin cushion, the scarf to hang on a hook, the nightgown to put on the foot of a bed.

"And it is tough in this business to know when to compromise and to know when you are making a dreadful compromise and when just a little one."

Mrs. Duncan is curator of furnishing for the Toronto Historical Board, and has worked at Black Creek Pioneer Village. The board is currently restoring the officers' quarters at Fort York, built about 1800, and Colborne Lodge, a private home built by John Howard about 1836.

FOLLOW PROCEDURE

"Basically you follow the same procedure no matter what restoration you are doing. You begin by making the building tell you everything it can about itself.

"People at the historical board had a suspicion there were things about the fort they didn't know. They started sleuthing, scraping paint and knocking on walls. They found holes and alcoves and fireplaces hidden by later alterations."

Once you know a building's history, you decide what to do about it.

"You must come to a decision about what period in its life you are going to restore it to. Will you make it the day it was built, or the time of a big change? For instance, there was a wing built on Fort York in 1835. No one was going to tear that down, so they restored it to the 1830s.

"So you choose your date, then start a reading program to kind of set the tone in your own mind. What was transportation like? What was on sale in the stores? This man made $1,000 a year and what did that mean—was he wealthy, middle class, a pauper?

"If he was a pauper, he wouldn't have had a mahogany four-poster."

FIND FOUR-POSTERS

Museums start their search for furnishings in their own storehouses, then through a list of known dealers.

The search has its satisfactions. Mrs. Duncan located two four-poster beds for the fort that dealers told her she would never find in Canada.

Not all the questions are answered when restoration and refurnishing are finished. If people are to demonstrate how building and furnishings were used, someone has to find out.

"For instance, at the village we made candles from tallow. In old instructions, no one said the tallow should be from old animals. In pioneer days, no one killed a young animal, and it never occurred to them to write that down.

"Through trial and error you find the methods they must have used.

"Then you must teach the methods to a staff and hope they will take their 19th-century rolls seriously and not introduce modern improvements.

REMOVE FALSE NOTES

"When you close off a museum room and people just look in, you can control the room and remove anachronisms. A staff may introduce them. Someone may bring in his own scissors because they are sharper than the old scissors he's been given to use."

This effort to avoid false notes imposes special job requirements on the staff. They may not smoke in sight of the public. They cannot wear what they please, but must wear what their roles call for. They may not wear personal jewelry, not even modern engagement rings.

"They go through a training program and we give them a list of suggested reading. We find most of them get into their roles. They develop a personal curiosity and do the reading."

Picking No Strawberry Social

By SUSAN RILEY

Way out on backroad farms in the Saanich peninsula they need people willing to do casual labor. Berry picking to be exact.

It's about as casual as pushing a boulder up Mount Baker. And about as tedious.

Early in the morning, around 8 a.m., about 50 of us berry-pickers stood in the bus depot, bright-eyed, wearing clean jeans, carrying brown paper bags and (some of us) wearing hats.

We bounced through west Saanich in a bus and 13 of us jumped off at a crossroads and walked up to our farm.

It's the easiest job I ever landed, I thought, walking along. I mean I landed it easily. A quick call to Manpower and they ask your name, age, sex and whether or not you are still a student.

"You start tomorrow at this farm — be at the bus depot at 8 a.m. It leaves at 8:30 but it will be crowded," said the man.

SEES THE PATCH

Off the bus we walked down a dusty, shady path and suddenly lying in front of us like a boiling hot green sea lay the strawberry patch. I've always wondered why they call it a patch. It was a good acre.

We grouped around the farmer. We were a mixed bag, a motley crew. There were two or three university types, some kids obviously skipping school, a 94-pound Chinese woman and a housewife.

A middle-aged Englishman from Hampstead wearing baggy grey flannels and suspenders said he and his wife pick "on holidays — just for fun."

He used to hunt crocodiles in British New Guinea he told me later as we picked side-by-side.

The farmer cleared his throat and began on-the-job training.

"Don't pick the berries if they have green on them. It's okay if they are a bit white. Don't pick any that are mouldy or that the birds have pecked at."

FILL BASKETS

Handing out carrier boxes he said: "I'll give you 50 cents for every one of these you fill."

Each carrier contained eight little baskets similar to the ones you buy in a store. You had to cover the basket edges — there had to be a heap in your carrier.

Those little baskets are selling from 35 cents to 49 cents in Victoria stores. We got six cents a basket.

Strawberries grow so close to the ground. The only way to get at them is to crouch or lie down. One girl — a Uvic student — tried picking standing up and by noon was jackknifed into a semi-permanent crouch.

The next trick was finding the berries. There were lots of them out there but most were green, hard and small. So we crept along this rocky, dirty path between the rows checking for red. (Some places they put straw down to make the crawling more comfortable?)

PICKED STEADILY

By noon I had picked five baskets. Solid picking without one cigarette break. I had earned $2.50. It took between a half-hour and an hour to fill the carriers. One or two pickers filled six or seven during that time. Most of us — around five.

You can keep picking right through lunch. Most of the Indian boys did. They'd been there since about 7:30 a.m. They are usually the best pickers.

One lady stood up around noon and said in aloud voice: "Oh, that does it. I've done four baskets. My back is killing me. I quit."

Most of us went up to the barn and sat on the cool cement floor covered with tractor grease and ate sandwiches. We only stopped picking about 20 minutes though and no one looked as tired as everyone felt. The Chinese lady said she was picking — "for a little spending money."

In the afternoon we switched to big buckets. We had to pick berries for wine.

We were paid seven cents a pound and each bucket held about 20 pounds. It took at least an hour to fill one.

The squeamish might call conditions primitive. No air-conditioning — the perspiration stuck all over us, no soft-drink stand, just a water cooler and a washroom that wasn't totally functional. But nobody was forcing anybody to pick. We could leave any time. Most of the students did at 3 p.m.

"I'm angry about this. The money is so rotten," said one girl.

"I kind of dig it. I'm coming back tomorrow," said another.

Good pickers can clear $10 a day. Most of us made about $5.

One boy about 14 stayed on to the end. He was skipping school.

"I've got to make money to go to camp," he said. "I figure I'll clear about $10 today."

His mother, who spent most of the day sitting on a wagon weighing berries, kept screaming at him to get to work.

New Squadron For Saanich Well Launched

Chief Commander Howard Rees of the Canadian Power Squadron in Toronto presented the new squadron's warrant, which was accepted by president-elect Nelson Dewey of Sidney.

The squadron was presented with a ship's bell by the Nanaimo Power Squadron, and the Victoria branch presented a check for $240 to assist the new group in training and educational activities.

The squadron's first educational program will be a class in boating and piloting this fall at North Saanich Secondary on Tuesday nights.

The new squadron's officers-elect were sworn in to their new posts: squadron commander, Nelson Dewey; executive officer, Clifford Clive; training officer, Ed McLean; secretary, Bill Glanfield; treasurer, Gordon McClary; first lieutenant, Reese Adamson; cruisemaster, Stan Carnell; safety officer, Wilf Gibson, and supply officer, John Hubbard.

Forest Fire Expense Up 500 Per Cent

Cost of fighting forest fires in B.C. so far this year is $475,000 — more than five times as much as the cost to the same date in 1968.

A weekly fire bulletin issued by the forest service Friday said there were 188 new fires this week, 763 so far this year — an increase of 355 over this date last year.

In the past seven days firefighting has cost the province $200,000. Costs to companies and value of lost timber is not known.

Aircraft including two brought from the U.S. are busy dropping long-term retardents, especially in the Kamloops area where hazards are high to extreme. Hazard is moderate to high in the Vancouver district, which includes this region.

Student Team To Present Sacred Music

A musical group from the Canadian Bible College at Regina will give a program of sacred music and testimony in the Alliance Church, Thursday at 7:45 p.m.

"A panel of the students will discuss opportunities at home, through the college years and after graduation," says Rev. Ted Chapman, pastor.

"The program will acquaint young people with the possibilities of Bible College education, and a question period will follow."

The student team includes Terry Bradley, Luci Downey, Cindy Thiessen, Bruce Rushton and Harvey Dyck. They will be accompanied by Dr. Samuel J. Stoesz, vice-president and dean of the Canadian Bible College.

Silver Threads Program

A class in flower arrangement will be held at Saanich Silver Threads centre, 286 Hampton Road, Tuesday at 2 p.m.

Members will tour the Provincial Museum Wednesday, leaving the centre at 1 p.m.

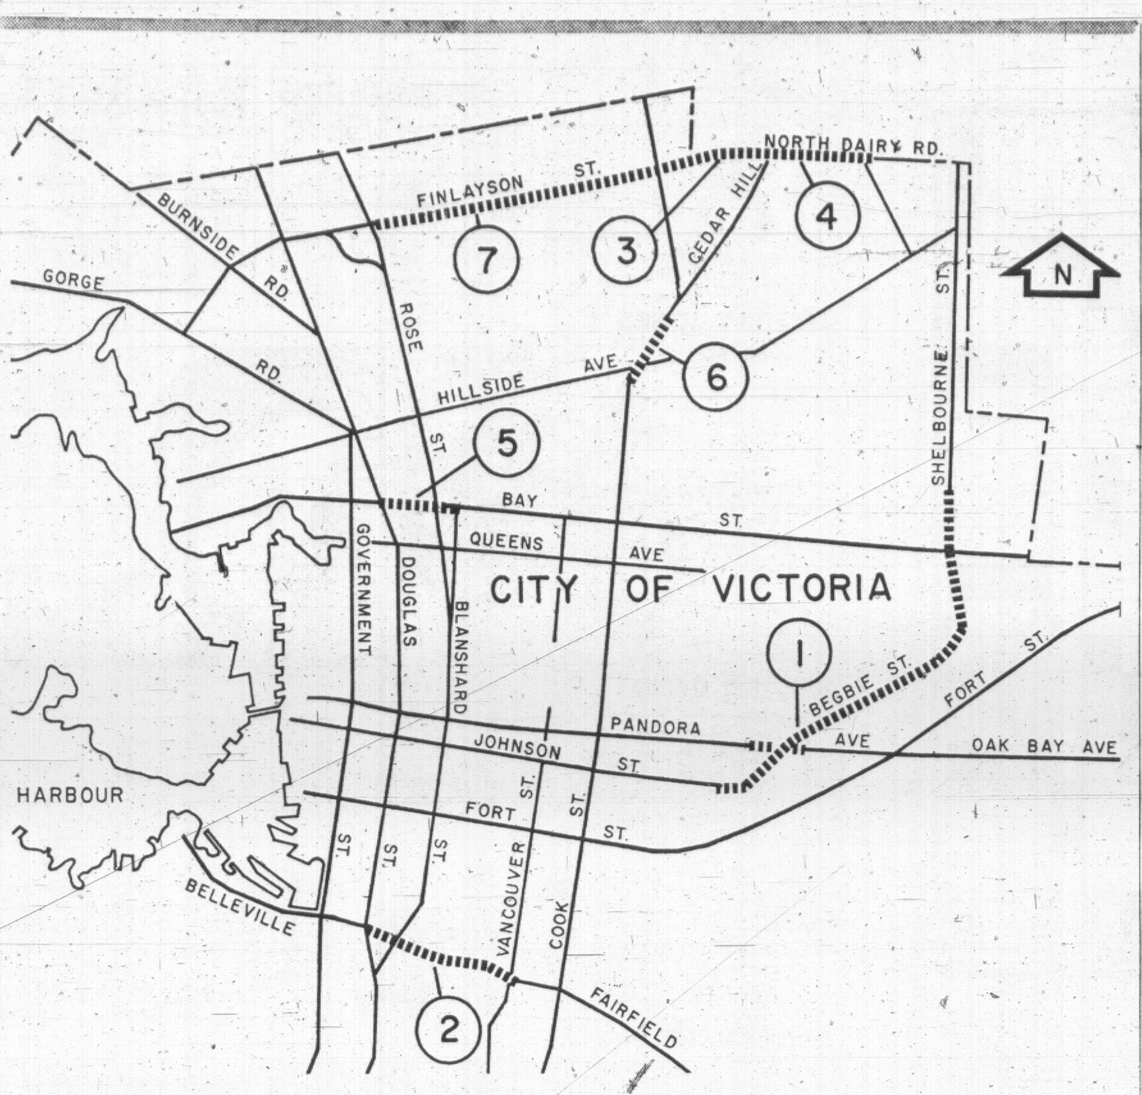
The chess club will meet Thursday at 1:30 p.m.; the stamp club at 2 p.m.

There will be Jacko and cards Friday at 1:30 p.m.

The centre is now open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday.



THIS SPECIAL MAP prepared by city draftsmen shows the order of priority of the work planned for roads under the new five-year capital budget plan. The dotted lines show the road links to be built over the next five years if the budget is approved on June 28. The numbers list the order in which the propects will be carried out. Most important item on the list is Number One, which will hook Johnson into Shelbourne, thus relieving peak-hour traffic pressures on Douglas and Hillside. Total cost of all projects is $2,364,000.

Engineers Prepare 5-Year Plan

By JIM HUME

Victoria city engineers and road experts are already cranking up in anticipation of passage of the five-year plan for progress June 28.

With a 60 per cent "yes" vote that day the way will be cleared for Victoria's most ambitious road construction and widening program costing $2.3 million and involving six projects in seven stages.

Biggest of the projects and first on the priority list is the construction of a road link between Johnson Street and Shelbourne Street via Begbie.

City manager Dennis Young says the new route is essential if the downtown area is to become more accessible.

"Traffic flows are now so heavy during peak periods that we are in danger of choking," Young says. "New arterials must be developed to ease the pressure and facilitate easier and more rapid movement of traffic through the city."

MORE THAN HALF

At the top of the priority list the Shelbourne-Begbie-Johnson connection is expected to cost $1,237,000, more than half the total cost of the road-building program.

It will see Johnson widened and legthened before it swings over to Begbie and eventually angles left to connect with Shelbourne in the vicinity of Bay.

Second on the priority list is the Belleville Street extension — Douglas to Vancouver Street — to provide a by-pass route for James Bay residents and leave more space downtown for shoppers and business.

Cost of the Belleville Street project is estimated at $420,000.

The proposed Finlayson extension — Cook Street, North Dairy Road and Shakespeare — is expected to cost $398,000. The project is regarded as the start on what will eventually be an east-west arterial across the city's northern boundary from the Gorge Road to Shelbourne.

Three items are listed in the five-year capital budget under the "improvement section."

Bay Street widening from Douglas to Blanshard will cost an estimated $84,000. It is regarded as the start of a program which will eventually see Bay widened for its entire length.

Cook Street widening on both sides of the Hillside intersection is expected to cost $67,000 while the widening of Finlayson from Rose to Cook will cost $58,000. Most of the money will be spent on acquiring property for further widening programs.

In addition to the actual road construction and improvement the capital budget also earmarks $100,000 for the improvement of intersections as required.

Young says that while road construction programs can still continue without approval of the capital budget the five-year plan provides a comprehensive master plan to solve the most pressing traffic problems.

"If the people of Victoria acknowledge that we have a problem, a problem we must solve, they will vote for the budget on June 28," he said.

Service Guidelines For Hospitals Set

The volume was welcomed by the chairman of the advisory committee to the regional hospital district here, Dr. A. C. Pickles.

"That's marvellous," he said, "We've been waiting a long time."

Release of the provincial specifications for hospitals for chronic, bed-bound patients, removes one more barrier to an early start on new hospital construction here.

FOR EARLY START

In particular, it should pave the way for an early start on an estimated $2 million extended care annex to Gorge Road Hospital for which funds have already been approved by local and provincial authorities.

The book "Hospitals For Extended Care, A Program and Design Guide" was created by a task force including three nominees of the Architects' Institute of B.C. and three staff members of B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

There is a written description of all facilities to be provided and detailed drawing of ward units, nursing stations, recreational and service areas. Electrical and Mechanical requirements also are specified.

"This guide will enable an architect engaged for a specific project to extract the applicable material rapidly," said Loffmark.

"He will still be required to prepare design and working drawings, with the assistance of consulting engineers, for each particular hospital to be constructed."

Main reason for the publication was to expedite projects, the minister added.

Loggers Rescued

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Four loggers were rescued early Friday after spending 40 hours clinging to a swamped boat and other debris on Williston Lake. Their ordeal ended when the skipper of a passing tugboat saw one of the men wave from a tree jutting out of the lake 90 miles north of here. Treated in hospital for shock and exposure were Dennis Spoklie, 25, his brother Ralph, 23, John Beaudet, 24, and Wayne McVeigh, 35.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Macdonald Against Confederation

By BOB BOWMAN

Bowman

One of the little-known facts of Canadian history is that Sir John A. Macdonald, the great architect of Confederation, voted against it on one occasion.

It was on June 14, 1864, and Macdonald was a member of a special committee of Parliament that had been studying Canada's constitutional problems. There was a resolution that the committee should recommend confederation of all the British North American colonies and it carried. Only four members voted "no" and one of them was Macdonald.

In June, 1864, Macdonald doubted that a federation of the British North American colonies would work unless it were a legislative union, strictly controlled by the federal government.

Quebec, of course would not consider such a plan, and George Etienne Cartier said so.

Macdonald thought that the civil war in the U.S. proved that a strong central government was essential.

However, Macdonald agreed to support Confederation a few days later. His government was defeated in the House on the same day that he voted against Confederation.

George Brown, who had been chairman of the committee on constitutional problems and was strongly in favor of Confederation, told Macdonald that he would join a coalition government led by Macdonald, if he would support Confederation.

There had been three governments in two years and everyone was tired of general elections. In fact it looked as though the Canada of those days would disintegrate unless a stable government could be formed.

So Macdonald accepted Brown's offer and the coalition began working right away to bring about Confederation of all the British North American colonies.

Other events on June 14:

1610—Champlain left Quebec to attack Iroquois on Richelieu River.

1808—First Methodist Church in Montreal was built.

1879—J. J. Hill and associates bought St. Paul and Manitoba Railway.

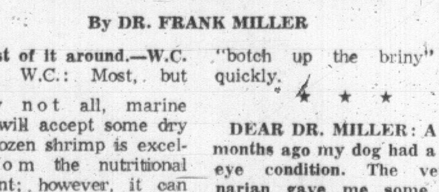
The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: About a canary's temperature; I've been told its 110 degrees. Is that correct? Is a hummingbird's this high? How about other wild birds?—E.K.

DEAR E.K.: Here's one compilation of some average bird temperatures (there are others): Canary is 110, or slightly over; hummingbird, just under 109. Other wild birds include the common crow at 106, house wren at 108, Flicker at 109, Robin at close to 110, and the barn swallow at 110.5 or slightly above.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a small marine tank and am unable to feed live food all the time. Can my fish get by on dry foods part of the time? If so, is shrimp the best? I find most of it around.—W.C.

DEAR W.C.: Most, but certainly not all, marine species will accept some dry food. Frozen shrimp is excellent from the nutritional standpoint; however, it can quickly pollute the water. (And remember, a salt-water tank pollutes much more easily than one with fresh water.) Frozen scallop is slightly less desirable from the nutritional standpoint, but it is safer to feed as it won't "botch up the briny" as quickly.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: A few months ago my dog had a bad eye condition. The veterinarian gave me some eye salve containing an antibiotic and cortisone. If I keep it in the refrigerator, which I am, how long can I safely store it? It worked fast and I kept the rest.—O.C.

DEAR O.C.: You can store it, with complete safety, indefinitely. It's using it again which could get you (or, more accurately, your dog) in trouble. Whether or not the antibiotic contained in the ointment has expired is not the problem.

The point is, you cannot accurately determine whether any new eye condition would respond favorably to the use of this ointment.

The antibiotic could be ineffective. The use of cortisone and related drugs in some eye conditions may be downright dangerous. To try such a product for a few days, even if the ingredients were not specifically contra-indicated, could allow any eye problem to progress from something readily responsive to appropriate medication, to a condition causing permanent blindness. Don't play around with something as precious as your dog's vision. Get professional help if a new problem develops.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: The only problem we have with our pet raccoon is that he goes back to bed after he stuffs himself at breakfast and sleeps most of the day. When we want to play with him he would rather sleep. At night, when we would rather sleep, Jody wants to play. Is there any solution to this problem?—R.R.

DEAR R.R.: Raccoons just naturally have a hankering for nighttime activities—and this accounts for his wanting ponderous portions for breakfast. Naturally he wants to sack out after a full meal. Better give Jody just enough breakfast to encourage his rising. Then keep him relatively ravenous during the day and sock the food to him at suppertime.

ISLAND NEWS

Merry Weekend Starts in Valley

Weekend events at three Cowichan Valley points will offer residents and visitors everything from free breakfast at Lake Cowichan to aquatic events ta Mill Bay and fly-in action at Duncan airport.

Lake Cowichan celebrations began Friday night with a dance and breakfast on the town this morning followed by a parade and introduction of Lady of the Lake contestants.

Logger sports, air force display, kiddies' races and steam locomotive rides were to get under way later today. A "midsummer frolic" and smorgasbord begins at Centennial Hall at 7:30 p.m. followed by a dance.

NOVELTY RACE

Sunday offers novelty water race from the weir to the car bridge, a wheelbarrow race on King George Street, and firemen sports.

Queen contestants are Julia Vanyo, Miss Canadian Legion; Barbara Bondue, Miss BPOE; Paulette Scyrup, Miss Youbou Liohs; Lynn Niebergal, Miss Iwa; Joyce Behnsen, Miss Kinsman; Kathleen Fitzpatrick, Miss Credit Union; Mary Lou Edwards, Miss Co-Op; Susan Olson, Miss Scandinavian Club, and Marlene Denninger, Miss Kiwanis.

Planes from throughout the Pacific northwest are expected to fly in to Duncan airport for the second annual event Sunday. There will be ground displays, aerobatics and parachuting.

Value of permits so far is $1,772,288, compared to last year's total figure of $704,490 for the same period.

Assistant building inspector Warren Reay said he could not accredit the increase to any specific development but he felt the announcement of a new road from Kelsey Bay to Beaver Cove has created new incentive in the area.

TWO MORE RIOTING CHARGES

CAMPBELL RIVER — Police here have arrested two more men as a result of a May 10 disturbance involving motorcyclists.

Charged with rioting and public mischief are Winfred Karl Thomas, 22, and Alister Garth Eland, 21, both of Campbell River. Bail has been set at $2,000.

The riot last month caused $500 damage to the Discovery Inn beer parlor. Eight others, seven adults and one juvenile, were charged the same night.

All of them were held in Oakalla Prison and reappeared in court twice before bail, totalling $17,500 was posted.

They will be tried by a Nanaimo judge.

Controversial Booth Manages to Open

DUNCAN — The tourist information bureau run by the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce opened for business today after a series of false starts and hassles with the city over a shortage of operating funds.

Two students from the University of Victoria have been hired to handle the operation of the booth on the Trands-Canada Highway, Dick McEwan, publicity director, said today.

The bureau, in a building owned by the city, almost didn't open this year after chamber officials said their $3,600 annual budget from membership dues went almost entirely to print a new tourist brochure.

An offer by the junior chamber to take over operation was turned down with thanks. An appeal for $600 more in grants was turned down by Duncan city council but $250 was approved by North Cowichan.

LEVY MADE

A levy was made among members to raise enough to pay the staff until Labor Day closure.

The city gave the bureau $1,475 but took back more than half in taxes, water and light to operate the building. "They'll be lucky if they can get another dollar out of us," Mayor Jim Quaife said.

North Cowichan council reacted differently. Ald. Gerry Smith said the bureau was doing a good job for everyone in the Cowichan Valley.

Pharmacists Rap Gov't On Welfare

NANAIMO (CP) — The Welfare Drug Committee of the British Columbia Professional Pharmacists' Society said Thursday the government's position on prescription service to welfare patients is "totally incomprehensible."

Committee chairman P. H. Bjarnason said in a repoort to the society's annual meeting that his group has attempted to discuss and negotiate the matter with the government but it has refused.

The report said that at the root of the problem is the fact that the government pays other who provide service to welfare recipients on a regular price basis, but the pharmacists are paid at the rate of 42 per cent of the cost of providing prescription services.

The committee recommended the application of the $1 fee surcharge to all welfare prescriptions to partially offset the $1.14 loss being incurred each time a welfare prescription is filled.

The imposition of the $1 fee has been the centre of controversy throughout the province for many weeks.

Since the breakdown in negotiations between the druggists and the provincial government, welfare minister Dan Campbell has called in the federal combines investigation branch. Their investigation has been completed, and any further action on either side in the dispute will not be taken until the report of the federal group is released.

But, in his report, Mr. Bjarnason said "this is a provincial responsibility—a solution on the provincial level is necessary."

Bennett Urged to Get Federal Aid for Island Road

NANAIMO — Premier Bennett has been asked to suggest to Prime Minister Trudeau that the federal government share in the cost of a $40,000,000 highway between Nanaimo and Port Hardy.

Bennett was sent a night letter Thursday after a special meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island.

The chambers asked Bennett to "have the highway westerly from Nanaimo to Port Hardy designated as Trans-Canada No. 1 to establish that construction and reconstruction of the road be refinanced jointly be federal and provincial governments."

The special meeting was called after an announcement of a $73,500,000 open-pit copper mine for Rupert Inlet, 10 miles from Port Hardy.

Utah Construction and Mining Co., of San Francisco, plan to start construction of the mine and plant this summer.

In May, Bennett announced that the road between Kelsey Bay and Beaver Cove would be started by 1970.

The chambers feel that the Trans-Canada highway should extend from Victoria to the north-western tip of Vancouver Island.

Weddings

Gamey—Walker

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on May 17th, 1969, in the chapel of the YM-YWCA when Nancye Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Walker, Tel Aviv, Israel, formerly of Victoria, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Ronald Kenneth Gamey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Gamey, Joseph Street, Victoria. Reverend H. W. Kerley officiated and soloist Mr. A. Storrar was accompanied at the organ by Mrs. H. Bower. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length empire gown of white organza with full sleeves and bodice of ruffled lace. A Juliet bonnet held her floor-length veil and she carried a nosegay of yellow roses and white stephanotis. The bride was attended by Miss Ann Scribner of Cranbrook, B.C., who wore an aqua empire gown accented on the bodice and sleeves by Chantilly lace. Her bouquet of marguerites and carnations carried out the color theme of yellow and white. The flower girl, Miss Sheila Walker, sister of the bride, wore an empire gown of white dotted Swiss accented with an aqua sash and carried a basket of yellow marguerites. Best man was Mr. Brian Whitten and grandfather of the bride, Mr. Archie McKinnon, ushered the guests. The mother of the bride was attired in a coral beige ensemble and coral hat. A corsage of carnations completed the outfit. The mother of the groom chose a dress and matching jacket of aqua brocade. Her corsage of white roses was accented with aqua ribbon. At the reception held in the YM-YWCA lounge, Mr. Reg. Hind proposed the toast to the bride. The happy couple left for a honeymoon in San Francisco, returning early so the groom could receive his Master's degree in Business Administration from UBC. Mr. and Mrs. Gamey will make their new home in Montreal, where the groom has taken up a position with the CPR.

Carlos — Campbell

Christ Church Cathedral was the scene of a double ring ceremony, May 2, 1969, which united in Holy Matrimony, Linda Christine Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Nelson, 1190 Bewdley Avenue, and Mr. Daniel George Carlos, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Carlos, 626 Rothwell Street. Rev. R. A. Hoult officiated. The bride was radiant in a floor length gown of white Chantilly lace with lily point sleeves and full tiered skirt. Her crown shaped headpiece of white flowers and pearls, held a bouffant full length veil of tulle bordered with lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and lily of the valley. Matron of honor, Mrs. Kathleen Matheson, and attendant Miss Lorraine Campbell, were lovely in their full length gowns of pink georgette over taffeta, and carried bouquets of pink carnations. The little flower girl, Miss Joan Nelson was captivating in an identical floor length gown and carried a basket of pink carnations and white daisies. Best man was Mr. John Carlos, and usher was Mr. Neal Middler.

A reception was held at the Carlton Club. The bridal table was centred with a three tier wedding cake, professionally made and decorated by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Audrey Walsh. Mr. Jack Paxton proposed the toast to the bride. After a honeymoon in Banff, the couple will reside in Victoria.

Parfitt — Watson

Archdeacon Hywel J. Jones officiated at a double ring ceremony in St Mary's Anglican Church on May 17, 1969, at 8:00 p.m., when Judith Anne Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Watson, 1225 Styles St., exchanged wedding vows with Ronald Evans Parfitt, son of Dr. and Mrs. David Parfitt, 4140 Gordon Head Rd., Victoria, B. C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown of white satin and lace, with a flowing lace train. Cotton lace petals held her chapel length veil and she carried a cascade of pink roses.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Diane Begy, sister of the bride, and bridesmaids, Miss Diane Gourlay and Miss Susan Parfitt, wore Empire gowns of lilac chiffon over silk and they carried bouquets of pink carnations. The little flower girl, Miss Tracy Cross, wore a similar lilac gown and she carried a basket of pink carnations. She was escorted by Mr. Robbie Watson, ring bearer.

Alpaugh — West

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on June 7th, 1969 at 2 p.m. in St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church, Esquimalt, B.C. when Brenda Anita, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. West of 190 Werra Road, Victoria, became the bride of Lieutenant Gary Grant Alpaugh, CAF, Esquimalt, only son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Alpaugh of Leduc, Alta. Reverend J. A. Roberts officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of heavy silk shantung appliqued with lace daisies. A rose held her three-tiered chapel veil and she carried a colonial bouquet of apricot colored roses and white marguerites with streamers of apricot and lime-green velvet ribbons. Maid of honor Miss Wendy Whitworth wore a floor length gown of white eyelet over lime-green with sash of apricot velvet ribbon. Miss Joan Keziere and Miss Debbie Alpaugh, sister of the groom, wore identical floor length gowns of white eyelet over apricot with sashes of lime-green velvet ribbon. Their heapieces were a band of real yellow marguerites and they carried colonial bouquets of matching yellow marguerites intertwined with lime-green and apricot velvet ribbons. Best man was fellow officer Captain Russell Moore, CAF, Esquimalt. Lieutenant David Harris and Lieutenant James Ferguson ushered. The couple left the church between an honor guard of fellow naval officers.

Hancock — Cardin

Father R. Caldwell officiated at the double-ring ceremony in St. Joseph's Church on May 10, when Rosemary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cardin, exchanged marriage vows with Mr Brian Hancock, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hancock. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a formal gown of white, fashioned with an overdress of point d'alencon lace designed with lily-point sleeves and wedding ring collar. The empire bodice of the gown was slightly en train. Her veil of hand-rolled silk misted from a coronet of crystal and lace and she carried a bouquet of stephanotis and yellow roses.

The attendants wore identical floor-length gowns of peau d'elegance and lace. Miss Jayney French, maid of honor, was in apricot and Miss June Cardin, sister of the bride, and Miss Pauline Morneau wore lime green. They carried bouquets of apricot carnations. Best man was Mr. Ed Hancock, brother of the groom, and ushers were Messrs. Roger Penner and Bernard Morneau.

A reception was held in St. Martin's Church Hall where Mr. Ed Hibbs gave the toast to the bride, and music was supplied for dancing by the Bert Kent trio. After the reception the young couple left for Vancouver where they will be living. For her going-away outfit the bride chose a two-piece suit of coral fortrel with matching petal hat, beige accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Baker — Lewis

Metropolitan United Church, Victoria, was the scene of a double-ring ceremony at 11 a.m. on Saturday, June 7, 1969, when Cherylle Jane, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald C. Lewis, Victoria, became the bride of Mr. Ernest George Baker, only son of Mrs. I. Baker of Toronto, Ont. Reverend A. E. King officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a floor-length gown of imported Swiss sparkling crepe en train, with a rolled collar and bell sleeves, the empire-line skirt and sleeves were appliqued with seed pearls and crystals, a cluster of orange blossoms held a silk illusion chapel veil and she carried a cascade of yellow roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Shelly Lewis, as maid of honor and Miss Susan Hall, friend of the bride, was bridesmaid. They were attired in identical floor-length gowns of turquoise pique highlighted with lattice lace and matching pillbox headdresses and they carried cascades of marguerites. Best man was Mr. Jerry Bassett, and usher was Mr. Randall Lewis of Vancouver.

A reception was held at Holyrood House, Mr. W. W. Butchart gave the toast to the bride. Telegrams of congratulations were received from relatives and friends in Ontario and Alberta. After the reception the young couple left on a motor trip to Banff, Alberta. For her going-away outfit, the bride chose a turquoise wool coat dress with matching hat, white accessories and a corsage of white orchids. The couple will reside in Toronto, Ontario.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. Jack East, Toronto, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. G. Hilland and family, Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Butchart, Mrs. H. Semple and Cathy, Mrs. M. Denning, all of Edmonton; Mrs. Joan Moore, Mr. Patrick Young, Miss Penny Moore, Mr. D. Leyland, all of Vancouver.

White — Lucas

Reverend W. J. Lunny officiated at a quiet double ring ceremony on Saturday, June 7, 1969, at 6 p.m., in St. John's Anglican Church, Colwood, when Donna Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman L. Lucas, 2480 Millstream Road, Victoria, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Thomas Phillip White, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. White, 3271 Happy Valley Road, Victoria. Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a white imported wool suit with matching accessories and a corsage of double pink orchids. Miss Shari Lucas, as her sister's bridesmaid, wore a pink suit with white accessories and a corsage of white roses and carnations. Mr. Neil Montgomery was groomsman. Following the ceremony a wedding supper was held at Oak Bay Beach Hotel for the immediate families and close friends. Mr. James W. Whiteley, the bride's grandfather, proposed the toast to the young couple. The new Mr. and Mrs. White will reside in the Victoria area.

Hook — Evans

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Reverend A. G. MacLeod at St. Aidan's United Church on May 17, 1969, at 6 p.m. when Patricia Gale, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Denby Evans exchanged vows with Mr. Thomas Robert Hook, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hook, all of Victoria. Soloist Mrs. Sturgeon sang the Lord's Prayer preceding the ceremony and the Wedding March during the signing of the register.

The radiant bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie. The lily-point sleeves, yoke and standup neckline were of delicate floral lace. Cascading cathedral-length train was fashioned of same lace. Her bouffant scalloped chapel veil, touched with tiny seed pearls, was held in place by white roses, and she carried a bouquet of red roses, white stephanotis and ivy.

The bride was attended by Miss Lynne Gavel, Calgary, as maid of honor, Miss Margaret Bennie, cousin of the bride, Saskatoon, and Miss Lori Chesson, Victoria, were bridesmaids. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Debbie Curran, niece of the groom. All were gowned alike in mauve peau d'elegance floor-length gowns with matching headdresses. All carried bouquets of yellow carations.

Mr. Thomas Baxter of Victoria was best man and Mr. Ken Parrett and Mr. Dick Evans, brother of the bride, attended as ushers.

Mr. Vincent Dunne gave the toast to the bride at a reception held at King Arthur's Round Table.

For a honeymoon trip to California and Nevada, the new Mrs. Hook wore a raspberry Italian-knit ensemble with matching hat and a gardenia corsage. The couple will reside in Victoria.

Proudfoot — Martin

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Martin, 14 Perth Street, Camp Hill, Brisbane, Australia, wish to announce the marriage of their daughter, Barbara Jean Martin, to Mr. David Oldcorn Proudfoot, son of Captain and Mrs. A. J. Proudfoot, 536 Mount View Avenue, Victoria, B.C.

Coorparoo Presbyterian Church, Brisbane, was tastefully decorated with yellow gladioli for the occasion on Wednesday, June 4, 1969, at 6:15 p.m. Reverend R. T. Joughin officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a white pagoda silk long gown with a re-embroidered French lace jacket and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Jan Martin, who chose a pale green pagoda silk long gown with Guipure lace and carried a bouquet of lemon carnations. Mr. R. J. Proudfoot went by air to Brisbane to attend his brother as best man.

At the reception held at the Fairview Lounge, Mr. Lou Murray proposed the toast to the bride, his niece. The tiered wedding cake was topped with two bells, roses adorned the corners of each tier.

For her going-away costume the new Mrs. Proudfoot chose a cream and pale grey crimpelene suit with dark brown accessories. The couple will reside at Cairns, North Queensland.

For the members of the bridegroom's family that were unable to attend, a tape recording and movie film were made of the service and reception.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Association

North's jump to four spades was one of those scatter-gun bids. He had no idea about his partner's ability to make that contract but he felt sure that if South couldn't bring four spades home, then the hand would belong to East and West.

It turned out that the best East and West could do would be to make three diamonds so that it was up to South to make his four spades.

The contract turned out to be what is described in expert circles as a laydown. In other words, an expert would make the contract every time provided West holds the trump ace. What is laydown to an expert may not be that easy to the average player. So, let's follow the entire play.

Opening lead—♦ K

Dummy's ace of diamonds wins the first trick. South ruffs a diamond at trick two and leads a trump toward dummy. West goes right up with the ace and leads a trump back. He is not going to break any suits for South.

South cashes the ace, king and queen of hearts, discarding a club from dummy on the queen. His next play is the nine of hearts and when West puts on the jack, South is ready with a loser-on-loser play to insure his contract. He simply discards another club.

West is on lead once more. Another diamond play will allow a third club discard from dummy and a ruff by declarer so the best West can do is to play his ace of clubs. This is the last trick for the defense since the king of clubs is now good and the last three tricks go to dummy's trumps.

CORK'S POP WINS SUIT

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — A state supreme court jury has ruled that a bottle manufacturer is liable for damages to a man who was hit in the eye by a champagne cork.

The jury deliberated for three hours Friday before finding Marlboro Industries Ltd. guilty of breach of warranty. A second trial will be held in September to determine the amount of damages.

The suit was filed by James Cosgrove, who said the plastic cork popped off and hit him in the eye May 9, 1964, when he loosened the wire holding it.

Duplex Problem Up Monday

Saanich council will have to decide Monday night whether seven proposed duplexes will be allowed to be built or be caught in an extension of a building permit freeze.

All seven duplexes are outside the area being considered for non-duplex zoning so the indication is that they will be approved. Three earlier duplexes which fell into the same category were approved June 2.

Council has rescinded a move to eliminate duplexes from all residential zoning in the municipality but a 30-day holdup on building permits for duplexes remains in effect. This holdup can be extended by a further 60 days after council has considered the individual duplex applications.

Lands and planning committee will consider the possible extension of the existing single-family houses only zoning to a larger area in Gordon Head, where some residents have objected to duplexes as an intrusion into single-family house districts.

At present, 87 per cent of the residential zoning in Saanich permits duplexes as well as single-family houses. The remaining 13 per cent is restricted to single-family houses only—Ten Mile Point, Cadboro Bay, Queenswood, Broadmead, parts of Cordova Bay Ridge and Cedarglen-Shelbourne.

Queen Saves Day

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Queen of Esquimalt, the first elongated ship in the B.C. Ferries fleet, saved the day for part of the 150 cars waiting to get from Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay at 6 p.m. on Friday. "Any other ship in our fleet and 40 of those cars would have been disappointed," said a B.C. Ferries spokesman. "But with the new super Queen, there was no trouble at all."

Satellite Launch Set for 1971

By HENRY HEALD

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's communications satellite goes into orbit from a launch pad somewhere in the United States late in 1971, Communications Minister Eric Kierans told the Commons Friday.

He made the announcement moments after the Commons gave third reading to a bill setting up a joint private-public corporation—Telesat Canada—to operate the satellite communications system.

Details of launching the six-channel transmitter, which will orbit near the equator at a speed which will keep it stationary relative to earth, are subject to further negotiations on financial and technical details.

Negotiations are under way with RCA Victor Ltd. of Canada for construction of the satellite. A formal contract will be signed if agreement is reached on price, quality and performance. RCA built Canada's Alouette II and ISIS-1 research satellites.

Northern Electric Ltd. will build the satellite's transponder, the mechanism that receives the signals and returns them to earth.

DEFEAT NDP ATTEMPT

Commons approval of the bill, which still needs Senate approval and royal assent, came after the government, the Conservatives and Creditistes combined to defeat a final NDP attempt to expand the percentage of government ownership in the corporation.

The bill calls for roughly equal ownership shared by the government, private industry and individual investors. Mr. Kierans said it may work out to 30-30 for the government and industry with 40 per cent of the shares being sold to private investors.

Failing that, they moved an amendment Friday calling for majority control to rest with the public sector.

The amendment was defeated 90 to 11. Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 154, Conservative 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 14, Independent 1, vacant 1.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) accused Mr. Kierans of selling out to private corporations. He sought assurance that the 11 private communications companies involved would not "gang up and take contro ."

SETS UP FUND

The bill sets up a $50,000,000 fund for financing the projectm Mr. Kierans estimated the project would cost about $65,000,000 including about $30,000,000 for the manufacture of the satellite itself.

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) challenged the figure. He predicted it would come closer to $200,000,000.

He said the minister had not allowed for additional construction costs in the North, nor had the figures included the $43,000,000 the CBC would have to pay for a receiving station, $250,000 each for an unspecified number of echo suppressors and $3,000,000 for equipment to eliminate interference from military radar stations.

The Commons agreed to sit for two extra hours Friday as the start of a move towards longer hours to clean up outstanding legislation before breaking for a summer holiday June 27.

But nearly an hour of the extra time Friday was spent listening to the division bells ringing, calling the MPs to vote on a joint NDP—Conservative amendment to the housing act. The amendment would have forestalled a government move to take the ceiling off National Housing Act mortgages.

MUSTER ENOUGH MPs

Attendance in the House is light on Fridays. After 48 minutes of bell-ringing the Liberals mustered enough MPs to defeat the move 51 to 36, with 17 Conservatives, 13 New Democrats and six Creditistes supporting the motion.

The bill amending the National Housing Act removes the ceiling on interest rates—since 1965 fixed at two percentage points above the interest rate on certain government bonds. It is presently 9⅜ per cent.

It also extends to 40 years from 35 the maximum life of a loan, extends NHA loan provisions to condominiums and hostels and boosts the maximum amount of insured loans to $15,000,000,000 from $11,000,000,000.

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton) said at 9⅜ per cent interest a $24,000 home cost $84,000 over 30 years.

He said interest rates should not exceed three per cent and houses for workers should be built for about $10,000. The bill, he said, would not help people needing homes. It just helped the financiers.

Debate on the measure continues when the House sits at 2 p.m. EDT Monday. Extended hours are planned for the remainder of that week to try and push through the remainder of the government's legislative program.

Legal Study To Be Made By Trustee

Dennis R. Sheppard, a public trustee for the provincial health department's mental health branch in Vancouver, is being transferred to the attorney-general's department in Victoria, it was announced Thursday.

Admitted to the bar in 1952, Sheppard as public trustee was responsible for the legal affairs of 4,500 mentally incapable persons and studied development of legal affairs for the health department.

He will undertake studies of provincial legal policies, procedures and licensing methods, said Attorney-General Leslie Peterson in making the announcement.

Sheppard has been a member of the Vancouver Retarded Children's Association advisory committee and is a church organist and choir director.

Hidden Tax Proposals Irk Bennett

Proposals for the provinces to enter the field of indirect taxation would lead to "a tax jungle," Premier Bennett said Friday.

Returning from the federal-provincial conference, he said the result of provinces having some share of the right to levy indirect taxes would be "chaos of taxation, a jungle, with each level of government trying to raid the field.

"We don't see the advantages of indirect taxation. It is a pyramiding tax and governments don't get it all. Governments get only half the additional price. The other half would go to profits."

When a reporter asked if British Columbia is rejecting the suggested tax change, he replied that B.C. is rejecting nothing at this stage.

"B.C. is not taking its bat home," he said. "We were down there just full of goodwill and we have come away full of goodwill."

Bennett said no final decisions were reached at the conference and all proposals are being given equal study by committees. The committees would report to another federal-provincial gathering, probably in December.

"There will have to be many, many more meetings before anything is finalized," he said.

EXCLUSIVE USE

The premier has maintained the provinces should have exclusive use of the direct tax fields of personal and corporate income and estate taxes except to the extent necessary to finance a basic annual income.

The federal government, at present, has power to levy any form of tax. The provinces are confined to direct taxes.

The main effect, in practice, is that provinces have to charge their sales tax at the retail level, where it is visible and politically unpopular. Ottawa levies its sales tax indirectly, at the manufacturer's level, where it is largely invisible.

The federal government now has offered in principle to admit the provinces to the indirect tax field so that both levels of government are equal in access to tax resources. Provinces, other than B.C., have voiced pleasure at this.

Bennett was unable to claim any support for his proposal for a guaranteed income for all Canadians.

But, he told a press conference, he is not downhearted and that other provinces and Ottawa will eventually swing behind the idea as they have on other suggestions.

PIERRE'S OTHER SIDE REVEALED BY WESTELL

In a private display of temperament at the height of the campaign, the prime minister attempted to override the schedule he was to be following — a move the few men who were witness to it felt could have jeopardized the entire election.

Soviet Borders Said Negotiable

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today offered to negotiate border adjustments with China in the next few months.

The offer was contained in a note rejecting specific Chineese claims to Soviet territory. It comes during a period of growing animosity between the two countries concerning their mutual border.

The lengthy note, containing a historical review of Russia-Chinese border agreements, was delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow Friday. It was published today by the Soviet Communist party newspaper and distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass.

The Soviet Union proposed the two countries meet in Moscow "within the next two to three months."

The note is the latest step in an exchange that began March 29 with a Soviet proposal for border talks.

Earlier that month the long smouldering Soviet-Chinese conflict broke out in an open fight along the Ussuri River.

In a hurry to stop further outbreaks, the Soviet Union originally proposed that negotiations start April 15. However, China waited until May 24 to reply that it was willing to hold talks.

SCENE OF INCIDENTS

The 4,500-mile Chinese border has been the scene of thousands of incidents and conflicts in recent years. Most of them went unnoticed until two bloody clashes on the Far Eastern Ussuri River border last March 2 and again on March 14-15.

Economist In Lead

VANCOUVER (CP) — Economist John de Wolf took a first-ballot lead today in the three-way race for the leadership of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative party.

De Wolf, 38, had 122 votes to 111 for lawyer Charles Maclean, 36. Public relations man Don Paterson, 35, finished with 24 votes and was dropped for the second ballot.

Voting on the second round started immediately.

Few Strike Threats

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Contracts between Pacific Maritime Association and six unions expire at midnight Sunday, but only a few strike threats have been heard along the west coast waterfront. Negotiations on the east coast are regarded as the key to the situation in Washington, Oregon and California harbors.

Fishing Union Asks Pay Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union Friday offered to resume negotiations for a new contract after a strike vote among workers in the fresh fish and cold storage section of the British Columbia fishing industry indicated 81 per cent were in favor of a walkout.

The vote was 746 to 170 for a strike. There are just over 1,000 workers in the section.

The vote was called after the union rejected an offer by the employers of a two-year contract with a 56 per cent hourly raise for tradesmen, who now average $3.44 an hour, 28 to 34 cents for male general laborers, who now get $2.39 to $3.06, and 16 cents for female workers now receiving $1.97 to $2.34.

The union wants $1 an hour for tradesmen and 75 cents for general laborers in a one-year pact.

Meanwhile, the first bargaining session since the oil workers' strike started May 21 has been tentatively set for 2 p.m. Monday at a secret location.

SHELL MEETS UNION

The meeting will be between representatives of Shell and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union.

Larry Korchinski, manager of Shell's suburban Burnaby refinery, sent a telegram to the union Friday saying the Monday date proposed by the union is suitable.

GUNDERSON
. . . 'possibly'

Gunderson Vague On Trust Affiliation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Einar Gunderson, former British Columbia finance minister, was called Friday to add to testimony with which the Crown hopes to secure the extradition of A. G. Duncan Crux, former president of Commonwealth Trust.

Mr. Gunderson took the stand on the fifth day of an ex-parte hearing in magistrate's court and testified concerning his membership on an advisory board serving two mutual funds within the Commonwealth group.

Other members of the advisory board were named as the late John Villiers Fisher, former deputy finance minister of B.C., and the late professor Lesley Wong of the University of B.C.'s department of economics.

The court is taking evidence which will be relayed to Nassau in the Bahamas where Crux is at present awaiting an extradition hearing in connection with 24 theft and fraud charges involving about $1,000,000.

Mr. Gunderson's evidence related to a charge against Crux that between Jan. 1, 1962 and July 31, 1968 he defrauded shareholders of two Commonwealth mutual funds by drawing on their assets to pay certain advisory board fees.

"Apparently I was on the advisory board," Mr. Gunderson told the court.

Mr. Gunderson said he had never met as a member of the advisory board although "there could have been a meeting at the beginning."

Asked whether he performed any services for the two funds in an advisory capacity, Mr. Gunderson said: "At the beginning I may have had a call but there were no services rendered."

Asked whether he had ever received any remuneration as an advisory board member, Mr. Gunderson said: "I wasn't aware of it but I remember there was a payment of $500 which came to me in 1964 and which I turned over to the firm."

He didn't elaborate.

By SUSAN RILEY

Looking like a six-layered wedding cake the luxury liner Princess Italia arrived at Ogden Point this morning.

She was filled to the funnel with 350 American tourists who got the full hard-sell treatment from costumed clowns, folk singers and dignitaries on the dock. (See also Page 23).

Passengers with cameras dangling like permanent fixtures peered over deck rails or peeked out the dining room windows to watch a button-bedecked Cockney band sing "I've Got a Lovely Bunch of Coconuts."

Those in danger of sleeping through the 8 a.m. show were roused by the boom of the Esquimalt Thunderbird Girls' Drum Corps.

When the half-hour ceremony ended the 200 Victorians who had gathered to see the outside of the monstrous ship drifted back to breakfast or bed but the six-storey floating hotel suddenly came alive.

●

Still-sleepy tourists finished breakfast in the red-carpeted linen-service restaurant which seats 275.

Some lingered in one of the ship's four lounges or in a large coffee shop on the top deck. Others sat in deck chairs — they really have deck chairs on luxury liners — around the mosaic-tiled swimming pool.

The nightclub, dimly-lit even during the day, was empty. So was the movie theatre which seats about 150 and is on the lower deck.

Western Discontent 'Growing'

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Western alienation is a term which is bandied about in political circles with increasing frequency and bitterness.

At least one federal cabinet minister believes that popular interpretations of the term sidestep the basic and deep-rooted economic causes of the region's discontent which he is setting out to document with factual research.

Winnipeg's James Richardson, now minister of supply and services in the Trudeau cabinet, although not an alarmist, suggests that the West cannot wait indefinitely before the scope for acceptable solutions becomes more narrow and inflexible.

"Eventually there must be a laying down of conditions under which the West can remain in Confederation," Mr. Richardson said.

He anticipates this would involve a greater control of tariff policies and corporate structure and "we must have an examination of the expenditures by the federal government within its own institutional structure."

Mr. Richardson urges the realization that the four western provinces would be able to prosper on their own.

"The West's survival as a separate entity is unquestionable," he said. "Its income would be the same and it would be able to buy what it needs at world prices rather than protected Canadian prices."

He is currently assembling detailed figures on the location and expenditures of Canada's large corporations and will follow up with a similar examination of government departments.

RICHARDSON

So far his discoveries are depressing in a Western context.

ONE IN WEST

Starting with 20 Canadian corporations with the largest sales and assets Mr. Richardson has found only one head office in Western Canada. This is MacMillan Bloedel in Vancouver.

The other 19 are located in Ontario and Quebec, mainly Toronto and Montreal.

A large head office makes a substantial outlay for auditors, lawyers, architects, engineers, management consultants and public relations firms, he pointed out.

In turn, all of these professional services require their

FLASHBACK: Wilfullness Almost Cost Election

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Westell

Flashback one year, to the climatic closing stages of the general election campaign — and the day when Pierre Elliott Trudeau almost blew away the victory within his grasp.

This is a footnote to history about a decision that changed the course of national events — one of those might-have-been situations which are fascinating speculation and still important for the light they throw on the actors.

The story goes back to this weekend a year ago, to find Trudeau exhausted by weeks on the campaign trail, wilfully refusing to continue with the demanding election schedule, and driven on to victory only by a violent argument in a parked car at 3 a.m. as his RCMP guard hovered nervously nearby, wondering whether to intervene.

The few people who were personally involved in the crisis are still reluctant to talk for publication.

The several Liberal insiders who know parts of the story and have heard gossip about the rest are uncertain about details, after a year, or have allowed memory to color and dramatize some of the incidents.

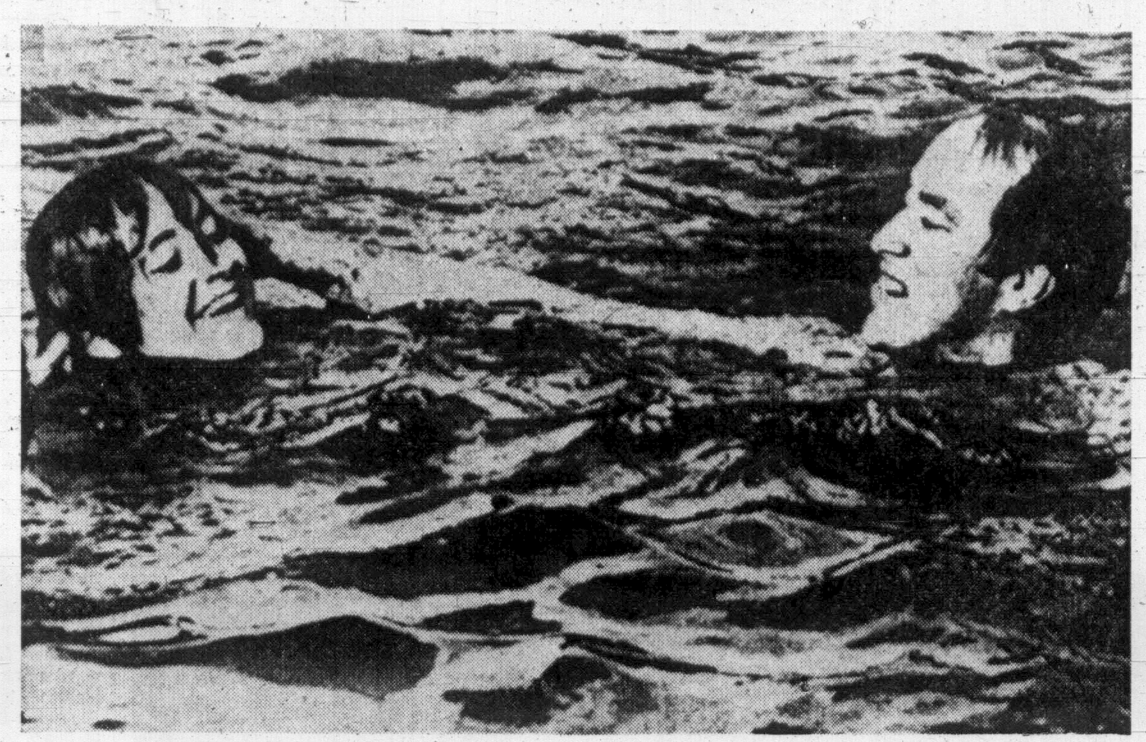
Enormous Effort

But the outline of events and of critical decisions are clear and beyond dispute.

To set the stage for the reconstruction of the story, it is necessary to go back 12 months and to remember that Trudeau's campaign was moving out of the phase of relaxed, neighborhood meetings into a series of mass rallies.

The Liberal strategists had carefully planned the campaign to peak in the 10 days before voting on June 25.

Trudeau's style on the hustings appeared relaxed, hands-in-the-pockets and folksy, but in fact he was putting enormous personal effort into every puclic appearance.



TRUDEAU WENT SWIMMING and later in the weekend indulged in a bit of personal, private temperamentality which if it had not been overcome by his campaign workers could have cost him crucial votes and even the election, according to columnist Anthony Westell. (CP Photo).

As a relatively inexperienced politician, he lacked the training and the stamina to campaign 14 hours a day, seven days a week. He needed periods of retreat into privacy to recharge his batteries.

Trudeau also recognized his personal limitations, and he was being absolutely honest — although few people thought so at the time — when he said that it was not the end of the world to him to win the election and that he wasn't going to kill himself with effort in trying to prove he was more energetic and enthusiastic then he really was.

Arranged Swim

As the campaign wore on, Trudeau had become increasingly irritated by the local liberal organizers who kept sneaking extra events into his schedule. The tireder he became, the more he vented his temper on his personal staff, demanding that they ease the load on his stamina.

The job of finding a compromise between the prime minister's personal limits and the political requirements fell mainly on Bill Lee, who travelled with Trudeau as his chief of staff, and senator John Nichol, campaign chairman back at Liberal HQ in Ottawa.

By Friday, June 14, Trudeau was exhausted and his temper was running ragged, as he campaigned through Oakville and Burlington, Ont., heading for a monster rally that night at Hamilton.

To try to ease his tensions, Lee arranged for a liberal worker in Oakville to buy a pair of swimming trunks for the PM, so that Trudeau could relax in the hotel pool at noon—and the enormous spread of publicity that resulted from his display of diving was only an incidental benefit.

After the swim, Trudeau lunched with Lee and another member of his personal staff, Jim Davey, a physicist and market researcher who is now one of his policy thinkers and programmers.

The campaign schedule called for Trudeau to make the long flight from Ottawa to the west coast on Sunday June 16, and then to work back east, building to a crescendo in Toronto, Winnipeg and Montreal before election day.

Now Trudeau announced flatly to Lee and Davey that he would not fly to Vancouver on the Sunday. He inisted that he must have time to rest and recuperate, and that he would spend Sunday at his official summer home on Harrington Lake, in the Gatineau hills outside Ottawa.

Trudeau Adamant

Davey conveyed the PM's decision to Nichol in Ottawa, who was appalled at the prospect of disrupting the schedule, losing momentum and gravely offending British Columbia, where the liberals were counting heavily on picking up seats.

Nichol phoned Lee to remonstrate, but merely had the decision confirmed. When he demanded to speak to Trudeau personally, he could not get through until a bright spark at Liberal HQ thought of asking the RCMP to arrange a hook-up over their security communications networks.

According to some accounts, in fact, Trudeau by that time had hardened his heart to the point of telling people in his entourage that he wasn't going west at all the following week, and would rest in Ottawa until he could pick up his schedule again in Toronto on Wednesday, June 19.

He was particularly angry at the Liberal organizers in Winnipeg whom he blamed for slipping extra events into his schedule on a previous visit, and he insisted that he was not going back for the Red River parade, where 150,000 people were expected.

But the immediate problem was the visit to the west coast, and Nichol made a top secret phone call to the British Columbia campaign chairman, Vancouver lawyer George Van Roggen, alerting him to the emergency that Trudeau might not fly west as planned.

Met Plane

The Liberal comapaign caught fire that Friday night in Hamilton, when 16,000 people turned out to see Trudeau. The following night, Saturday, Trudeau had another enthusiastic mass rally in Quebec City.

When is DC-9 jetliner brought him back into Ottawa about midnight that Saturday, Nichol was at the airport with his small private car.

He drove the prime minister to his official home at 24 Sussex Drive, arguing his case that Trudeau should put his own comfort and convenience to one side and honor his obligation to the thousands of Liberal workers supporting him by sticking to the schdeule.

Trudeau again angrily refused, standing on his rights as prime minister, insisting that the part and the country had to take him or leave him as he was — a man who needs periods of privacy and relaxation and who cannot go for days on end with the minimum of sleep and maximum of public exposure.

He apparently told Nichol, as he has told others since, that if he could not be at his best in meeting the people, he owed it to them and to himself to cancel the engagement.

His best offer was to take the Sunday off and to fly west on the Monday.

Strong Words

He put the case in the strongest terms that the Liberal strategy was keyed to winning seats in British Columbia, and to using the west coast as the base for a final drive back toward the east.

Both Trudeau and Nichol, according to some accounts, were using increasingly rough language, and Nichol is said to have sworn at the prime minister in his exasperation. But whatever the compulsion, Trudeau suddenly surrendered at about 3 a.m. and agreed to stick to the campaign schedule.

He summoned reserves of strength and flew to Vancouver on Sunday to be mobbed by about 10,000 people in Chinatown that night.

The headline in the normally conservative Vancouver Province next morning: City Goes Wild Over Trudeau. And he was off and running into the final, frenetic week of the campaign.

Airport Jammed

He helicoptered that morning into Burnaby-Seymour for a rally that defeated NDP Leader T. C. Douglas in the riding, went on to Fort Langley in the Fraser Valley to make the finest of his non-partisan campaign addresses, and dropped down by helicopter that night into an adoring crowd of 10,000 on a hillside in Victoria.

When his campaign jet took him into Calgary at 11 p.m., thousands of people were jamming the airport, swinging to the beat of go-go music and gyrating in the spotlights just off the tarmac.

That Monday, June 17, was Trudeau's most successful day on the campaign trail, and was the launching pad for the triumphant tour across the country, to talk to 40,000 people in front of the city hall, to the Winnipeg parade and into Montreal for the St. Jean Baptiste parade.

And that West Coast Monday was the day Trudeau wanted to cancel.

Had he had his way, he would certainly not have gained as many seats as he did in British Columbia, and his hesitation in the last stages of the campaign might well have confirmed many Canadians in their nagging doubt that Trudeau was a dilettante and not really serious about politics.

Some insiders insist that Nichol had his resignation as campaign chairman written out at one point in the crisis, and that its presentation late in the campaign would have been disastrous to public confidence in Trudeau and the Liberals. While the resignation story seems to be an exaggeration, who knows what might have happened at that 3 a.m. meeting in a closed car?

Trudeau-Bertrand Rapport Outstanding

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand are having a political laud-in unmatched since the 1962 days when Dalton Camp was praising then prime minister John Diefenbaker.

Outside of their tiff over location of the new Montreal airport, the prime minister and Quebec premier have been getting along famously.

As a result, relations between Ottawa and Quebec are more relaxed than at any time in years.

Informants said Friday Mr. Trudeau naturally does not plan to go as far as publicly endorsing Mr. Bertrand as Union Nationale leader in his competition with Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

But, they add, Mr. Trudeau will avoid any action which might possibly hurt Mr. Bertrand's chances of maintaining the premiership.

PRAISES ATTITUDE

Mr. Bertrand during the federal-provincial constitutional conference this week talked about the dandy new attitude of the federal government. It was much more flexible, he said.

Mr. Trudeau has said that federalism has been getting a better shake in Quebec lately, implying that this is thanks to Mr. Bertrand.

One of the peculiar features of this situation is that the federal Liberals are getting along better at the moment with the Union Nationale than with the provincial Liberals in Quebec.

Federal Liberal sources say the main reasons for this is that Mr. Trudeau and his associates are not absolutely sure of the federalist position of Quebec Leader Jean Lesage.

But they do seem sure, they add, that Mr. Bertrand is a convinced federalist working for Canada as well as for his own province.

IN AN UPROAR

Less than a year ago, relations between Ottawa and Quebec were in an uproar, mostly because of Quebec's insistence that it could not be represented by Ottawa at international education conferences. Education comes under provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Bertrand worked out a temporary compromise which has taken the heart out of the dispute.

Ottawa and Quebec have also argued about the federal two-per-cent social development tax and medical care insurance—but similar arguments have raged between Ottawa and other provinces.

If there must be fights between Ottawa and Quebec, Mr. Trudeau would like them to concern the same things as the capital and other provinces fight about.

To this extent at least, Quebec would be a province like the others.

Little Box To Analyse Red Planet

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Are there quakes on Mars?

A small black box that could tell what caused the craters on Mars—and even what that mysterious red planet is made of—is being designed at the California Institute of Technology.

The box, one of several experiments proposed for the Viking spacecraft to be launched in 1973, is a miniaturized seismometer much like those used to monitor earthquakes.

Dr. Don L. Anderson, director of Caltech's seismological laboratory and leader of a team designing the one-pound instrument, says it should survive and work even if something goes wrong and the spacecraft crashes into Mars.

Plans call for the 6,000-pound Viking to go into orbit around Mars and drop a smaller craft to land softly on the planet. The landing vehicle, patterned after the Surveyors which soft-landed on the moon, also will carry television cameras, soil samplers and other experiments.

BARMAID WINS MEDAL

Mrs. Marler, who has quenched the thirst of British peers for many years, is retiring soon.

An MBE went to James Smith, a sheep farmer in Scalloway, Shetland, for inventing a gutting machine for small fish.

There Is No Conflict In a Graveyard

By REV. L. KINSOLVING

The "Presbyterian church in the San Francisco Bay area became nearly schizophrenic under the duress of the battle over Saul Alinsky," writes Rev. Robert Lee, professor of social ethics at the Presbyterian seminary in San Anselmo.

Kinsolving

"The church was severely split and the division has not yet healed," contends Lee, collaborating with Russell Galloway and William Eichorn, in a book commissioned by the Board of Christian Education of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Entitled "The Schizophrenic Church", the book is already engendering a storm of controversy within the 3.2 million-member denomination.

The authors provide detailed, objective and quite devastating scrutiny of the ill-fated attempt by ardent liberals to have Alinsky paid $200,000 in Presbyterian funds to organize ghetto residents in the Bay area.

They list all details of the bitter infighting that had Presbyterian leaders shouting and threatening each other, before the Alinsky proposal was set aside. They also provide similarly detailed accounts of how the controversy raged in five local churches.

The names of these local Presbyterian churches are disguised in the book — apparently in order to avoid spending time answering possible libel suits, or threats thereof. But this also stimulates the interesting game of trying to identify just who, for instance, is "Dr. Comfort of Pleasant Ridge Church."

Out of this sharply intricate history of a bitter ecclesiastical row, the authors reach several conclusions which should be of vital concern to all religious denominations:

- "The tension that church members feel today is an indication of the nature of Christianity, not a sign of disease ... conflict is an unavoidable fact of church life, one that can be ignored only at grave peril ... the days ahead will see more conflict."
- "The fact of conflict is an extremely simple inference from the doctrine of original sin. This much-maligned doctrine may be taken at the very least to mean that man is almost unavoidably self-centred ... Indeed the only place where there is an absence of conflict is the graveyard."
- "One of the reasons that the church has been able to avoid conflict is that its principal commodity is the grace of God — which by definition is available to everyone. The bestowal of grace on one person does not diminish the supply available to others. As the church moves into the political and social arena however, it begins to deal with scarce commodities and it comes face to face with conflict."

The authors plead for the development of adequate tools for what they define as "conflict management". They suggest among other things:

- Recognition that "conflict clears the air". "Groups should encourage the immediate and direct expressions of antagonisms and provide channels for such expressions."
- "Conflict can even bind together antagonists" since "psychiatry has told us that love and hatred are closely bound together. By getting in touch with their own resentments and expressing them, the (church) members are also able to get in touch with dimensions of love that make their former 'good nature and loving-kindness' seem superficial indeed."
- "Probably the most significant method of conflict management is the 'institutionalization', or the provision of a permanent forum in which complaints and controversies can be aired as they arise." But the authors note that most Presbytery meetings "have traditionally been concerned with administrative matters and have provided limited practice in dealing with conflict. (So, for that matter, have many denominational journals, which are often "joy-journals" dedicated to avoiding any bad news—and thus escaping from reality.)

But the 32-year-old Englishman, probably the only chemist in Canada who doubles as an Anglican priest, does not find a contradiction in his dual role.

For him the traditional division between sicience and religion does not exist—in fact, he says his study of chemistry leads him to a better understanding of God.

Sitting in his Elliott Building office discussing religion and science, Dr. Moss came across more as a spiritual man than as a scientist. He's engaged in some pretty sophisticated research, but his mild manner is that of a man of the church.

TEST-TUBE LIFE

He's optimistic about some of the far-reaching developments in organic chemistry, such as creation of life in a test-tube.

"A lot of people are afraid of these things because they think they will make man less human, but this may be a good thing because it shows there is concern for man's human characteristics."

He said the division of science and religion is fairly recent. At one time religion, morals, science and aesthetics were all one discipline.

"Today we tend to fragment our knowledge more and more. God has been found an unnecessary hypothesis in one after another field of study and experience, until he has been relegated to the study of religion, and even here we are told that God is dead.

"The great majority of people can see the benefits of science and technology because they have and are experiencing them in almost every phase of their life."

IMAGE OF GOD

But he said they fail to see the benefits and inherent importance of the Christian life.

"Most people think scientists know what they're doing. But they don't — they're always changing their minds: During the last 30 or 40 years scientists have begun to recognize the importance of uncertainty.

"If I believe that I was made in the image of God—in that I have the same qualities, such as a capacity for love, passion, creativity—then I can get to know more about God by investigating chemistry."

Because science itself is a religious activity he argues that scientists are part of the company of God's messengers.

FLEXIBLE ATTITUDE

"One of the things my colleagues in the humanities don't appreciate is that research is creative. Creating a new molecule can be a very moving experience."

He said the church on the other hand, tends to cling to the past because many good Christians can't face the implications of new knowledge.

"A flexible attitude is necessary to face these new discoveries. Frequently they lead us to new possibilities of understanding the nature of God's universe."

Dr. Moss studied chemistry at Imperial College, University of London. He said the college, which has only science students, has a strong humanistic outlook, for it was formerly attended by Aldous Huxley and H. G. Wells.

He brought his family to Canada in 1962 and taught four years at McMaster University, Hamilton.

It was following his arrival in Victoria three years ago that he expressed the wish to become a clergyman in the Anglican Church.

He was made deacon in June, 1966, and was ordained as a priest last Nov. 1.

Crusade to Open

Rev. Abraham Kudra and his wife, a musical and preaching team, known as The Musical Kudras, will conduct a Canada for Christ crusade at North Douglas Pentecostal Tabernacle Sunday to June 29.

Baptist Meet Scheduled

The 42nd convention of the Regular Baptist Churches of British Columbia will be held in Central Baptist Church here Tuesday to Thursday.

Chief speakers will be Rev. C. St. Clair Robinson, minister of Elliott Heights Baptist Church, Hamilton, Ont.; Dr. John Watt, general secretary of the Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches of Canada; and Norman Barton, Vancouver, president of the Regular Baptist Churches for the current year.

Business sessions will be held each day and a final public meeting will take place each evening at 7:30. Music and vocal items will be given by choirs and singers of Central Baptist.

Arthur Mayse

Late this summer, 20-year-old Faye Luxemburg will set out from Victoria to test the dream she has cherished for much of her life. Her destination is Kibbutz Dovrat on the old border of Jordan, in the Republic of Israel.

In a sense, her journey is a pilgrimage. But Faye, who lives at 351 Arnot Avenue with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Luxemberg, will not be going as a tourist.

She has signed up for a two-year stay, during which she will spend half of each day studying the Hebrew language, religion and history. She'll work for the other half on any job to which she is assigned. A graduate of Esqumalt High School, she hopes that experience gained from her office job with Pacific Logging Company will help her to an eventual post with Israel's reforestation department.

Other candidates for the disciplined life of the collective farm villages will be on the plane that takes off from Montreal on Sept. 1. Some who go may find the life too hard, and return as soon as they can.

Fay expects to remain beyond her two years.

The dream began for her when she was a child at a summer camp on Gabriola Island. The camp is operated like a kibbutz, with the older helping the younger and all duties shared. It is sponsored by the local "Ken" (club) of a Jewish world organization called Habonim, or in English, "The Builders."

Last summer, Faye spent her weekends helping at the camp as an unpaid volunteer. She will work full-time this summer as a counsellor for the children of 10 to 15 who attend. This to get her "into the spirit of communal living."

Why should a girl born and schooled in Canada choose to make so drastic a change in her life?

"For somebody who is Jewish and a Zionist," she explains, "I suppose it's a Zionist goal. I want to see the country of my forefathers, and to serve there. And it's a great adventure."

I suggested that Israel could be involved in further wars. Wasn't she afraid of that?

She gave a fatalist's answer. "Whatever is going to come will come."

Will she return to Canada in some future year? Yes, though not necessarily to Victoria.

Faye's parents are proud of her, and they are going to miss her. Said Rita Luxemburg, her mother: "I'd like to go myself, if I were younger."

But it's her daughter who will go to that other homeland of the Jewish spirit, paying her way with money she has saved, as others have done before her.

One was a young reporter who came over from Vancouver for a weekend in Victoria. He had meant to sleep in his car, but he wound up under our shingles. Israel was his frontier, and he spoke of going there, but so casually that we doubted he ever would. Not until after the six-day war did we learn that he had found his Promised Land.

Mother Cecilia Mary and her Good Shepherd Animal Shelter have made the headlines many times. However, it remained for Edward D. Ward-Harris of the paper that shares our presses to gather her amazing career into a book.

At a price of $1.25, it has already sold well over 2,000 copies, and repeat orders are coming in to William Collins and Sons of Canada Ltd., at Toronto.

Ward-Harris introduces the reader to Mother Cecilia as a child in Victorian England. He tells the story of her convent years. Then he carries on through her defiance of a Vatican command to a present, that finds her still busy among her animals at the age of 80.

The story of this stubborn, intrepid friend and defender of animals is a natural for a motion picture, although Hollywood might well flinch from portraying its climactic struggle with Roman Catholic authority.

That's it, except for a Happy Father's Day to us dads, the salt of the earth and sometimes the pepper!

Captain Giuseppe Comes Back But This Time With a Liner

The skipper of the Princess passed through Victoria last year to study the feasibility of setting up a tourist cruise between San Francisco and Alaska for his employer, Princess Cruises.

"They wanted me to scout around to see if it would be a worthwhile venture.

"Everything went smoothly, there were no surprises."

Born in Trieste, Italy, he went to sea at 19, after graduating from the Nautical High School. He got his master's licence in 1936 and his first command during the war.

Since the war he has been associated with passenger liners, and has commanded them for the last 12 years.

When the Italia was built in 1967 he sailed her for 1½ years between Los Angeles and Mexico.

"Of course, it's not as easy to get a command on one of these ships as it is for a freighter — there's more prestige in this."

Capt. de Luyk is married, and has two sons, a daughter and four grandchildren in Trieste.

"I hope I can get my vacation in September. Otherwise I won't be able to get home to see my family until next year."

Hospital Stays Empty As Haggling Goes On

It has been that way since February. It probably will stay that way for the next six months.

The hospital is the Eric Martin Institute for the treatment of mental illness, located alongside Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The hangup is: who will run it, the province or Jubilee? Nothing has been settled so far.

Opening date for the $6 million 170-bed Institute was set for mid-summer.

STAFF AWAITED

The Institute has been sitting empty except for offices of the mental health centre formerly on Fort Street—awaiting furnishings, beds and staff for four months.

But most of all, a decision is needed settling who will be in charge of the Institute.

The Institute was built by the province and it was announced by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark that Royal Jubilee was expected to assume operation.

Negotiations to that end were opened but soon hit a snag. The Institute required $135,000 in operating capital to carry it until the first receipt of operating funds from B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Eventually, the Greater Victoria and Gulf Islands Hospital District said it would provide the money.

FINAL STAGES

Now negotiations are said to be in their final stages but there remains the question of completing furnishing and acquiring a minimum staff of 400 persons.

Efforts to learn how great an impasse this situation represents brought small comment from provincial government sources.

The usual comment was "You will have to go to Dr. A. C. Pickles at Royal Jubilee for information."

Dr. Pickles, executive director of the hospital, said in turn: "At the present time and until an agreement has been signed with the province, Royal Jubilee Hospital has no authority of any kind."

RAPID TRANSFER

Dr. Pickles said that as soon as an agreement is signed there could be a rapid transfer of Royal Jubilee's Bay Pavilion—a 40-bed psychiatric unit—to one floor of the new building.

But this would not increase the facilities now available to

Meanwhile, it was also recalled that since the new hospital's completion, the interior has been altered to locate electric shock treatment rooms closer to the wards.

Thursday, Health Minister Loffmark said he was launching a recruitment drive to find 76 staffers for mainland mental institutions. There was no mention of requirements here—but if Royal Jubilee assumes the administration, this would be a local problem.

Mills Rapped For Chip Scum On Beaches

REYNOLDS

By ED GOULD

A scum of wood chips and sawdust which is contaminating Salt Spring Island beaches is the result of "sloppy handling" of chip barges by pulp mills, says Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

Kiernan made a tour of Salt Spring Island this week and viewed a huge mass of wood chips, sawdust and dirt which had drifted into Vesuvius Bay, making swimming there impossible.

KIERNAN
. . . "sloppy handling"

"The chips are everwhere," he said. "They are ruining beaches and, if permitted to continue, will destroy all sea life in this area."

Kiernan said mills could be required to handle materials with greater care.

MUST BE ACCIDENT

"As far as contamination of the water by chips and sawdust that is just sloppy handling," he said.

Crofton manager George Slater said today that no one has contacted him concerning the contamination of beaches.

"I agree that chips in the water are the result of sloppy handling," he said. "When it happens we get after the people responsible."

"But if chips are going into the water it must be accidental," he added.

Slater said the only way chips can be transported to mills on the Island is by barge and some chips may spill from these barges.

Another mill spokesman said a chip barge had struck a rock earlier this week and tipped a quantity of chips into Stuart Channel, but Slater said he didn't know of this.

This incident is believed responsible for the sudden increase in contamination this week.

"The scows that go by the island are not all coming to Crofton," Slater said. "In heavy seas these scows could definitely spill some chips."

STAYS FOR DAYS

"The water is no longer clean and the beaches are filthy."

Reynolds said the floating scum stays for days, moving in and out with the tide.

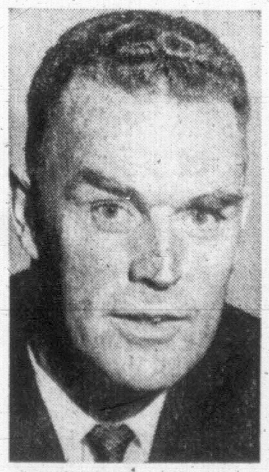
"It's difficult to assess the effect on sea life but I know there are places where you used to catch cod and now you don't."

Slater explained that the chips used in making paper are brought by barge from Victoria to a dock at Crofton and unloaded onto a conveyer belt. "In the process some chips get in the water but we watch this very carefully," he said.

"We're willing to talk to anyone with a complaint about pollution," Slater said. "But these people haven't even contacted us."

A 30-foot band of wood chips and sawdust spread over beaches at Crofton and Maple Bay Friday but had cleared this morning.

Salt Spring residents report that beaches on the west side of the island have been coated by the material which moves from area to area.



AWARDED the Knights of Columbus Silver Sword for exemplifying good citizenship was Police Chief Jack Gregory at banquet here Friday night. Chief since 1963, he has been "directly responsible for the peace of mind of the citizens of Victoria," said former alderman Michael Griffin as he presented the annual award.

Is She A Martyr Or Not?

Newspaper publisher Philip Bickle today refused to make a martyr of a woman employee who demonstrated Friday against a Vietnam war movie at the Campbell River theatre he owns.

Morgan MacGregor who was, or is, the women's editor of Bickle's weekly newspaper The Upper Islander, insists she has been fired.

"As far as I'm concerned she's still working for me. If she wants to quit she should give two weeks' notice."

Mrs. MacGregor said she was told by Bickle she would be fired if she joined a Voice of Women demonstration at the Van Isle theatre showing The Green Berets.'

"I took part in the demonstration so I consider myself fired," she said today.

"We had some discussion about that," said Bickle when asked if he had presented Mrs. MacGregor with the ultimatum. "But she's still in my employ."

Mrs. MacGregor said she realized she could not legally be fired for taking part in the demonstration.

"But I can't go back to work after what has occurred," she said. "He has made it plain that I have alienated myself from the newspaper by my action."

The protest of 18 members of the Voice of Women and high school students paraded in front of the theatre with signs and passed out pamphlets. They plan to demonstrate again tonight.

Juveniles Suspected In School Break-In

About $10 was taken from a desk drawer in the principal's office at about 4 a.m. Entry to the building was made by smashing a window.

Police said three windows were broken and there was some damage to the desk.

EXPROPRIATION PUT OFF

'We'll Leave the Lady Sitting'

By STEVE HUME

Victoria city hall will not pressure a 91-year-old widow holding out for higher stakes for her aging house in the middle of the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme, officils said today.

Catherine S. Telfer, 2648 Rose Street, has filed legal notice she will not accept the city's offer of $10,000 for the home expropriated a year ago.

She is demanding $50,000 for the 30-by-90 foot lot and the frame dwelling she has lived in since 1921.

Earlier this year, city hall ran into trouble when William Coburn, then at 2640 Blanshard in the same urban renewal project area, refused to vacate an expropriated house and rejected cash offers and relocation proposals.

SHOW OF GUNS

Coburn, under pressure from the city, finally settled for $12,500, with more coming up for arbitration under the courts, but not before barricading his house and waving away city officials, with a show of guns.

He said in an interview this morning he estimated legal fees have already eaten away 20 per cent of the $12,500 he was awarded.

But city officals do not foresee a similar situation developing over the Telfer property.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said the property comes under the second phase of the urban renewal scheme and will not be required for several years.

He said if Mrs. Telfer is adamant in her refusal to surrender the house and property the city will likely allow her to remain and develop the area around her.

"I certainly don't want to push people out of their homes if they don't want to leave unless it is essential," he said.

"My inclination is to say fine, we'll leave the lady sitting there and carry on with the project around her."

Willian Hooson, assistant to the city manager, also said he anticipates no problem.

"I'm fully sympathetic to the fact that Mrs. Telfer has been living in that house for a long, long time. There's no urgent need for her to move for a couple of years, and we have no intention of intimidating an elderly person," he said.

Victoria lawyer Herbert Matthews, who represented Coburn against the city earlier, also represents Mrs. Telfer.

VALUABLE PROPERTY

He said earlier the city was not intending to expropriate the land for building new houses.

"The city wants this to sell as part of a motel site, and as such it is valuable property," he said.

Hooson said the area is earmarked for commercial development through private enterprise, but he said no final decisions on specific construction sites have been made.

"So far the whole scheme is to upgrade the area into some kind of general commercial area through private development, but we just haven't made any real decisions yet."

He said that if Mrs. Telfer was still adamant about moving when development started, the project would simply mushroom around her property.

GIVEN ALTERNATIVE

The city has offered alternative housing arrangements for Mrs. Telfer should she decide to accept offers, Hooson said.

He said she has an option to move into housing units of the Rose-Blanshard development when they are completed.

"There is no coercion involved, but when the housing development opens they will have first call on it and prior right to housing in the new site."

Mrs. Telfer's 61-year-old daughter Janet, who lives with her mother, told The Times they did not want to move into the housing development. She said alternative houses proposed by the city are not comparable in comfort, convenience and actual worth to the house on Rose Street.

Q. Is there a class or group which one may attend for the study of practice of Yoga? — M. E.

A There are several such courses available. The adult education section of the Greater Victoria School Board holds classes, both during its Summer Happening program, July 11 to Aug. 2, and its fall-winter program. The department will have an advertisement on the summer program in the June 21 edition of the Times. Further information may be obtained by phoning the adult education department at 592-1211, local 258. The YM-YWCA also holds courses but for women only. The next session begins Sept. 29. Further information may be obtained by phoning 'Y' officials at 386-7511. The International Mediation Society, Victoria Centre, also studies and practises Yoga. The president is Hugh Hunt, 2937 Tudor Road, 477-5756.

Theft Staggers Beer Shop Staff

Provincial liquor store employees in Esquimalt aren't talking today about how two young men made off with 20 cases of free beer Friday.

The men walked into the store about 6 p.m. and ordered 20 cases of beer which they loaded into a car.

Employees at the store at 1310 Esquimalt told police there was "some confusion." When things settled down the men and the beer were gone. The beer was not paid for.

Today a spokesman for the liquor store would only say "we're hoping they come back today" when asked how the theft occurred.
